Amet's Ozo-Carbi Light.

Manufactured under patent No 393,737. Other U. S. and Foreign patents pending.

WHAT IS IT?

The "Ozo-Carbi" Light is the exhibitor's best friend—a light that will revolutionize the exhibition business—a new and wonderful discovery, and a rival of electricity.

It gives more light and costs less money than the best calcium (oxy-hydrogen or lime) light. No saturator or vaporizer, no gasoline or ether, no trouble or danger. It is always ready and can be used with any calcium jet or burner.

HOW IS IT MADE?

This wonderful light is made by burning carbide or acetylene gas with a compound (or modified form of oxygen) called gas "ozo." The gases are used in the same jet as oxygen and hydrogen are used in making the regular calcium or lime light.

Two tanks are used, one for the carbide and one for the "ozo" gas.

Ever since carbide or acetylene gas became a commercial article, many attempts have been made to utilize it for calcium light; but previous to Mr. Amet's discovery, all efforts to accomplish this have proved fruitless.

The burning of oxygen and hydrogen gas through a jet, has for many years, and until the present discovery, no improvement on the original method has been made.

Calcium light is an incandescent light and the intensity of the light depends upon the degree of heat to which the lime can be heated. The hotter the lime, the brighter the light. Acetylene or carbide gas has a greater number of heat units and produces a brighter heat than any other known single gas. Oxygen and acetylene cannot be burned together in a calcium jet; but the "ozo" gas and carbide gas burn in a calcium jet the same as hydrogen and oxygen.

The new mixed gases being so much richer and possessing so many more heat units than the oxy-hydrogen gas that less is consumed and a much brighter light is obtained.

THE "OZO" GAS AND CHEMICALS.

This gas is made by heating the mixed chemicals in a retort, and as the gas is made it passes through an "electro galvanic modifier." The chemicals used will not explode, burn or decrease in value by handling and shipping. In appearance they are dark red coarse powder, and upon application of heat gradually liberate the several different gases. The "ozo" gas is colorless, has but little odor, is not combustible and is no more dangerous to use than compressed air.

The method of making the gas is similar to the one generally used in making oxygen, but is simpler, inasmuch as no wash bottle is required. In half an hour sufficient gas (of both kinds) can be made for several hours' use.

BETTER THAN ELECTRIC LIGHT.

For general use on the road, the "ozo-carbi" light is far superior to electric light. The best electric light for stereopticon is obtained from direct current of 110 voltage, but unfortunately for the exhibitor, this current is seldom found. We do not claim this light to be stronger than an arc light that can be obtained from a direct current of this voltage; but we do claim the light to be superior to that obtained from low voltage alternating currents, such as are usually met with on the road.

An arc light from an alternating current is very noisy and unsteady and requires much time and attention to keep it burning.

The "ozo carbi" light is perfectly noiseless and steady and requires very little time or attention to keep a bright, steady light.

If you depend on electricity you will frequently be obliged to hire an electrician and occasionally will be charged an exorbitant price for the current used. Figuratively speaking, with the "ozo carbi" light, you furnish your own electricity and are your own electrician. With this new light you will succeed where others fail.

A GOOD LIGHT MEANS SUCCESS.

A good light to the exhibitor means success and a poor light means failure. Moving pictures require a much stronger light than a stereopticon slide. The latter is made of glass and remains stationary, while the former is made of celluloid and moves rapidly before the light. A picture should be sharp and distinct, and unless a bright, strong light is used, a moving picture will be dim.

The public are quick to appreciate a good picture and are as quick to condemn a poor picture. A bright, steady light means a good picture—a pleased audience—a full house and a fat purse,

The purchase of an "ozo carbi" light will be the most profitable investment you ever made.

No heat is required to make the carbide gas and by its own expansion it is stored in the tank. The "Duplex" generator is a combined generator and wash bottle. The process is very simple and in a few minutes sufficient gas for several entertainments can be made.

"OZO-CARBI" LIGHT IN USE.

This cut shows the "ozo-carbi" gas outfit as it appears when connected with a stereopticon.

A is stem of tank valve that is operated by a cylinder wrench furnished with the outfit. B is a regulating valve that is operated by hand and is to be removed when the tank is packed for shipping. Each tank is provided with a gauge as well as a regulating valve. The gauges indicate at all times the amount of gas in each tank, and the regulating valves give the operator perfect control of the gas and insure an even, steady flow to the burner.

IS IT DANGEROUS?

There is no more danger in using a tank of carbide gas and a tank of "ozo" gas, than there is in using a tank of hydrogen and oxygen.

Some people have an idea that the use of carbide gas is dangerous. On this question we refer you to the Scientific American, Acetylene Journal, or any other work of authority. They will all tell you there is no more danger in using carbide gas than there is in ordinary house or illuminating gas, and some even claim, for general use, there is less danger. The generator is so constructed and the amount of carbide is so small that, practically, there is no danger whatever in making the gas. As a safeguard against danger from an accident while making gas, a safety valve is provided. It is very seldom an excessive pressure is obtained or an accident occurs; but in case of an emergency the safety valve will relieve the excessive pressure and no harm will be done. The generator for making the carbide gas and the retort for making the "ozo" gas are both provided with a safety valve.

WEIGHT AND SHIPPING CASE

The outfit when ready for shipping consists of one tank and one shipping case. The shipping case contains the carbide tank, carbide generator, the "ozo" gas making outfit and two cans for chemicals and carbide.

Total weight of complete outfit is about 175 pounds, and can be checked as baggage. With each outfit is sent complete printed instructions, which will be found very simple.

Price, Outfit complete for both gases,	$75 00
Chemicals for "ozo" gases, per lb.,	15
Carbide for acetylene gas, 10 lb. can,	1 50
" " " 100 " " "	6 00

It is always advisable to have some chemicals shipped with the outfit.

For every hour's use it will require about $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. carbide for the acetylene gas and 1 lb. chemicals for the "ozo" gas. The price of chemicals for making the "ozo" gas is so low that no discount is made for larger quantity. The carbide for making the acetylene gas can be purchased in almost any city or town.

GUARANTEE.

This light is something entirely new and we guarantee it to be just as represented—superior to anything on the market—more simple to operate, brighter and stronger—more safe to use than any gas making tank outfit ever made. We will forfeit $100 to anyone who can prove that this is not the safest portable calcium tank outfit on the market. We will also forfeit $100 to anyone who can explode one of these outfits when directions are followed. The most enthusiastic advocate of the "ozo-carbi" light will be the exhibitor who has had experience with calcium and electric light. It is such a relief after using an unreliable, dim, or "wheezy" light, that a trial of the "ozo-carbi" light will always gain for it a most enthusiastic friend and advocate.

To introduce this light to the exhibitor, we will take your outfit in exchange as part payment on a new one.

MAKING THE "OZO" GAS.

The above cut shows the outfit connected with the retort when making the "ozo" gas. M is hood for covering retort to retain heat when using furnace or heater K. C is the galvanic modifier through which the gas passes before entering tank A. G is safety valve that in case of emergency prevents any possibility of an explosion.

The tank is made of rolled steel and is galvanized inside and outside after the tank is made. This "fills up" and "coats over" all the joints, crevices and rivet heads. It insures the tank against leakage and prevents action of gas or water from eating or rusting the iron.

Galvanizing a tank inside after it is made, is something new and greatly increases the life and value of the tank.

The tank weighs about 53 pounds and will hold sufficient gas for three or four hours. All brass fittings, valves and connections are polished and nickel-plated.

The "ozo" gas is very easily made. The mixed chemicals are placed in retort H, heat is applied, and as the "ozo" gas is liberated it passes through the galvanic modifier C and is stored in the tank.

FURNACE OR HEATER K is not included in outfit.

Any other method may be used to heat the retort; but if the furnace is used, much better results will be obtained by covering the retort with a hood to confine the heat.

Price of furnace, with hood,

$5.00 extra

MAKING THE CARBIDE GAS.

This cut shows the outfit as connected when making the carbide or acetylene gas. The carbide generator is also provided with a safety valve, that render the manufacture of the gas perfectly safe.

The carbide or acetylene tank is not so heavy as the tank used for the "ozo" gas, and an apartment for it is provided in the shipping case. It is made of copper and thin rolled steel. The main part of the tank is painted, the copper part is polished, and lacquered and all brass fittings, valves and connections are polished and nickel plated. The tank is light and strong, weighing about 22 pounds, and holds sufficient gas for three or four hours.

STEREOPTICON & FILM EXCHANGE.

Will it Pay?

x x x

THIS is the question that naturally rises when one anticipates embarking in a new enterprise. Ten years ago it was prophesied that the stereopticon, as an entertainer, would be less used in the future than it was at that time. This, however, was a mistake, for the demand has been increasing ever since and today it is used more for entertainments than ever before. When you add a moving picture machine to the stereopticon, you double its value.

No other class of entertainment has so large a field in which to work, and no other can be operated at so small an expense. There are public halls, schools, churches, fairs, lodges, and an endless number of different societies where exhibitions can be given.

Another profitable channel is street advertising. Live business men are always ready to patronize any attractive method of advertising, for which they are willing to pay a good price. Advertising slides for this work can be made with a kodak by any amateur, or the local photographer will make them at small expense. They should be interspersed with comic slides of local scenes, portraits of prominent people, or still better with moving pictures.

Churches and societies are usually glad of an opportunity to raise money for their own financial assistance, and for a share of the receipts will sell the tickets and distribute the advertising posters.

It is not necessary to prepare your own lecture or to be a public speaker. Printed lectures on almost all subjects can be obtained, which are to be read as the slides are thrown on the screen. In all our lectures, each paragraph has a number to correspond with the slide, so no mistake or delay can be made. Many of the most successful exhibitors have never spoken in public before.

Some give the entire entertainment alone. This can be done by memorizing the lecture and describing each slide as it is thrown on the screen.

For one with limited capital, the small towns offer a good field. These people have few opportunities to see an entertainment; they are easily pleased and are liberal patrons of anything in this line.

About fifty views with printed lecture is usually sufficient for an entertainment. A few comic slides, however, will please the juvenile part of the audience and add "spice" to the exhibition.

Moving pictures are still in their infancy, and as improvements are made will grow in favor with the public. The fact of being able to bring to our very door all the important events of the world in actual life and motion, is sufficient proof that this class of entertainment will never grow old.

The late Edison Concert Phonograph or the Graphophone Grand, as shown in another part of this catalogue, will be found a valuable addition to an entertainment. With a combined stereopticon and moving picture machine and one of these Grand Concert talking machines, you can reproduce, at your command, all that is beautiful to the eye and all that is pleasing to the ear.

In every locality there is an opening for a man with small capital, and if you will only let it be known that you are prepared to give this kind of an entertainment, you will have little difficulty in procuring engagements.

The labor is light, the employment pleasant; expenses are small and the profits large when well advertised.

There are a few who have gone into this business and made a failure. This can usually be traced to an inferior machine and a class of views of no interest to the public, or to the exhibitor himself, who lacks sufficient tact and energy to manage the business and who no doubt has made a failure of everything he has undertaken. "A business neglected, is a business failure." For a steady, industrious man there is a good living and a good profit.

We have had twenty years' experience as exhibitors and manufacturers, and are always ready to give any suggestions or information to those who anticipate purchasing an outfit. Our dark room is provided with all kinds of lights used for projection work, and is especially adapted for instruction and practice. Personal instructions are not necessary. By following the printed directions, anyone of ordinary intelligence can learn to operate the apparatus. Still, where convenient to do so, it would be time well spent to call on us, select your outfit, and receive personal instructions and practice under a competent operator.

Should you anticipate a visit to our city, we would be pleased to have your mail sent in our care and have you make our place your headquarters.

Law and Table for Objective Lenses.

It should be remembered that with all lenses the size of picture will increase or decrease according to the distance from the lens to the screen. Name and law governing size of picture of lenses, having different focal length, is as follows:

A "one-fourth" size projecting lens will give picture or disk, in diameter, one-half the distance from the machine to the curtain; a "one-third" lens, two-fifths; a "one-half" lens, one-third less 10 per cent; a "two-thirds" lens, one-fourth; and a "four-four" lens, one-fifth the distance.

The following table will illustrate the above rules:

SIZES OF LENSES.	10 ft.	20 ft.	30 ft.	40 ft.	50 ft.	60 ft.	70 ft.	80 ft.	90 ft.	100 ft.	110 ft.	120 ft.
Wide Angle.....	6 $\frac{1}{2}$	13 $\frac{1}{2}$	20
$\frac{1}{4}$	5	10	15	20		24
$\frac{1}{3}$	4	8	12	16	20	24
$\frac{1}{2}$		6	9	12	15	18	21	24
$\frac{2}{3}$			7 $\frac{1}{2}$	10	12 $\frac{1}{2}$	15	17 $\frac{1}{2}$	20	22 $\frac{1}{2}$	25
$\frac{3}{4}$				6	8	10	12	14	16	18	20	23
$\frac{4}{5}$												27

By unscrewing and removing the back lens from the tube, a smaller picture can be made, and as the focal distance is lengthened the lens, (to focus the picture), must be moved farther from the light. Although this detracts a little from the sharpness of the picture, still, in case of an emergency, it will be found a great convenience.

Setting Up and Operating the Stereopticon.

Care should be taken to have a good firm rest for the instrument, as the least shaking or movement of the lens is greatly magnified on the screen.

To obtain the best results, the lantern should be elevated as nearly on a level with the center of the screen as possible. When this is not convenient, tilt the lantern sufficiently so the light will be thrown on center of the curtain. (If the instrument is tilted a good deal it would be well to tilt the screen to correspond.)

Place the lantern at proper distance from the screen to obtain the desired size picture, (the greater the distance from the screen the larger the picture.) Care should be taken to have the lenses clean, and if necessary to remove the glasses, be careful to replace them in the same order you found them. Examine the tubes and blow pipe (light jet) and see that they are free from all obstruction.

Place the lime pencils in the holders so that in turning they will keep at same distance from the tip of the burner. When in proper position the lime should be about one-eighth of an inch from tip. If the lime is too close, the light will make a great deal of noise, and if too far away, will not be so bright. With the rubber tubes connect the blow pipe, or jet, of one lantern to one side of the dissolving key, and the other lantern to the other side of dissolving key. The remaining two nipples should be connected with the gas tanks, care being used to connect the hydrogen with nipple marked H, and the oxygen with nipple marked O.

Move the lever of dissolving key around half as far as it will turn, then slowly open the hydrogen valve at the tank and light at both tips. Now turn the lever of dissolving key from one side to the other and see that the set screws (in the dissolving key) are so adjusted that only a small flame is left burning in the lantern that is turned off. Leave the lever at one side and slowly open the oxygen valve at the tank until a brilliant white light is obtained. Adjust the amount of hydrogen and oxygen to obtain the best light with the least noise. Always keep the hydrogen a little in excess of the oxygen, which can be seen by the yellow fringe or flame around the light. In turning off the light be sure to turn off the oxygen first. In dissolving views the light from both lanterns should be thrown on the screen in the same place. The top lantern is provided with regulating screws, by which it can be adjusted so the two disks will occupy the same position on the screen.

Should the light "pop" out when using the dissolver, more hydrogen should be turned on, or a little less oxygen.

Dissolving key should occasionally be taken apart, cleaned and oiled. Care should be taken to wipe all the oil out of the grooves, and see that the openings in the nipples are free.

Process of Dissolving.

A dissolving apparatus consists of two lanterns of same design so arranged that a view from each lantern can be alternately thrown on the screen. As one view disappears, the other appears in the same place and without darkening the screen.

DISSOLVING BY CALCIUM LIGHT.—By a simple device called a "dissolver," or dissolving key, the light from one lantern is "turned" into the other. By this means one view gradually blends, or dissolves, into the other. As one fades away, the other, as if by magic, gradually takes its place. In the literal sense of the word this is the only method of dissolving.

DISSOLVING BY ELECTRIC LIGHT.—In dissolving by electric light, you cannot gradually turn off one light and on the other. Both lights must be kept burning all the time, and it requires two electric lamps and two rheostats. The dissolver is a mechanical device placed in front of the projecting lenses. It is worked by a lever, and gradually covers one lens and opens the other.

How to Get a Good Light on the Curtain.

The light must be in the right position in order to have the curtain properly illuminated ("clear field," as it is generally termed). When the disk has a dark shadow on the edge, as shown in figure No. 1, the light should be moved to the left; figure 2, it should be moved to the right; figure 3, the light is too high; figure 4, the light is too low; figure 5, the light is too near the condensers. Should there be an orange red fringe around the edge, the light is too far from the condensers. When light is in right position the curtain will be white, as shown in figure 6. To obtain a correct field it is necessary to have the objective lens in the proper position. A convenient way, is to first put a slide in the carrier, move the projecting lens forward or back till an approximate focus is obtained; then remove the slide and adjust the light for a "clear field."

The Leader Electric Dissolver.

Cut "A" shows dissolver in position for use with portion of shutter cut away to show the mechanical construction.

Cut "B" shows dissolver in position when not in use, also the position, when both lights are on the curtain for registering the fields.

In dissolving views the light from both lanterns should be thrown on the screen in the same place. The top lantern is provided with regulating screws or some other device by which it can be adjusted so the disks will occupy the same position on the screen.

This dissolver is especially adapted to be used with the "Leader" or "New Century" lantern, described in this catalogue. Support for holding the dissolving shutter is fastened to the lantern. This holds the dissolver firm and rigid and prevents any shake or movement of the picture on the curtain when the dissolving shutter is moved. To insure a steady picture and a convenient adjustment of the lenses, an electric dissolver should never be attached to the projecting lens.

Shutter "D" is made of aluminum, and by moving lever "B" the end of one lens is gradually opened, while the end of the other lens is gradually closed. As one picture fades away or disappears, the other picture takes its place.

The "Leader" Electric Dissolver is light and strong, simple to operate, and is the only electric dissolver adopted for stereopticon and moving picture machines.

With each electric dissolver is sent printed instructions for attaching and using the same; also diagram and instructions for connecting and using a double dissolving electric stereopticon.

Price of "Leader" Electric Dissolver,$6.00

THE "GEM" ELECTRIC DISSOLVER.

We also have an electric dissolver that can be attached to the projecting lens and can therefore be used on any lantern. It is light and very simple in construction. When ordering the "Gem" electric dissolver, give diameter, also size, of the projecting lens to which it is to be attached.

Price of "Gem" Electric Dissolver,$4.50

Hand Feed Electric Lamps.

The "Standard."

Electricity is the strongest light used for projection work and should always be used when connection can be conveniently obtained.

Automatic or self-feeding electric lamps are heavy, complicated and always getting out of order. Experience has proven that for traveling the hand feed electric lamp is much more satisfactory.

The Standard electric lamp is light and strong, all parts nickel plated and thoroughly insulated. Self centering, right and left screw feed. Best lamp on the market for the money.

The "Best" Electric Lamp.

ADJUSTED FOR DIRECT CURRENT.

A and B feed screw-knobs for adjusting the carbons, C carbon hood or light shield, T wires that convey the current to the carbons.

This hand-feed lamp is constructed to meet all requirements of an electric lamp and can be used equally as well for alternating or direct current. The carbons can be set at any angle, and adjusted by feed screws either at top or rear of lamp: This is not only a great convenience, but also permits the lamp to be used in all lanterns where it is possible to use electric light. All parts are made of the best material, nickel plated and finely finished.

The "Best" Electric Lamp.

ADJUSTED FOR ALTERNATING CURRENT.

LIGHT SHIELD OR CARBON HOOD C confines the light, prevents it from escaping in the room or annoying those who sit back of the machine. No electric lamp is complete without a shield.

ECONOMY CALCIUM JET, No. 1

A burner constructed on a new principle, having an inner tube, i.e. a tube within a tube, by which the gases are mixed, both flowing in the same direction. The flow of gas is continuous, with no short turns to make it "noisy."

Advantages of this burner are—long mixing chamber by which the gases are more thoroughly mixed—economy in use—less consumption of gas is required to obtain a given amount of light—a brighter and more steady light, with less sputter and noise. Tip is the finest imported composition copper, special made, and can be easily removed for cleaning, or, if damaged, can be replaced with new tip. The lamp is provided with all adjustments for quick focusing.

The "Standard" Rheostat.

When using arc lamp with an incandescent electric current it is necessary to use a Rheostat to convert a low tension current into an arc light. The "Standard" Rheostat is light and strong, tightly wound and thoroughly insulated. The wire is a composition specially prepared for this work and is much superior to the wire generally used for this purpose. The rheostat is provided with a spring contact sliding adjustment, by which the light may be gradually increased or decreased as desired. The material and workmanship make this equal to any high-priced rheostat on the market. Do not be deceived by others of similar appearance. Can be used for alternating or direct current.

Pressure Gauge.

To any one using a cylinder a pressure gauge is a great convenience and almost a necessity. Without it the operator is at loss to know the amount of gas in the tank or the amount used at each entertainment. By knowing size of tank the gauge will not only indicate the pounds of pressure but also the number of cubic feet of gas.

Acetylene Gas.

This is a new illuminating gas that has come into prominence the past few years and has recently been adopted for use in stereopticon and magic lanterns.

HOW MADE—The gas is made by simply immersing Calcic Carbide in water. This is a chemical produced by submitting unslacked lime and coke to an intense heat in electric furnace. In appearance it resembles lime stone and is just as safe to handle, but must be kept dry.

THE LIGHT. ACETYLENE gives a steady white light about twelve times as brilliant as the ordinary illuminating gas and in intensity equals about 100 candle power. Although it will not compare with calcium or electric light, still it is much superior to oil and will give a good 10-foot stereopticon picture.

NO DANGER—Explosions reported with acetylene gas are from using liquid acetylene or where the gas is confined under extremely high pressure. There is no more danger in the manufacture and use of Acetylene for stereopticon use than there is in using the ordinary illuminating gas. The gas is generated only as required for use and there is practically no pressure in the generator.

Arnold Acetylene Generator.

"SEE THAT DRIP" B.

The trouble experienced by operators using acetylene, is to keep a steady light during the entire entertainment. Generating acetylene gas increases the temperature of the water and when the water becomes hot, more or less vapor or steam is carried with the gas into the rubber tube, where it is condensed. The water thus formed in the tube retards the flow of gas and causes the light to smoke and flicker. Various methods and devices have previously been adopted to overcome this difficulty, but none have proved a success. The Arnold generator is provided with a "drip" cup, "B," placed between the generator and the burner that entirely overcomes this trouble and makes a perfect generator. The tube is kept free and clear, and a steady even flow of gas and bright light is obtained during the entire entertainment.

The generator is light, compact and easy to operate.

NO DANGER OF EXPLOSION. With these generators an explosion is impossible, for the gas is not confined under pressure.

The generator is automatic in its action, making the gas only as it is needed, and therefore allows only a small amount of gas to accumulate in the gas holder at one time.

This generator consists of two cylinders telescoped, so one slides easily within the other. The outside cylinder or tank is plain and its use is simply to hold the water. The inside cylinder or GAS HOLDER has a basket for holding the Carbide; an extra large space for storing the gas, and a stop cock to regulate flow of gas when needed. There are no pipes, clamps, springs or screw-caps to get out of order. By automatic action the Carbide is lowered into or raised out of the water, whereby the supply of gas is increased or diminished. The generator is made of the best material, and so simple in construction a child can operate it.

There is no more danger in using Acetylene gas with this generator than there is in using an ordinary oil light.

EXPENSE will vary from 10 to 15 cents per hour, according to the amount of carbide purchased at one time.

Size, 28x9. Weight, 13 lbs.; including shipping case and attachments, about 38 lbs. A lighter case and smaller generator can be furnished if desired; but we recommend the larger size as generally more practical for exhibition work.

THE GENERATOR OUTFIT consists of generator, rubber tubing, drip cup and five pounds of carbide packed in carrying case. The burner is extra.

"New Century" Stereopticon.
(FOR CALCIUM LIGHT)

The above cut shows the stereopticon arranged for calcium light with moving picture attachment swung in position. This method of changing from moving pictures to stereopticon is new, and the simplest and quickest change on the market. See description, "Quick Change" page 30.

"NEW CENTURY" FOR CALCIUM LIGHT.—As its name implies, it is the latest improved stereopticon, and has several improvements possessed by no other lantern. The body and frame is made of aluminum and telescoping nickel plated brass rods. We have dispensed with the bulky lamp house and everything not necessary to the construction of a high grade lantern. It is light, rigid and compact. A new device is provided by which the dissolving fields are quickly and accurately registered.

The light shield has a handle and can be as easily removed and replaced as a door to a lamp house can be opened and closed. The lime jets have gear for raising, lowering and turning the limes. Condensing lenses are $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter, of the best quality, and can readily be removed for cleaning. Projecting lenses are the genuine Bausch & Lomb (their name is on the lenses). Carrying case is leather finished, nickel plated trimmings, lock and key, and is lined with dark colored cotton flannel.

(FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT.)

The above cut shows Stereopticon arranged for electricity, with electric dissolver and the moving picture attachment swung out of position. The light shield on the electric lamps is on friction pivot and can be tilted at any angle desired, independent of the lamp. The shield is thoroughly insulated and so constructed that the carbons can be tilted at the proper angle for alternating current (see cut of electric lamp with carbons set for alternating current, page 13).

ELECTRIC DISSOLVER.—Much time and study has been given to perfecting an electric dissolver that would be simple in construction and produce the best dissolving effects.

After much experimenting we have succeeded in obtaining the best and simplest electric dissolver on the market. To obtain dissolving effect with electricity requires a different method than that employed for calcium light (see under dissolving effects). For general description of this stereopticon see "New Century" Stereopticon for calcium light.

Quick Change

FROM STEREOPTICON TO MOVING PICTURE AND VICE VERSA.

It is desirable to have little delay as possible between these changes, and to accomplish this, several methods have been adopted. The one shown on "New Century" Stereopticon is new, and is the simplest, quickest and the best. The stereopticon and the moving picture machine are each on a swinging arm. These arms are joined together by a connecting rod, so that as one swings out of position the other swings in position. The change from moving picture to stereopticon or from stereopticon to moving picture is done instantly and by one movement. No adjusting or re-focusing necessary. The change is complete and accurate.

THE "LEADER"

THIS LANTERN HAS MANY IMPROVEMENTS POSSESSED BY NO OTHER.

If you are contemplating the purchase of a lantern, do not buy until you carefully read what we say regarding the "Leader".

OBJECTIVE LENS.

An "adapter" is supplied with each machine by which either a large or small lens can be quickly attached. The objective lens is provided with rack and pinion for accurate focusing.

CONDENSING LENSES.

Condensing lenses are two in number, plano-convex, $4\frac{1}{2}$ -inches in diameter and are made of the best quality of French crystal glass. The lens cell (or mounting) is made of spun brass, nickel plated, highly polished and thoroughly ventilated. It is so constructed that the mounting with lenses can be instantly removed for shipping or taken apart for cleaning.

VENTILATED AIR CHAMBER.

The lens holder is so constructed that a free circulation of air is obtained between the condensing lenses. The "Lens Cell" is placed just outside of the lamp house. Between the condensing lenses and light there is a ventilated air chamber which allows circulation of cold air between the lenses and the light. Free circulation of air on both sides of each condensing lens is thus obtained. This is a very valuable improvement and is found in no other lantern.

LAMP HOUSE.

Lamp House is made of aluminum and the finest quality of thin rolled steel, especially made for this class of work. Aluminum and gold are the only two metals that will not oxidize by exposure to the air. Being light and strong and free from tarnish, it is an ideal metal for the stereopticon. The lamp house is large and roomy, thoroughly ventilated and is therefore adapted for using any kind of light. All the parts are screwed or riveted together thus making it rigid and strong. Beware of a small lamp house, especially for electric light. It is not only very inconvenient to operate, but as only short carbons can be used, you are compelled to change them often. In purchasing a stereopticon see that the bellows is of good size and that the lamp house is much larger than the bellows.

QUICK ADJUSTMENT.

By a new device for support, we obtain double the adjustment for the light found on any other lantern. Two adjusting posts in front and two in the rear with set screws, permit of quick and accurate tilting of the lantern to any desired angle, to locate the light from any point on the proper position on the curtain. To obtain this result with other lanterns, it is necessary to "prop up" (as the case may require) either the front or the back end of the lantern and then the lantern is neither level nor steady. With our device you secure quick and accurate adjustment and your lantern is both true and firm. The sliding rods and folding bellows admit quick adjustment of the projecting lens, for both the different size lenses, and the varying distance from the curtain.

SLIDE CARRIER.

When using the ordinary unmounted glass slide, it is necessary to use a slide carrier, which remains stationary in the lantern, while the slides are being changed. As the least shake or jar is magnified on the screen, it is essential that the slide carrier remain firmly in position. The usual means provided to accomplish this is by using a spring. This serves the purpose while the spring is new, but when it becomes weak it is of little value. In the "Leader" the slide carrier is securely held in position by a thumb screw which is far superior to the old style spring. The thumb screw will never wear out; it not only holds the slide carrier more firmly than the spring, but the carrier can more easily be removed or placed in position.

WEIGHT AND SIZE.

Weight of lantern, without lenses is about 8 pounds. Size when packed ready for shipment, 10½-inches high, 7-inches wide and 17-inches long. The top or extension part of lamp house can be quickly removed and with the projection lens, packed inside of the main part of the lamp house. No other lantern of the size is so compact for shipment or so light in weight.

CARRYING CASE No. 1.

A special case is made for carrying the stereopticon with a separate apartment for stereopticon slides or the Optigraph moving picture machine. The case is leather finished with nickel plated trimmings and lined with dark colored cotton flannel. It is also furnished with a lock and key. This is not only a fine looking case, but the workmanship and material is of the best quality.

Style A for single lantern or with Optigraph, as above,	$6.00.
Style B for double dissolving lantern, only	6.50.
Style C for double dissolving lantern with Optigraph,	8.00.

CARRYING CASE No. 2.

This is a canvas covered case provided with leather trimmings, straps and handle. The case is large enough for the stereopticon and the Optigraph moving picture machine. Should the latter not be used, the extra space will be found very convenient for carrying stereopticon slides. Size of case (outside measure) 8x12x24. Weight about 5 pounds. Price $2.00 each. For Double Lantern or Double Lantern and Optigraph, the above style of case is furnished for $3.50.

We can also furnish a wood carrying case to those who prefer it; but a canvas covered case with leather trimmings is very much better. A wood carrying case, even with the best finish, has the appearance of a wooden box. A box is all right in which to ship goods; but when carried in the hand as a traveling case it looks out of place.

POINTS OF SUPERIORITY.

The "Leader" has many improvements or points of advantage over any other lantern.

Many claim their lantern is "the best lantern made," but do not tell you why. We claim the "Leader" leads them all and we will tell you why.

1st—Lighter and stronger, being made of aluminum and sheet steel, and all parts screwed or riveted together making it light and rigid.

2nd—The "adapter" for objective lens, by which either a large or small barrel lens can be quickly attached.

3rd—Ventilated cold air chamber, between the light and condensing lens.

4th—Double adjustment for focusing the light.

5th—Raising or tilting either the front or rear end of the lantern for adjusting the light on the screen.

6th—A set screw, in place of a spring, for holding the slide carrier firmly in position.

7th—Style and appearance. The attractive outline of the "Leader" is shown in the accompanying cuts, and the combination of the engraved aluminum frame, satin finished, and nickel plated trimmings, highly polished, with the dark finish of the lamp house and the rich maroon color of the bellows, give this lantern a style and appearance superior to any other on the market.

GUARANTEE.

We guarantee the "Leader" to be as represented. We guarantee this stereopticon to have more scientific and practical points of value than any other lantern on the market. Send $5.00 deposit with order as guarantee of good faith and when requested, we will ship the lantern subject to examination before paying the balance. If lantern is not found to be as represented, the deposit will be refunded on its return.

PRICE.

The "Leader" single lantern with 4½-inch condensing lenses ¼ size objective lens, double (quick change) slide carrier and No. 2 carrying case. Price $30.00

This is known as "Leader A".

The "Leader" single lantern with ¼ size objective, 4¼-inch condensing lenses, double (quick change) slide carrier, No. 1 carrying case and either the best electric lamp or calcium light jet with mechanical lime turner. Price $48.00.

This is known as "Leader B".

See description of carrying case No. 1 and 2.

"Leader B" ($48.00) is the "Best," most complete, convenient, high grade lantern ever offered to the public. The objective lens is the Bausch and Lomb large mounting bearing their name and serial number. With it, two different size pictures can be obtained without changing position of the machine. This practically gives you two lenses in one mounting.

LONG FOCUS LENS.

We can furnish a cheap long focus lens in place of the ¼ size lens for $1.50 more. This lens will make about 10 foot pictures at distance of 40 feet from the curtain. We cannot however recommend this lens for good work. A high grade long focus or narrow angle lens cannot be sold so cheap. See catalogue under "Objective Lens".

THE "LEADER" STEREOPTICON.

(See description of single "Leader" Lantern. The Dotted lines and set Screws "D" show how either end of the Lantern may be elevated or "tilted.")

This consists of two "Leader" Lanterns mounted and arranged for dissolving views. All the castings being made of aluminum and all the parts being screwed together make the lantern very light, strong and rigid.

The sliding rods, the spun brass lens mounting, and all the brass trimmings are nickel plated and highly polished. The aluminum is given what is termed the "satin" finish, a new, beautiful, rich finish that will never tarnish and never grow old. The thin rolled sheet steel used in partial construction of the lamp house, has a Russian black finish. The bellows are of a rich maroon color and the projecting lenses are finished in the natural brass, highly polished and lacquered. This combination of color and finish, the decorating and engraving on the aluminum castings and the general appearance of the stereopticon, is not only artistic and pleasing, but gives the impression of lightness, strength and durability. See description of single "Leader" lantern.

The "Leader" Stereopticon (double dissolving lantern) consists of two complete lanterns that, when desired, can be quickly made into two separate lanterns. This cannot be said of other double lanterns, for the top lantern of other makes is not supplied with the necessary supports and adjustments, so it can be used independent of the lower lantern.

REGISTERING THE FIELDS.

In a double dissolving lantern the fields or pictures from each projecting lens should be the same size and cover the same space on the curtain. A new device of our own is provided by which this is quickly and accurately accomplished. This is a marked improvement on the old way and is a point that will be greatly appreciated by an operator.

HOW TO REGISTER THE FIELDS.

- 1st. Adjust the light and focus a picture on the lower lantern same as though you were using a single lantern.
- 2nd. Turn light off of lower lantern and adjust the top lantern in the same manner.
- 3rd. Loosen set screws "A" on each side of the lantern.
- 4th. By adjusting set screw "C" raise or lower the front end of top lantern till both fields are same height on the curtain.
- 5th. By adjusting screw "B" move front end of the lantern to the right or left until both fields cover the same place on the curtains. After fields are properly adjusted, tighten set screws "A" on each side of the lantern, and the top of lantern will then be firmly held in position. With a little practice this adjustment can be quickly and accurately made.

PRICE—"Leader" dissolving Stereopticon as shown in cut, with $\frac{1}{4}$ size lenses, double slide carrier, and No. 2 carrying case, \$60.00

PRICE—"Leader" dissolving Stereopticon with $\frac{1}{2}$ size lenses, calcium dissolving key or electric dissolver, 2 best electric lamps, or two calcium jets with mechanical lime turners, 2 double slide carriers, and No. 1 carrying case all complete, \$95.00.

See description of carrying case No. 1 and No. 2.

DOUBLE LANTERN COMBINED WITH MOVING PICTURE MACHINE.

Should the Optigraph, Model No. 3, combined with double dissolving "Leader" Stereopticon be desired, add $34.00 to above price. See description under Leader and Optigraph.

All experts who see the "Leader" Stereopticon admit it has many points of advantage over any dissolving lantern on the market. An experienced operator can quickly see and appreciate these points.

If you do not find it convenient to purchase a double lantern now, buy a single one, and at any future time you can add another for dissolving work.

THE "LEADER" AND OPTIGRAPH

THE "LEADER" AND OPTIGRAPH

Swung out of position.

This cut shows the Optigraph swung out of position and the Stereopticon lens in position for use. See description "quick change" on page 40.

QUICK CHANGE.

From stereopticon to moving picture machine and vice versa.

It is desirable to have as little delay as possible between these changes, and to accomplish this several methods have been adopted.

The change shown above is the quickest, simplest and most accurate of them all. The stereopticon and moving picture machine are each on a swinging arm. These arms are jointed together by a connecting rod, so that as one swings out of position the other swings in position. The change from moving picture to stereopticon or from stereopticon to moving picture is done instantly and by one movement, no adjusting or re-focusing necessary. The change is complete and accurate and is done instantly.

PRICE—"Leader" lantern with No. 1 Optigraph, - - - $54.00.
 "Leader" lantern with No. 3 (1900) model Optigraph, 64.00.
 "Leader" (double lantern) with No. 3 Optigraph, - 94.00.

The Optigraph is furnished with a No. 1 lens of medium angle projecting a picture about 10 ft. in diameter at about 40 feet from the screen. If desired, the purchaser when ordering can substitute for the above, a No. 2 lens, projecting 10 ft. picture at about 30 feet from the screen or a No. 3 lens projecting 10 ft. picture at about 65 feet from the screen.

The above prices include the double slide carrier, No. 2 carrying case; and for the stereopticon a $\frac{1}{4}$ size projecting lens or a long focus lens in a $\frac{1}{4}$ size barrel or mounting. Much better results will be obtained by using a high grade $\frac{1}{2}$ size lens in a large barrel or mounting. The $\frac{1}{4}$ size lens makes a picture whose diameter is one-half the distance from the lantern to the screen, while the lens on the Optigraph makes a picture whose diameter is only one-fifth the above distance. The $\frac{1}{2}$ size lens brings the two pictures more nearly to the same size and the effect is much more pleasing. With this lens two different size pictures can be made which will be found very convenient for use in different size rooms. This is not only an advantage, but you will also get a much brighter, sharper and clearer picture.

If this lens with large mounting is preferred to the lens with a small mounting, add $10.00 to the price of each single lantern as quoted above, or $20.00 to the Double Dissolving lantern.

The lens is one of the most important parts of a lantern and the additional investment of $10.00 for the above combined machine will be found a most profitable one. Your stereopticon will then give as fine pictures as it is possible to obtain with any high priced imported lantern.

"IN HIS STEPS."

Most conspicuous today among thinkers and workers, who are trying to promote the interest of humanity and religion, is Charles M. Sheldon. His unique and noble effort to edit The Topeka Capital, a daily paper, for one week, as he thought Christ would do, attracted the attention of the entire civilized world and aroused a keen discussion in the columns of every newspaper in the land. Prior to this, his book entitled "In His Steps" or "What Would Jesus Do," had become the most popular book of modern times.

In this country nearly four million copies of this book have been sold, and in Europe twelve different prominent publishing houses have issued large editions. At an expenditure of much time and money, a set of 150 slides have been made from life models, that completely illustrate this popular, thrilling and instructive story.

The extremes of society, the wide variety of religious work, from stately cathedrals to the humble missions, afford a field true to life and character for illustrating this work. In these illustrations are shown palatial homes, fashionable equipages on the boulevards. elegant churches, aristocratic audiences, the preacher speaking, the cantatrice singing, the tragedy of the tramp's appearance therein, the agitated after meetings, the stirring scenes following in parlors, libraries, business offices, factories and editorial sanctums. scenes on the boulevards, the avenues and the busy streets; scenes among the slums, with hordes of outcasts, the mission meetings in the tent, the election crowd, the drunken mob, the tragedy in palace hall and in slum street and many scenes of sublime enthusiasm and daring heroism. All these scenes follow each other in rapid succession, and chain the attention by their variety and dramatic posings.

None of these illustrations are made from paintings, or "Gallery-make-ups", but all were taken from real characters and actual scenes. Every slide is full of life, sharp and clear, brilliant and sparkling.

Sold in sets only at 50 cents per slide colored, 150 slides covering the complete book for 3 night's exhibition with printed lecture, and 50 slides, covering the complete book for 1 night's exhibition with printed lecture.

A complete copy of the book sent free with every set. No plain slides sold of this illustration. Broken slides will be replaced at 65 cents each.

Figures in full face type indicate the slides in the set of 50, which are also shown by ordinary figures on the right.

THE HOLY CITY.

The interest of the audience in such a lecture as "In His Steps" is increased by the proper introduction of sacred songs. "The Holy City" has been illustrated by sixteen beautiful slides and appropriate title and is one of the most popular of the present day. The dreamer is represented by life posing, and as he lies asleep on his couch, the visions described in the song appear successively upon the screen, as the slides are projected in their proper order, and the audience are held in rapt attention from the beginning to the end.

- 1 Last night I lay a-sleeping, there came a dream so fair,
- 2 I stood in old Jerusalem, beside the Temple there;
- 3 I heard the children singing, and ever as they sang.
- 4 Methought the voice of Angels from Heaven in answer rang,
- 5 Jerusalem, Jerusalem, lift up your gates and sing
- 6 Hosanna in the highest, Hosanna to your King!
- 7 And then methought my dream was changed, the streets no longer rang
- 8 Hush'd were the glad Hosannas, the little children sang
- 9 The sun grew dark with mystery, the morn was cold and chill,
- 10 As the shadow of a cross arose upon a lonely hill,
- 11 Jerusalem, Jerusalem, Hark! how the Angels sing
- 12 Hosanna in the highest! Hosanna to your King!
- 13 And once again the scene was changed, new earth there seemed to be!
- 14 I saw the Holy City beside the tideless sea;
- 15 The light of God was on its street, the gates were open wide;
- 16 And all who would might enter, and no one was denied.
- 17 No need of moon or stars by night; nor sun to shine by day;
- 18 It was the new Jerusalem that would not pass away.
- 19 Jerusalem, Jerusalem, sing for the night is o'er,
- 20 Hosanna in the highest, Hosanna forevermore!

THE NEW BORN KING.

It is always desirable to have a song of similar character for an encore, and this will be found a good companion piece for "The Holy City." It is illustrated by eleven beautiful slides with title.

CHRISTMAS.

The rapid increase in the use of the Stereopticon by the Church and Sunday School, has created a demand for an appropriate series of slides for a Christmas entertainment. The list which follows has been selected by Rev. J. T. Ladd, an eminent Scholar and traveler, who has used the Stereopticon with telling effect in his own Sunday School and Church work, and has thus been fitted for the task which he has so well performed, of arranging the views which make up the series and writing the accompanying lecture.

We have this set of forty-one beautiful slides under electric light in our display room, and cordially invite you to come in and see them.

PALESTINE.

Rev. J. T. Ladd, a cultured gentleman, who has secured, at a great expense, a large collection of beautiful photographs while traveling through Foreign lands, is now preparing lectures for us which will describe these views as only an eye witness and experienced public speaker can do. The fact that this gentleman is himself a most successful stereopticon lecturer, enables him to write these lectures in a most practical and attractive manner, which greatly adds to their value.

These lectures will comprise the following subjects: Palestine, Greece and Athens. City of Rome, Italy, Syria, India, Egypt, France and Paris.

RARE OLD BIBLE PICTURES.

We have been fortunate in securing a copy of an ancient history of the "Holy Bible" in two volumes. "The whole illustration with one hundred and four useful and ornamental maps and sculptures, engraved by the best hands, from original paintings." These books were published in 1752 A. D. There are many choice pictures which do not appear in recent books and that are not common. Having been made from original paintings, many of them are very valuable. Read the list given below. You may find a picture that you have been looking for. We give in the first slide a reproduction of the title page showing the style of printing and spelling of the English of 1752.

THE DRESDEN GALLERY.

Some one has said that the Dresden Gallery is an "Assembly of Collections such as can scarcely be equaled in the world." We have succeeded, at great expense, in obtaining photographs of fifty of the finest examples of the old Masters of this famous Gallery. All lovers of art, engaged in Stereopticon work, will be interested in seeing the collection which we have in our display rack under electric light. Come in and see them.

- 1 Titian's Daughter, by Titian 1477-1576. "This picture is one of the most celebrated portraits in the world. 'Titian-colored hair' excited the universal enthusiasm of the art-world." Her graceful poise, and magnificent jewels adorning her hair, neck, and arms, give the appearance of luxury. She holds a beautiful rose in her delicate hands.
- 2 The Virgin, Holy Child, and St. John, by Titian 1477-1576. This picture represents a young and beautiful woman timidly approaching the mother of God, who leans forward to graciously listen to her who is soon to know a kindred joy. At the side John the Baptist, is supporting the Holy Child who, standing in His Mother's lap, embraces her around the neck. St. Paul with a sword and Jerome with a crucifix, press forward to worship the Saviour.
- 3 The Madonna di San Sisto, by Raphael, 1483-1520. The beautiful mother with the Saviour in her arms is descending from the heavens, surrounded by innumerable heads of angels. St. Sixtus and St. Barbara kneel before her, while two charming little cherubs are in front. "It is the most finished, and perhaps the very best, work of its immortal author."
- 4 Michael the Archangel, by Penni, 1488-1528. The archangel Michael, dressed in a knight's armour, hovers above the dragon, whom he has thrown from heaven to victory over him, the triumph of Christianity over Paganism.
- 5 Saint Sebastian, by Correggio, 1494-1534. It is one of the most beautiful of this wonderful artist's masterpieces. The Virgin and babe is descending from heaven surrounded by rays of light, and angels ministering to her. St. Germinion, St. Sebastian and St. Roche are in the foreground. Beneath is a little child, called "the little one of Modena," holding the model of a temple, supposed to indicate the church for which this painting was intended.
- 6 The Madonna (of the Meir Family) by Holbein. 1495-1543. The custom of presenting to a church a picture by those whose prayers had been answered gave the name votive-picture. This is such a picture. The Madonna stands in a vaulted niche of the wall, beautifully ornamented. She holds the little one whom she has saved in her arms, while the Meier family are kneeling in adoration before her.

THE DRESDEN GALLERY—Continued.

- 7 Portrait of Hubert Moren, by Holbein, 1495-1543. The question as to the author of this fine portrait was only recently decided by the discovery of the magnificent drawing for it among Holbein's works.
- 8 The Adoration of the Magi by Paul Veronese, 1530-1588. The Virgin with the babe, surrounded by a halo of glory, sits on the steps of a fine building. An old king with a long, richly embroidered robe is kissing the Saviour's feet, while back of him stand the other kings magnificently dressed presenting their costly gifts. St. Joseph and a shepherd stand beside the holy mother. "The grandeur and freedom of the idea, the dignity and truth of the composition, the expression of the figures, and brilliancy of the coloring, place this among the principal masterpieces of Veronese."
- 9 The Marriage at Cana, by Paul Veronese, 1530-1588. "It is glowing in color, and claims attention, at once, by its magnificence. The grouping of the figures, the diversity of costumes and the grandeur of the architecture, all combine to attract and satisfy the eye."
- 10 The Dead Christ, by Salvati, 1535-1585. The Saviour is represented as being laid in the tomb by angels. It is a most impressive picture. One is lifting the dead body, another is kissing His pierced hand, while the third with clasped hands and upturned face, is imploring the aid of God the Father.
- 11 Soldiers Playing Cards in a Guard Room, by Caravaggio, 1569-1609. The soldiers are evidently men of distinction as is shown by their elegant uniforms, and the gold on the magnificent table.
- 12 The Lion Hunt, by Rubens, 1577-1640. The marvelous talent of this world-famed artist is shown in this picture. A lion has overmastered one of the hunters whom he is pulling from his horse. In the horrible scene of combat, midst the bloody struggle, a lioness is seen intent only on saving her little ones. This picture is proof of the almost universal skill of this "Prince of the Flemish School."
- 13 Satyr and Nymphs, by Rubens. Four nymphs, with their dogs, are accosted by three satyrs laden with fruit. The contrast of these half-brutal, sensuous satyrs and the virgin modesty of the Nymphs is depicted with great skill.
- 14 The Boar Hunt, by Rubens. This is another master-piece by the same great author.
- 15 The Supplication of Esther by Strozzi, 1581-1644.
- 16 The Smokers, by Teniers, 1582-1649. "This picture is in Tenier's well-known manner and represents a subject which seems to have been almost the only one congenial to painters of his calibre and school."
- 17 A Village Festival, by Teniers. A joyous band are enjoying themselves before a Dutch village inn. They are dancing, playing musical instruments, drinking, chatting, and amusing themselves in various ways.
- 18 The Dentist, by Honthorst, 1594-1660. "The composition as well as the drawing and expression of this picture, is correct and full of life. The effect of the light in this painful scene is really admirable, and produces a shudder in looking at it."
- 19 Martin Engelbrecht, by Van Dyck, 1599-1641. "The piercing eye, the noble forehead, and the expressive mouth can only belong to a man of strong mind and character, and the conception and execution of the portrait are quite worthy the fame of the greatest of portrait painters."
- 20 Evening, by Albert Cuyp, 1606-1691. A small flock of cows and sheep are grazing on the high banks of a pond, while the shepherdess and herdsmen rest after the weary labors of the day, and the setting sun casts a reddish light over all. It is an exceedingly fine picture of repose in nature.
- 21 Rembrandt and His Wife, by Rembrandt, 1608-1674. Rembrandt, dressed in uniform, sits at a well spread table, embracing his wife with his left arm, and raising a glass of champagne with his right. His young, happy wife wears a dress of pearl colored satin, richly embroidered in gold.

- 22 Rembrandt's Daughter, by Rembrandt. "The picture represents a young girl, of graceful form and rosy complexion, whose dark eyes and red lips smile gaily at us."
- 23 A Lady in a Satin Gown, by Terburg, 1608-1681. The lady before the dressing table is viewing herself in a small mirror. All the accessories of the picture tend to heighten the effect of the lustre of the white satin dress. "As a composition of color, it is one of the most charming in the Dresden Gallery."
- 24 The Wild Boar Hunt, by Jacobsen, 1610-1664. The agony of the wounded dogs, the fierceness and the fury of the attacking ones, and the helplessness of the struggling boar to escape, all render this a masterpiece of this artist who is especially gifted in painting hunting scenes and combats of wild beasts.
- 25 A Dutch Village Tavern, by A. Van Ostade, 1620-1685. A company of peasants are round a table in a Dutch village tavern. The man at the right is probably the painter himself. The hostess is pouring out brandy midst a little group in the rear, while overhead is the loft, scattered with household utensils and bits of straw and cob webs.
- 26 A Flemish Ale House, by Teniers the Younger, 1610-1694. The hostess is preparing apple fritters, midst a little group of peasants. Great interest is visible on the faces of some others, eagerly watching the accountant figuring their bill. The innkeeper is unconcernedly chalking on the wall the number of glasses consumed.
- 27 A Hermit, by Ferdinand Bol, 1611-1681. A venerable, white-haired man is reading a large book in a solitary and tranquil place.
- 28 The Dentist, by Gerard Dou, 1613-1674. The dentist with pompous air and satisfied expression holds up as a trophy the tooth just extracted, while his victim, a distressed looking boy, well displays the feeling, of one obliged to go through such an operation.
- 29 Gerard Dou in His Studio, by Gerard Dou. The great artist looks up at us while he sketches on a leaf of a great album. His studio is filled with interesting objects, all of which are painted in the most careful manner, and with infinite pains.
- 30 The Hermit by Gerard Dou. In the court of an old monastery, the white-headed hermit is kneeling before a large book which he is intently and devoutly reading. "This picture shows, even in the smallest details, that indefatigable application and excessive delicacy which characterize the work of Dou."
- 31 The Woman Winding Silk, by Van Tol, died about 1680. An elderly woman sits by an open window surrounded by foliage. It is a charming portrait.
- 32 The Poultry Dealer, by Metzu, 1615-1669. A poultry dealer, seated on a tub, is offering a cock for sale to a richly dressed young lady bargaining for it. Much truth and beauty are manifested in the animals around them. The whole is very picturesque.
- 33 The Poultry Woman, by Metzu. An elderly woman, plucking a pigeon, is conversing with a young lady who is holding up a leveret in her hand which she wishes to buy. "The whole displays that fidelity to nature and vividness of imagination which distinguishes the principal works of Metzu."
- 34 Garbiel Metzu and His Wife, by Metzu. Metzu is embracing his wife with his left arm and holds a glass of champagne in his right hand.
- 35 A Dutch Winter Landscape, by I. van Ostade, 1617-1657. A number of peasants with their dogs are skating, or urging forward their sleds laden with wood, over the frozen canal, while a motherly face peers from the window of a thatched cottage at the side.
- 36 The Camp, by Wouverman, 1620-1668. Some soldiers of a cavalry regiment are assembled near a tent, and utterly heedless of the trumpeter, continue their rest and refreshment unconcerned, while the camp, extending far into the distance, is seen in the background.

THE DRESDEN GALLERY—Continued.

- 37 The Cavalry Engagement, by Wouverman. "The composition and execution as well as the characteristic details, obtain for this picture a place among the best productions of the celebrated artists. The design and the bearing of the men and horses are well conceived, and are in perfect harmony with the beauty and brilliancy of the colouring."
- 38 A Group of Oxen, by Paul Potter, 1625-1654. "The animals are painted with the most marvellous exactitude."
- 39 The Nativity, by Maratti, 1625-1713. "Maratti has been very successful in the design and coloring of this picture and in the harmony and grace of form. The Holy Mother and the radiant features of the angels express heavenly love and the highest form of happiness in the contemplation of the Divine Infant."
- 40 The Monastery, by Ruysdael, 1625-1681. An artist sits on the bank of a beautiful stream, into which a herdsman is driving his cattle, and two fishermen fishing. At the foot of some well-wooded mountains stands the monastery, partly in ruins, lit up by the sun's rays. The landscapes of Ruysdael are "eminently poetical and up by the sun's rays. The landscapes of Ruysdael are "eminently poetical and yet perfectly faithful."
- 41 The Avenue, by Ruysdael. "Whoever longs to fly from the constant turmoil of town life to the stillness of nature, will thank the great landscape painter, who has created for us in all his forests, groves and plains, a refuge from the troubles and cares of the world in the sanctuaries of nature."
- 42 The Traveling Tinker, by Mieris, 1635-1681. Before a Dutch tavern, a traveling tinker is holding up to the light an old caldron that a woman has brought to be mended. The living figures, the vine-covered house, the old tree trunk, the remains of an old wagon, all are painted with great fidelity to nature, and make it a fine picture, a masterpiece of genius.
- 43 Mieris in His Studio, by Mieris. The artist, seated before his easel, has turned toward us to converse with his wife, whose portrait he is painting. The studio is very artistically furnished.
- 44 A Winter Scene, by A. Van de Velde, 1639-1672. Many peasants and townspeople are enjoying the skating, riding in the sleds, or conversing on the bank of the frozen stream. His landscapes are particularly distinguished by "an air of transparency and faithful rendering of nature."
- 45 A Lady at Her Toilet, by Netscher, 1639-1684. The lady, wearing a satin skirt and velvet tunic, is caressing a little spaniel in her lap, while her maid carefully arranges her hair. "The talent and minute care of the artist are seen equally well in the composition and drawing of the figures, and in the execution of the accessories."
- 46 The Seamstress, by Netscher. Her pleasant, womanly face, and neat, simple attire make a charming and attractive picture of a Dutch house-wife.
- 47 The Lace Maker, by Slingeland, 1640-1691. A beautiful young Dutch lady is interrupted by an old woman who offers her a cock for sale, and the little spaniel is barking violently at this intruder. "All that we see in this picture displays the great talent and indefatigable application of a great artist."
- 48 The Infant Saviour Sleeping, by Andrea Pozzo, 1642-1709. "The drawing, coloring, and composition of this picture render it one of the principal works of this painter."
- 49 A Young Girl Reading a Letter, by Peter de Horogh, 1643-1708. A happy young girl stands by a window earnestly reading a letter, and her beautiful profile is reflected in the glass panes. "The treatment is free and bold, the effect of the sun rays, which glitter brilliantly on the window, is rendered with much truth and power."
- 50 The Dismissal of Hagar, by A. Van der Werff, 1659-1722. The poor, forsaken woman looks wistfully back at the home from which she is exiled, while Sarah watches her from the doorway. Abraham leans forward with outstretched hands to bless them, with piety and anxiety for their welfare, evident in his earnest face. Little Ishmael follows with lingering looks at his brother Isaac who is playfully hiding in his fathers robes.

THROUGH THE CAUCASUS TO ST. PETERSBURG.

The beautiful Provinces of Trans Caucasia, with its grand mountain scenery, picturesque nationalities and classic associations, and Cis Caucasia with its mineral springs and fashionable resorts have been little explored by American tourists. While distance added to the difficulties of traveling continue to keep them comparatively unknown regions, a trip in imagination will be found intensely interesting under the guidance of Mrs. L. C. Van Hook, who has traveled extensively in these delightful portions of Russia, and who furnishes pictures gathered on the spot.

SOUTH AFRICA.

Mr. J. Martin Miller, a gentleman with experience as a newspaper correspondent and an extensive traveler, has selected these views illustrating the British-Boer war, and has written the accompanying lecture. He has written a popular book as the results of his travels, and has copyrighted his lecture and photographs taken on the field, so that in order to get the best series of slides on the market, representing the thrilling scenes and battles of the British-Boer war, orders should be sent directly to us. These slides being made from photographs are very clear and distinct, and when properly projected upon the screen give a representation that is wonderfully lifelike and true to nature. The lecture is so printed as to make an evening's entertainment if desired, but if otherwise, the historical portions being in smaller type can readily be omitted and only the portion descriptive of the views be used.

SAMOA.

Hon. Bartlett Tripp, United States Commissioner to Samoa, collected a very fine selection of views during his stay among the beautiful islands of the southern seas, and the series of slides given below is among the most attractive which we offer. Their value is increased by the interesting lecture which our commissioner has prepared to accompany them, giving in addition to the description of the scenes, a very complete and concise statement of the resources of the Islands and the character of their inhabitants. A SUMMER TRIP THROUGH EUROPE.

The value of a series of slides illustrating travels is greatly enhanced by a lecture prepared by one who has himself visited the places shown, and is thus able to give a clearness of description and a vividness of detail which would be impossible to any but an eye-witness. Hon. Bartlett Tripp, United States Commissioner to Samoa, has selected the finest views that could be found in his summer trip through Europe, and has accompanied them with a graphic account of their present appearance and interesting facts regarding their past history which will render this series one of the most attractive and popular that we make.

THE BIBLE.

A SERIES OF TEN SERMONS BY REV. J. T. LADD.

FIRST.—WHY DO WE HAVE THE BIBLE. The sermons under this division portray vividly the need of a divine relation, by showing that man is not able to get a correct idea of the character of God or of human duty from nature, or civilization, or the non-christian faith.

SECOND.—HOW WE GOT THE BIBLE. These sermons treat of the production, preservation, discovery and present places of deposit of important Hebrew and Greek manuscripts; of ancient versions and modern translations, and of their publication and circulation.

THIRD.—WHAT THE BIBLE IS FOR. The sermons under this last division illustrate the beneficial influences of the Bible. The opinions of famous men and women are considered, and there are shown a remarkable collection of striking contrasts between the conditions of people before they became Christians and after they became Christians. These are from many mission fields.

Each sermon is so far independent that it may be used separately, and yet in the series each is intimately related to all.

Several of the sermons are specially helpful in missionary work. The pictures present the needs and the benefits of the Gospel with tremendous power. All are fervently evangelical.

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

8 Slides, including portraits of Longfellow and beautiful view of his home.

*Under the spreading chestnut tree,
The village smithy stands;
The smith, a mighty man is he,
With large and sinewy hands;
And the muscles of his brawny arms
Are strong as iron bands.
His hair is crisp, and black, and long,
His face is like the tan;
His brow is wet with honest sweat,
He earns whate'er he can,
And looks the whole world in the face,
For he owes not any man.
Week in, week out, from morn till night,
You can hear his bellows blow;
You can hear him swing his heavy sledge,
With measured beat and slow,
Like a sexton ringing the village bell,
When the evening sun is low.
And children coming home from school
Look in at the open door;
They love to see the flaming forge,
And hear the bellows roar,
And catch the burning sparks that fly
Like chaff from a threshing-floor.*

*He goes on Sunday to the church,
And sits among his boys;
He hears the parson pray and preach,
He hears his daughter's voice,
Singing in the village choir,
And it makes his heart rejoice.
It sounds to him like her mother's voice,
Singing in Paradise!
He needs must think of her once more,
How in the grave she lies;
And with his hard, rough hand he wipes
A tear out of his eyes.*

*Toiling,—rejoicing,—sorrowing,
Onward through life he goes;
Each morning sees some task begun,
Each evening sees it close;
Something attempted, something done,
Has earned a night's repose.
Thanks, thanks to thee, my worthy friend,
For the lesson thou hast taught!
Thus at the flaming forge of life
Our fortunes must be wrought;
Thus on its sounding anvil shaped
Each burning deed and thought.*

ROCK OF AGES.I INTRODUCTORY.

2 Rock of Ages, cleft for me!
Let me hide myself in thee;
Let the water and the blood,
From thy wounded side that flowed,
Be of sin the double cure;
Cleanse me from its guilt and power.

4 *Nothing in my hand I bring,
Simply to thy cross I cling;
Naked, come to thee for dress,
Helpless, look to thee for grace;
Vile, I to the fountain fly,
Wash me, Savior, or I die!*

6 *While I draw this fleeting breath,
When my eyelids close in death,
If then I soar to worlds unknown,
See thee on thy Judgment throne,
Rock of Ages cleft for me!
Let me hide myself in thee.*

THE PASSION PLAY OF OBERAMMERGAU.

WITH LECTURE BY REV. FLAVIUS J. BROBST.

At the commencement of every decade the peasants of Oberammergau enact the drama of Christ's Passion in their own Mountain Village. The theatre in which these scenes are rendered is however one of the largest in the world. During the past summer of 1900 this play was again given. The interest in this play shown by the entire civilized world was greater than ever before. People from all parts of Europe and America went there and the throngs numbered many scores of thousands.

We herewith present a series of slides taken recently of the last rendition of the play which covers the drama. They will be found to be first class.

THE NOBLE ARMY OF MARTYRS IN CHINA.

"Slain for the word of God and the testimony which they held".—Rev. G. G.
BY C. H. CASE.

The ferocious cruelty of the Boxers inspired and encouraged by the wicked and deceitful Empress Dowager of China; and the splendid heroism and faithfulness of the missionaries and native Chinese Christians has never been surpassed in the history of the world.

Over two hundred missionaries and many thousand of native Chinese Christians were murdered in the most cruel manner that fiendish minds could devise.

"They were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. They had trials of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment; they were stoned, were slain with swords; they wandered about in sheep skins and goat skins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented; of whom the world was not worthy; they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth."

Mr. Charles H. Case, has had a long experience in promoting missionary work and a personal acquaintance with many of the martyrs. In order that he might bring their "great sacrifice" is a more real and vivid way before the public he has prepared a series of lantern slides with lecture. Many of the martyred ones had been in his home before they went to China, and some of the survivors of the siege have been at his table since their return to their own land. This has enabled Mr. Case to present many interesting facts and traits of character which would otherwise have been left out of a descriptive lecture.

AFRICA.

These slides were made from photographs brought from his field of labor by Rev. M. Fraser who has worked for years at Elat, W. Africa, under the Presbyterian Board. The lecture was prepared by the Rev. J. T. Ladd, under the direction of the missionary.

There is an interesting pictorial account of the Bulu Savages, their occupations, amusements, etc., of school and church work among them, and of the results. One series of illustrations widely presents the effects of witchcraft as it is believed in and practiced in Africa to-day.

We heartily commend this illustrated lecture to those who care to know what real missionary work is among savage heathen. It is a powerful missionary sermon.

AROUND THE WORLD IN 1901.

By J. MARTIN MILLER.

Copyrighted by G. W. BOND, Chicago, 1901.

The historical events of 1900 and 1901 have been of such thrilling character that the eyes of the world have been directed toward the far east, as never before. The geography, customs and habits of the Orientals, so little known before this time, have now become of great and increasing interest to the general public.

The writer has taken advantage of this fact and in his trip around the world spent most of his time in China, Japan and Ceylon. Some of his photographs were made in the "Forbidden City" where never before had a camera been. This "Around the World Trip" differs from the usual ones in that it combines with the scenes of public buildings and panoramic views of large cities, beautiful views of waterfalls, tropical plants, trees and products, coffee and tea plantations, and illustrates the customs and habits of the people, making an exhibition that will hold the attention and please the audience so that praise and commendation will go before and follow the exhibitor from place to place. Read the list of slides and notice the great variety of subjects treated.

THE SIEGE IN PEKIN.

The implements and methods of warfare have made great advancement during the past few decades.

The methods of communication between nations and the armies and agents have kept apace. No sooner had Dewey sunk the Spanish fleet than the news had been flashed to the whole world.

The destruction of Cervera's fleet was known the world over ere the smoke and flames from the beached wreck had died away.

Accustomed to almost constant and instant communication with their agents, the nations of the world were not prepared for the report that their Ambassadors and ministers were shut up in Pekin, in imminent danger of their lives.

But as day followed day without communication, the suspense, caused by rumors of massacre of the representatives, their wives and children, grew. Week after week dragged on. Inquiry after inquiry was sent out. The world waited. Never before had history recorded such an event. Think of it!

The representatives of America, England, Russia, Germany and France shut up in the Capitol of a nation at peace with them, with means of communication so perfect that minutes only separated them from their far away ambassadors, and in face of this, all communication refused!

The uprising of the Boxers, the connivance of the Empress Dowager, the Massacre of Missionaries and Native Christians, the murder of the German Ambassador, the siege and bombardment of the foreign legations, make a combination of events so startling and unexpected that the "Siege in Pekin" will go down in history as one of the most remarkable series of events recorded on its pages.

As the facts and incidents of the siege are brought out by the survivors, the public will become more and more interested.

A WORD ABOUT THE SLIDES.

The set of slides are all taken from photographs which were made during the siege. These have been secured from returned missionaries and others who had been in the Siege; some from the celebrated traveler Mr. James Martin Müller, who was on the ground and made photographs of places which never before had faced a camera.

The exhibitor who secures a set of these slides can rest assured that there is none better.

A careful perusal of the list of slides will convince you of their great variety and interest.

The lecture has been prepared by one who is personally acquainted with the leaders in the defense of the Legations.

Supplementary slides may be had by making selections from our sets on "The Imperial City", "Our Noble Army of Martyrs", "Around the World Trip" or "China Against the World".

The value of this set of slides will increase the longer you have them. They differ from the ordinary "War Set", in that all the great nations had representatives, who went through the siege. They can be used in any city in any country. All are interested because all have suffered.

ARNOLD'S Improved Calcium Light Outfit

THE ONLY PORTABLE CALCIUM LIGHT OUTFIT CONSTRUCTED
ON PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES

CALCIUM LIGHT.

HOW MADE.

Calcium or lime light is made by heating a piece of lime to white heat by burning the two gases, oxygen and hydrogen. These must be kept in separate cylinders or tanks and mixed in the burner when used.

Making your gas with this outfit the expense for each entertainment will be about 35 cents. To buy gas and pay express charges both ways the expense will be from $1.50 to $2.00 for each entertainment. The saving in express charges alone will pay cost of an outfit in a very short time. Besides it avoids serious losses often accruing from delay in filling orders, misconnections and delays in transit. This is a very important item and one that is liable to occur at any time.

You can always make your own gas anywhere. In half an hour you can make enough to last you for an evening performance of two hours or more.

Where electricity cannot be obtained, where they insist on charging exorbitant pay for same, or where current fails (which is very often the case) the change can be made and you are always ready and independent.

GAS BAGS. From a stand point of convenience and economy, various methods and devices have been tried to obtain a Portable Calcium Gas Making Outfit. Among the most popular of these has been the "Gas Bag" Outfit.

The gas seems to rot the bags, and they soon get to leaking and are rendered useless. You can place no dependence on a gas bag. It is likely to get punctured or spring a leak at any time, and this unfortunate circumstance frequently occurs just before or during an entertainment. As gas cannot be shipped in a bag, what is left after an entertainment is a total loss.

A TANK can always be depended upon. Enough gas can be made at one time for several entertainments. There is no waste of gas, and all this expense and annoyance is avoided.

SMALL TANK OUTFIT.

Consists of the oxygen gas making outfit with small tank, the improved saturator and all necessary appliances and connections. To make the tank light and strong, it is made of thin rolled steel and copper. The main part of the tank is painted, the copper part is polished, lacquered and all brass fittings, valves and connections are polished and nickel plated. The tank is light and strong, weighing about 22 pounds, and holds sufficient gas for two hours use. The shipping case with the small tank outfit is larger and heavier than the one used with the large tank outfit, so the total weight of both outfits is nearly the same.

Weight of shipping case and complete outfit about 120 pounds.

Small tank outfit will be sent unless otherwise specified. Separate apartment is provided for the tank, so the entire outfit is packed in the shipping case and can be checked as baggage.

Price, Small tank Calcium Light Outfit,

LARGE TANK OUTFIT.

Consists of the oxygen gas making outfit with large tank, the improved saturator and all necessary appliances and connections. All brass fittings, valves and connections are polished and nickel plated. The large tank is made of rolled steel and is galvanized inside and outside after the tank is made. This "fills up" and "coats over" all the joints, crevices and rivet heads. It insures the tank against leakage and prevents action of gas or water from eating or rusting the iron.

Galvanizing a tank inside after it is made, is something new and greatly increases the life and value of the tank.

The large tank weighs about 53 pounds and will hold sufficient gas for three hours. This outfit when packed ready for shipment, consists of one tank and one box, and can be checked as baggage.

Weight of tank and complete outfit about 130 pounds.

Price, Large Tank Calcium Light Outfit $45.00

CHEMICALS AND GASOLINE.

Only small amount of 88 gasoline is used in the saturator at each entertainment. One gallon is sent with each outfit, which is sufficient for two or three weeks use.

About 2½ pounds of mixed chemicals for making oxygen are used at each charge and sufficient chemicals for one charge are sent with the outfit. We purchase our chemicals in large quantities direct from the manufacturers and can furnish them of guaranteed purity, cheaper than can be obtained from a retail drug store. It is advisable to order some chemicals shipped with the outfit.

Regular size tank with outfit is 10x36 inches, and will hold enough gas for two hours entertainment. This tank is made of thin rolled steel and copper, making it light and strong and should always be boxed when shipped.

The oxygen gas making outfit with light tank is packed in one box weighing about 100 lbs. and can be checked as baggage.

There is a larger and heavier tank that will hold enough gas for three hours use. This tank is not shipped in the box, but can be checked as baggage. The large tank outfit consists of one box and one tank. Small tank will always be sent, unless otherwise ordered.

The oxygen gas is very easily made. The mixed chemicals are placed in retort "C", heat is applied and as the oxygen gas is liberated, it is stored in the tank. It requires about half an hour to make a complete charge of gas. Full and complete directions are furnished with each outfit.

THE CHEMICALS.

The chemicals for making oxygen gas consists of four (4) parts of Chlorate of Potash crystals, and one (1) part Black oxide of Manganese.

Although these chemicals can be obtained at any drug store, still it is better to order some with the outfit. We furnish the best quality mixed ready for use at 15 cents per pound.

IMPROVED No. 3 SATURATOR.

The only safe, reliable, and scientific saturator made.

The above cut shows the latest improved saturator, with glass gauge, regulating valve and reserve supply tank. The glass gauge not only shows at all times when the proper amount of liquid is in the saturator, but it also serves as a by pass, mixer and agitator whereby the evaporation is greatly increased. The gravity supply tank with regulating valve, automatically replaces the liquid as fast as the evaporation takes place.

YOU CAN BANK ON IT.

Test the saturator before your entertainment begins, and if it works "O. K." the gravity supply tank and regulating valve will keep it "O. K." during the entire performance.

It is simple, safe and reliable; requires no attention; is automatic in action and will insure an even flow of gas and a bright, steady light.

THE ONLY SATURATOR CONSTRUCTED ON SCIENTIFIC AND PRACTICAL PRINCIPLES.

The usual cause of all trouble with a saturator is lack of sufficient gasoline or ether. Everyone using a saturator, has experienced more or less trouble by the snapping or popping noise, when the light is turned off. This usually occurs at the close of an entertainment, when the saturator is nearly empty. By not having sufficient Hydrogen, the gases form an explosive mixture.

If this explosion occurs at the tip a snapping report will be made; but no harm done. Should the explosion occur in the rubber tubes they will burst or be blown off at the jet. Should the explosion take place in the saturator it will burst the saturator.

A saturator should not be made of cast iron or any other strong material, for should it ever explode, serious results might follow.

If too much gasoline or ether is put in the tank at one time, there is danger of carrying the liquid over into the jet.

A very large saturator is not practical, as the elasticity of the gas (that is constantly being made) is such that an even flow to the jet cannot be obtained.

A saturator constructed on scientific principles should be made the right size to obtain free flow of hydrogen and have it under perfect control. When this result is obtained, then means should be provided to keep this free and even flow of gas constant.

The glass gauge, the gravity tank and regulating valve will do this. By this device the saturator will automatically be supplied with liquid to replace that which is evaporated and always gives an even flow of gas and a bright steady light.

A fire will soon cease to furnish heat if fresh fuel is not supplied. A steam boiler will explode if means are not provided for renewing the supply of water as it evaporates. A saturator will soon cease to do good work and frequently explode if means are not provided for renewing the supply of liquid as it evaporates.

No saturator can be used with satisfaction and safety more than one hour without putting in a fresh supply of gasoline or ether. So if your entertainment exceeds one hour in length you should use the improved No. 3 saturator.

The improved No. 3 saturator is practical and scientific, is simple and reliable and is the only perfect saturator made.

This saturator can be used with any portable outfit and connections for this purpose will be furnished on receipt of cap or nut to show size and thread of connection with Oxygen tank. If not convenient to send cap or nut, send a plaster paris cast made to fit half way around the connection. To insure a perfect cast first slightly oil the connection, mix the plaster paris with water to the consistency of thick paste and after placing it in proper position around the connection and while it is yet comparatively soft, cut the cast with a sharp knife, dividing it in the center. When the plaster paris cast is set, it can be easily removed without breaking. It is also advisable to always give name of the manufacturer of your calcium light outfit.

Printed directions for using are sent with each saturator which will be found very simple and easy to operate.

IMPROVED HYDROGEN OUTFIT.

The only independent automatic Hydrogen gas making outfit made. No Sulphuric acid, no zinc or iron used, no trouble to make or operate. It is automatic in action, clean, simple and economical.

Ever since the portable calcium light outfit has been used there has been a demand for a safe and convenient method of making hydrogen gas. For many years two methods of making this gas have been used.

1st—By the action of sulphuric acid on zinc or iron. The combination of these chemicals liberates free hydrogen which is stored in a gas bag or tank. The danger of handling and shipping sulphuric acid, and the time, trouble and expense of making the gas, caused this method to be but little used.

2nd—By passing oxygen through, what is termed a "saturator"; a receptacle filled with cotton and saturated with 88 gasoline or ether. When using the saturator it is connected with the oxygen tank and a portion of the oxygen passing through the liquid (gasoline or ether) converts it into hydrogen vapor. This method being much cheaper and more convenient, is the one most generally used. The serious objection to using a saturator, where oxygen gas is passed through it, is the possibility of exploding the saturator. Oxygen and hydrogen mixed in certain proportions form an explosive mixture. The question has frequently been asked, "Is it not possible to vaporize the 88 gasoline or ether without passing oxygen through the saturator?" The Arnold Improved Hydrogen outfit solves this question and does it in a most simple and satisfactory manner.

HOW MADE.

The Hydrogen tank is divided into two chambers, the lower one for compressed air or the ordinary illuminating gas, and the upper chamber contains a hydrogen generator or vaporizer. The desired pressure for the hydrogen generator is supplied direct from the lower tank "P" (see cut) instead of from the oxygen tank.

The ordinary house or illuminating gas is generally sold and used in place of hydrogen for making calcium light. When convenient to obtain this gas, it is advisable to pump it in the tank in place of air. With each outfit is furnished a pump and hose that can be quickly attached to any gas jet. Since for every pound of gas or air put in the tank, three or four pounds of hydrogen are taken out, it requires only a few minutes to pump in sufficient for several hours use—an entertainment.

The pressure in the generator part of the tank is the same as the pressure in the gas or air pressure chamber "P".

The valve regulating the flow of hydrogen gas to the light is between the tank and the light. By this arrangement you control the gas coming out of the tank and effect of the slightest movement of the valve is immediately seen at the jet, precisely the same as when using a high pressure hydrogen tank.

When a saturator is connected to an oxygen tank or gas bag the regulating valve is placed between the tank and the saturator. By this arrangement you control the gas going in the saturator, but not the gas coming out of the saturator. Everyone using a saturator connected to a tank or gas bag, knows that after moving the regulating valve to increase or decrease flow of gas it is necessary to wait a while before the full effect can be seen at the jet. The only place where full control of the gas can be had is at the outflow. This perfect regulation is obtained with the Improved Hydrogen Outfit; but it cannot be done with a saturator.

USE HIGH PRESSURE DISSOLVING KEY.

When a saturator is connected with an oxygen tank, the required pressure for forcing out the vapor, does not exceed one pound, and for this reason a saturator cannot be used for a high pressure dissolving key.

In the Improved Hydrogen outfit the gas comes directly from a high pressure chamber and a high pressure dissolving key can be used the same as with a regular hydrogen tank.

ADVANTAGES OF THE IMPROVED HYDROGEN OUTFIT OVER A SATURATOR.

- 1st. Less oxygen is consumed.
 - 2nd. The tanks are independent of each other and the gases are mixed only in the jet as they are used.
 - 3rd. No oxygen passes through the vaporizer to convert it into hydrogen vapor.
 - 4th. Instantaneous regulation of the light.
 - 5th. It can be used with any high pressure or low pressure dissolving key.
 - 6th. It will give the same results as can be obtained with a regular hydrogen tank at a much less expense.
- Directions for operating and using sent with each outfit. It is complete, extremely simple to operate and reliable.

HAVE YOU A SATURATOR?

If you have, and it gives you any trouble, don't use it. Get an Improved Hydrogen Outfit and your troubles will be over. Let us know name or style of the saturator you are using, and we will advise you what we can allow for it to apply on exchange for hydrogen outfit.

SIZE, WEIGHT AND SHIPPING CASE.

Size of tank is 12x36 inches and is made of copper and steel. Weight of tank is about 27 pounds.

The shipping case is well made of good solid material, weight about 50 pounds and can be checked as baggage. The size of case is 13x20x47. Separate apartment is provided for the tank and pump with room for a curtain or other small baggage.

Oxygen Gas Making Outfit and the Improved Hydrogen Outfit, both complete, $60.00
Pumps alone, each $5.00

If outfit is wanted without guage, deduct $5.00, making price $55.00. A guage is always sent with the Oxygen gas making outfit, and as gas is not made in Oxygen and Hydrogen outfits at the same time it is not necessary to have separate guage for each tank. However, when operating the light it is a great convenience to have guage attached to each tank, so you can tell at all times just the amount of each gas you have.

CHEMICALS.

The chemicals generally used for making Oxygen are Black Oxide of Manganese, 1 part, and Chlorate of Potash, 4 parts. The Manganese is a black powder, and the Potash is in small white pieces or crystals.

These should be of good quality, well mixed, free from dirt, scraps of paper, pieces of wood, etc. Should any carbonaceous matter (substance that will burn) be mixed with the chemicals it might take fire and cause a deal of trouble.

Black Oxide of Manganese is frequently adulterated with charcoal, which cannot be detected by the eye. For ordinary use, this would do no harm; but should never be used for making oxygen. You cannot afford to take chances of using poor chemicals. Our chemicals are the best quality, mixed ready for use, and are sold at a low price. As we handle them for convenience of the trade, all orders for chemicals should be accompanied by the cash. Each charge will require about 2½ lbs.

Price, per pound, mixed ready for use, 15 cents.

GUARANTEE.

We guarantee this outfit to be the most simple, safe and economical hydrogen outfit on the market.

We guarantee it to be superior to any Hydrogen Gas Making Outfit ever made, and if not found as represented, return it to us and we will refund your money.

SAFETY VALVE OR VENT.

FOR RETORT OR GENERATOR.

As a safeguard against danger of an accident while making gas it is deemed advisable to use a safety valve.

There are several kinds of so-called safety valves among which may be mentioned the diaphragm valve or vent, the "pop" valve and the alarm valve or whistle. They all possess points of merit; but each one is adopted for a certain class or special work.

After a series of careful experiments lasting several months, we find the diaphragm valve or vent is best adapted for use with a calcium gas making outfit.

The "pop" valve is held in position by a spring or lever which, at a certain pressure allows the valve to open. This valve works very nicely when new and free from rust and corrosion; but to insure safety, the valve should be carefully examined and tested every time gas is made. Great deal of trouble will also be experienced, trying to keep this valve from leaking. Oxygen being an odorless gas, unless great care is taken one-third of the gas might escape and you would not know it. The alarm valve is similar in construction; but is even more faulty than the "pop" valve, in as much as the whistle is easily clogged by dirt or some of the chemicals. An alarm valve or whistle is all right in a boiler to inform the attendant when the water is getting low; but to put a whistle on a calcium gas making outfit will be like blowing a whistle just before a train dashes through a broken bridge.

Very seldom an excessive pressure is obtained or an accident occurs while making gas, and you may never have occasion to use a safety valve. It is like an accident insurance policy, you may never need it; but should an accident ever occur, you want something that is reliable and can be depended upon.

The diaphragm vent valve requires neither time or attention to keep it in order and is simple, safe and reliable. As this valve does not depend on a spring or lever to keep it in position, there is no danger of it leaking. Extra diaphragms are sent witheach outfit and it requires only a few minutes to replace a damaged one.

A safety valve should be placed on the retort or generator where the passage is large so it can not be closed either by a defective gasket or by the gas forcing some of the chemicals in the small opening.

COMBINED CHECK AND SAFETY VALVE.

FOR THE SATURATOR.

This is a combination of a check valve and a safety valve, and will be found a most valuable improvement in the Calcium Light Outfit. One part of this combination is a ball valve that permits free flow of gas in one direction; but when there is a dangerous back pressure the ball automatically closes the opening leading to the saturator.

If the valve is closed absolutely tight, neither fire from the jet nor mixed gas from back pressure can enter the saturator. However, this might not always be the case and to prevent fire from coming back, (should there be no back pressure) one chamber of the valve is constructed on the principle of the Davy Safety Lamp (see Encyclopedia). In place of the wire gauze, formerly used, we fill this chamber with a fine wire that serves the purpose better and will not be injured by high pressure. The valve is small, made of brass, nickel plated and goes in the rubber tube leading to the calcium jet.

With this combined check and safety valve, neither fire from the jet nor back pressure from the mixed gases can possibly enter the saturator.

All our portable calcium light outfits are provided with these valves and are the only safe, reliable, and scientific portable outfits on the market.

GASKETS FOR TIGHT JOINT.

A very important item in the success of making and using gas, is to keep all the joints tight, so there will be no waste from leakage. Special attention should be paid to this when making an odorless gas like oxygen. As the leakage cannot be detected by the odor, half the gas might be wasted during the process of making.

A gasket for this purpose, should be one that will not be injured by heat or water; that is durable and will make a perfectly tight joint without screwing the coupling so tight to endanger it breaking.

After much experimenting we have succeeded in obtaining a composition for gaskets that meets all the requirements and can always be depended upon. So called ground joints are not reliable for road use. Should a grain of sand or a little dirt get in them, or should they get scratched or bruised in shipping, the joints will always leak and in vain effort to stop the leak the coupling is frequently screwed so tightly that it is broken.

Amet's Ozo-Carbi Light.

Manufactured under patent No. 393,737. Other U. S. and Foreign patents pending.

WHAT IS IT?

The "Ozo-Carbi" Light is the exhibitor's best friend—a light that will revolutionize the exhibition business—a new and wonderful discovery, and a rival of electricity.

It gives more light and costs less money than the best calcium (oxy-hydrogen or lime) light. No saturator or vaporizer, no gasoline or ether, no trouble or danger. It is always ready and can be used with any calcium jet or burner.

HOW IS IT MADE?

This wonderful light is made by burning carbide or acetylene gas with a compound (or modified form of oxygen) gas called "ozo." The gases are used in the same jet as oxygen and hydrogen are used in making the regular calcium or lime light.

Two tanks are used, one for the carbide and one for the "ozo" gas.

Ever since carbide or acetylene gas became a commercial article, many attempts have been made to utilize it for calcium light; but previous to Mr. Amet's discovery, all efforts to accomplish this have proved fruitless.

The burning of oxygen and hydrogen gas through a blow-pipe to heat a piece of lime to white heat (for making a light), has been in use for many years, and until the present discovery, no improvement on the original method has been made.

Calcium light is an incandescent light and the intensity of the light depends upon the degree of heat to which the lime can be heated. The hotter the lime, the brighter the light. Acetylene or carbide gas has a greater number of heat units and produces a brighter heat than any other known single gas. Oxygen and acetylene cannot be burned together in a calcium jet; but the "ozo" gas and carbide gas burn in a calcium jet the same as hydrogen and oxygen.

The new mixed gases being so much richer and possessing so many more heat units than the oxy-hydrogen gas that less is consumed and a much brighter light is obtained.

THE "OZO" GAS AND CHEMICALS.

This gas is made by heating the mixed chemicals in a retort, and as the gas is made it passes through an "electro-galvanic modifier." The chemicals used will not explode, burn or decrease in value by handling and shipping. In appearance they are dark red coarse powder, and upon application of heat gradually liberate the several different gases. The "ozo" gas is colorless, has but little odor, is not combustible and is no more dangerous to use than compressed air.

The method of making the gas is similar to the one generally used in making oxygen, but is simpler, inasmuch as no wash bottle is required. In half an hour sufficient gas (of both kinds) can be made for several hours' use.

BETTER THAN ELECTRIC LIGHT.

For general use on the road, the "ozo-carbi" light is far superior to electric light. The best electric light for stereopticon is obtained from direct current of 110 voltage, but unfortunately for the exhibitor, this current is seldom found. We do not claim this light to be stronger than an arc light that can be obtained from a direct current of this voltage; but we do claim the light to be superior to that obtained from low voltage alternating currents, such as are usually met with on the road.

An arc light from an alternating current is very noisy and unsteady and requires much time and attention to keep it burning.

The "ozo carbi" light is perfectly noiseless and steady and requires very little time or attention to keep a bright, steady light.

If you depend on electricity you will frequently be obliged to hire an electrician and occasionally will be charged an exorbitant price for the current used. Figuratively speaking, with the "ozo carbi" light, you furnish your own electricity and are your own electrician. With this new light you will succeed where others fail.

A GOOD LIGHT MEANS SUCCESS.

A good light to the exhibitor means success and a poor light means failure. Moving pictures require a much stronger light than a stereopticon slide. The latter is made of glass and remains stationary, while the former is made of celluloid and moves rapidly before the light. A picture should be sharp and distinct, and unless a bright, strong light is used, a moving picture will be dim.

The public are quick to appreciate a good picture and are as quick to condemn a poor picture. A bright, steady light means a good picture—a pleased audience—a full house and a fat purse.

The purchase of an "ozo carbi" light will be the most profitable investment you ever made.

MAKING THE "OZO" GAS.

The above cut shows the outfit connected with the retort when making the "ozo" gas. M is hood for covering retort to retain heat when using furnace or heater K. C is the galvanic modifier through which the gas passes before entering tank A. G is safety valve that in case of emergency prevents any possibility of an explosion.

The tank is made of rolled steel and is galvanized inside and outside after the tank is made. This "fills up" and "coats over" all the joints, crevices and rivet heads. It insures the tank against leakage and prevents action of gas or water from eating or rusting the iron.

Galvanizing a tank after it is made, is something new and greatly increases the life and value of the tank.

The tank weighs about 53 pounds and will hold sufficient gas for three or four hours. All brass fittings, valves and connections are polished and nickel-plated.

The "ozo" gas is very easily made. The mixed chemicals are placed in retort H, heat is applied, and as the "ozo" gas is liberated it passes through the galvanic modifier C and is stored in the tank.

FURNACE OR HEATER K is not included in outfit.

Any other method may be used to heat the retort; but if the furnace is used, much better results will be obtained by covering the retort with with a hood to confine the heat.

Price of furnace, with hood,

$5.00 extra

MAKING THE CARBIDE GAS.

This cut shows the outfit as connected when making the carbide or acetylene gas. The carbide generator is also provided with a safety valve, that render the manufacture of the gas perfectly safe.

The carbide or acetylene tank is not so heavy as the tank used for the "ozo" gas, and an apartment for it is provided in the shipping case. It is made of copper and thin rolled steel. The main part of the tank is painted, the copper part is polished, and lacquered and all brass fittings, valves and connections are polished and nickel plated. The tank is light and strong, weighing about 22 pounds, and holds sufficient gas for three or four hours.

No heat is required to make the carbide gas and by its own expansion it is stored in the tank. The "Duplex" generator is a combined generator and wash bottle. The process is very simple and in a few minutes sufficient gas for several entertainments can be made.

"OZO-CARBI" LIGHT IN USE.

This cut shows the "ozo-carbi" gas outfit as it appears when connected with a stereopticon.

A is stem of tank valve that is operated by a cylinder wrench furnished with the outfit. B is a regulating valve that is operated by the hand and is to be removed when the tank is packed for shipping. Each tank is provided with a gauge as well as a regulating valve. The gauges indicate at all times the amount of gas in each tank, and the regulating valves give the operator perfect control of the gas and insure an even, steady flow to the burner.

IS IT DANGEROUS?

There is no more danger in using a tank of carbide gas and a tank of "ozo" gas, than there is in using a tank of hydrogen and oxygen.

Some people have an idea that the use of carbide gas is dangerous. On this question we refer you to the Scientific American, Acetylene Journal, or any other work of authority. They will all tell you there is no more danger in using carbide gas than there is in ordinary house or illuminating gas, and some even claim, for general use, there is less danger. The generator is so constructed and the amount of carbide is so small that, practically, there is no danger whatever in making the gas. As a safeguard against danger from an accident while making gas, a safety valve is provided. It is very seldom an excessive pressure is obtained or an accident occurs; but in case of an emergency the safety valve will relieve the excessive pressure and no harm will be done. The generator for making the carbide gas and the retort for making the "ozo" gas are both provided with a safety valve.

WEIGHT AND SHIPPING CASE.

The outfit when ready for shipping consists of one tank and one shipping case. The shipping case contains the carbide tank, carbide generator, the "ozo" gas making outfit and two cans for chemicals and carbide.

Total weight of complete outfit is about 175 pounds, and can be checked as baggage. With each outfit is sent complete printed instructions, which will be found very simple.

Price, Outfit complete for both gases,	$75 00
Chemicals for "ozo" gases, per lb.,	15
Carbide for acetylene gas, 10 lb. can,	1 50
" " " " " " " "	6 00

It is always advisable to have some chemicals shipped with the outfit.

For every hour's use it will require about $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. carbide for the acetylene gas and 1 lb. chemicals for the "ozo" gas. The price of chemicals for making the "ozo" gas is so low that no discount is made for larger quantity. The carbide for making the acetylene gas can be purchased in almost any city or town.

GUARANTEE.

This light is something entirely new and we guarantee it to be just as represented—superior to anything on the market—more simple to operate, brighter and stronger—more safe to use than any gas making tank outfit ever made. We will forfeit $100 to anyone who can prove that this is not the safest portable calcium tank outfit on the market. We will also forfeit $100 to anyone who can explode one of these outfits when directions are followed. The most enthusiastic advocate of the "ozo-carbi" light will be the exhibitor who has had experience with calcium and electric light. It is such a relief after using an unreliable, dim, or "wheezy" light, that a trial of the "ozo-carbi" light will always gain for it a most enthusiastic friend and advocate.

To introduce this light to the exhibitor, we will take your outfit in exchange as part payment on a new one.

REGULATING VALVE.

The main part of this valve is made from one solid piece of brass and the needle pointed stem of the best steel. The valve is nickel plated and polished and provided with fine adjustment for regulating the flow of gas.

A regulating valve will not only save the consumption of gas; but will also give a more steady and brighter light.

By using a regulating valve the light can be "set" before the entertainment begins and thereby save the delay and annoyance of adjusting the light after the audience is assembled.

To "set the light" open tank valve freely and adjust the flow of gas by the regulating valve. To turn off the light, close the tank valve and leave the regulating valve set.

ELECTRICITY

AS APPLIED TO THE STEREOPTICON.

Electric arc light is the best artificial light used for projecting purposes. This is not only due to its brilliancy, but radiating from a small point there is no loss of light. An arc light cannot be made from a battery, but must be taken from a current where a dynamo is used. Electric light is rapidly coming into general use and there is little danger in handling it when taken from a regular incandescent current.

Electric currents are of two kinds: alternating and direct (sometimes called continuous current). An arc light from an alternating current makes a deal of noise, while an arc light from a direct current is practically noiseless. A direct current is therefore always preferable. When using electric light for a stereopticon, the carbons should be tilted at an angle to throw the light forward, toward the condensing lenses.

With direct current, both carbons should stand at an angle of about 25 degrees. The top carbon (when they both feed alike) should be a little larger than the lower one and point of the lower carbon should be about one-eighth of an inch further forward than point of the top carbon.

When using direct current, the positive wire should be connected with the top carbon, otherwise the light will burn, as it is termed, "up-side-down." You can tell which is the positive wire by allowing the light to burn a few minutes, then throw the switch and look at the carbons while they are still red. The carbon that is the redder and remains hot the longer is connected with the positive wire. If this should be the lower carbon, change the wires at the lamp, so the positive wire will go to the top carbon. The current should reach the lamp first and return through the rheostat.

With alternating current, both carbons should be of the same size and both soft cored. The carbon holders should have a swivel joint and the carbons tilted so the points of both carbons project out at an angle of about 45 degrees. In alternating current both wires are the same, so you cannot burn the light "up-side-down." New carbons should always be pointed before using; but after burning awhile the ends will assume the correct shape and remain so until the carbons are entirely consumed.

DISSOLVING.

DISSOLVING BY ELECTRICITY.—In dissolving by electric light, you cannot gradually turn off one light and on the other as can be done with calcium light. Both electric lights must be kept burning all the time, and it requires two electric lamps and two rheostats. The dissolver is a mechanical device placed in front of the projecting lenses. The shutter is worked by a lever and as the end of one lens is covered, the end of the other lens is opened. By this means the curtain is never dark. As the picture in one lantern gradually disappears the picture in the other lantern gradually takes its place.

TO CONNECT ELECTRIC LAMP AND RHEOSTAT.

DIAGRAM FOR DISSOLVING STEREOPTICON

DIAGRAM FOR SINGLE STEREOPTICON

There are several methods of connecting a Double Dissolving Electric Stereopticon; but the above method is considered one of the most convenient. Each light being controlled by a separate switch, the two lanterns are operated independent of each other. On the top end of each rheostat there are two thumb screws for fastening the wire.

THE FUSE BLOCK near the machine should be provided with a smaller fuse than the one controlling the current supplying the lights of the house. The Fuse Block is used simply as a protection for the house lights in case of an accident at the machine. It is made of porcelain and used to connect the fuse with the supply wire. About 30 or 40 amperes will be required for operating a double dissolving electric lantern and connection should be made at the main switch or on a wire large enough to carry 40 amperes. See that the fuse on main wire will carry at least 50 amperes, and the fuse on your fuse block (near the lantern) 35 or 40 amperes. It would be well to always have with you some extra fuse wire and a number of fuse plugs that will carry 50 or 60 amperes.

FUSE or fuse wire is a composition metal, of a low melting point, similar in appearance to lead. If more current is taken through the wire than is intended it should carry, the fuse will melt and the current will be broken.

The size or amount of current a fuse will carry without melting is indicated by amperes. A combined fuse block and switch will be found more convenient to use than to have a switch and fuseblock separate.

CONNECTING SINGLE STEREOPTICON.—As will be seen by the diagram, one wire goes direct to the lamp and the other wire to the rheostat. The single lantern is much more simple to "connect up" and operate than the double lantern. It is advisable to become familiar with operating a single lantern before undertaking to operate a double dissolving one.

A single lantern will require 15 or 20 amperes of current, No. 12 wire and 25 ampere fuse should be used.

TO MAKE ELECTRIC CONNECTIONS.—1st connect the electric lamp, rheostat and switch as shown in the diagram for single lantern. 2nd see that the switch at the machine is open and the carbons are separated. 3rd connect your flexible cable wire to the supply wire at the switch board. Many houses provide a wall socket, screw plug or a switch, for convenient attachment of a stereopticon. When no such provision is provided, attachment can be made direct to the main switch or on one of the house circuits. Connections with the house wire should always be so made that current to the machine can be supplied while the house is in darkness.

See that the set screws holding the carbons in the lamp and the set screws holding the wire in the switch, rheostat and lamp are all tight.

TO START THE LIGHT.—When all the connections are properly made, close the switch and screw the carbons close enough together to start the light. Soon as you see a spark separate the carbons far enough to obtain a bright light. If the carbons are separated too much it will "break the current" and the light will go out. If the carbons are too near together, the arc will be so small that full power of the light will not be obtained. The points of the carbons should be far enough apart to show a little blaze. By the "arc" is meant the light, which is the distance between the points of the two carbons. As the carbons are consumed they must be screwed closer together, otherwise the distance between the carbons will be so great that the current cannot, figuratively speaking, jump from one carbon to the other and the light will go out.

THE RHEOSTAT.

A rheostat, or resistance coil, is used to convert an incandescent current into an arc light. Most of rheostats on the market are made for currents of 110 volts. Some are adjustable for any voltage below 110, while others have set connections and can be used only on current of 52 or 110 voltage. All our rheostats are adjustable, with sliding contact, and by it the light can be used on any voltage below 110, and the degree of light can be increased or decreased, as desired. When moving contact slide adjustment to increase brightness of the light care should be taken that the rheostat is not "burned out" that is, the wire melted in two).

The larger the wire used in making a rheostat, the greater amount of current will be consumed, and (if the carbons are the right size), a bright light will be obtained. If the current is too strong for the size of the carbons, there will be too much of a blaze at the carbon point and full benefit of the current can not be obtained. The usual rheostat for stereopticon use is for 15 or 20 amperes and $\frac{1}{2}$ inch carbon should be used in the electric lamp. For 25 or 30 amperes use $\frac{3}{8}$ carbons.

WATER RHEOSTAT.

Water can be used as a substitute for a resistance coil and will often be found a great convenience if not a necessity. In case of an emergency it can be used in place of a regular wire rheostat; but the principal use of a water rheostat is to reduce the voltage of a strong current. Should you carry a rheostat large enough to reduce a 500 volt street car circuit, it would not only be an expensive investment but would also be cumbersome and heavy.

HOW MADE.

Take a tub or barrel that does not leak and fill it nearly full of water. Dissolve in a pail of warm water $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ pound of washing soda and same amount of salt and add this solution to the water.

Take the ends of the wire that is attached to the rheostat, cut off the insulation (covering) two or three inches, leaving the copper wire bare, and securely fasten each end of the wire to a different piece of metal, that is convenient. A car link or coupling pin will serve the purpose very well. Place both these pieces of metal, attached to the wire, in the water. As the distance between these two pieces of metal is increased or decreased, so will the resistance and strength of the light be increased or decreased. The pieces of metal should be from one to two inches apart. A convenient way is to place one piece of metal with wire attached in bottom of the tub or barrel and hang the other piece of metal over the side directly above the metal in the tub. The piece of metal can be lowered or raised in the water as desired; but care should be used that they do not touch each other. The electricity will act upon the metal, gradually dissolving it.

Another way of regulating the resistance is to suspend both pieces partly emerged in the water from an insulated bar across the top of the tub.

After making a water rheostat a few times it will be found very simple; but to begin with it would be well to experiment with a current of low voltage.

CAUTION—Do not use a leaky tub or barrel—see that the floor around the tub is dry—do not allow the two pieces of metal to touch each other—be sure the switch is open when fixing the rheostat—always have an electrician to assist when connecting a 500 volt circuit.

GENERAL INFORMATION ON ELECTRICITY.

No electric outfit is complete without 50 or 100 feet of wire to convey the current from the main supply wire to the stereopticon. No. 12 lamp cord is large enough for a single lantern and being a flexible cable will be found more convenient for use on the road than the cheaper electric line wire. For double stereopticon No. 8 or 10 wire should be used. If not convenient to obtain this size, use No. 12 lamp cord and double it. If the wire is too small, it not only checks the supply of current, but there is danger of over heating the wire and burning off the insulation.

Should you wish to adjust or change the wire or carbons in the electric lamp, first throw the current off the lamp by opening the switch. The carbon holders are insulated so there is no danger of a shock by adjusting the light. A shock from an incandescent current of a 110 volts or less, is not sufficient to cause any alarm; but great care should be exercised when using a 500 volt circuit. This current (500 volts) is the usual strength of a street car current and is frequently used for lighting the opera house or hall. Always consult the local electrician when using this current and never attempt to use a high tension arc (1500 or 2000 volt) current.

Place your fuse block and switch on the end of the operating table or in some convenient place near the machine. There are holes in the porcelain base for screws to hold it firmly in place. Never allow the ends of the two "live" wires to touch each other or to touch the same piece of metal. If any conductor of electricity should touch both sides of the metal part of the switch at the same time, there will be a flash of light from the arc made at the switch. So if the switch should be placed on top of the operating table, see that there are no carbons, tools, or metal near it.

Never look directly at an arc light unless wearing dark colored glasses. There is not only danger of injuring the eyes; but the light will (for the time being) "blind you" so you will not be able to tell when the picture is in sharp focus.

Care should be used in selecting only the best quality of carbons. The ordinary street light carbons have hard spots in them, that will cause the light at times to hiss badly and grow dim.

Some electric lamps are provided with a double screw feed, where for direct current, the top carbon is moved twice as fast as the lower carbon. When this lamp is used, both carbons are the same size whether used on direct or alternating current. The single feed lamp is much more simple in construction and more satisfactory to use than the double feed.

ELECTRIC SWITCH AND FUSE.

This cut shows a fuse and switch combined ("fused switch") with the connecting wire attached. Wires "a" are the supply wires that lead from the switch board to the machine. Wires "b" are the wires that lead to the rheostat and electric lamp. "c" are the fuse links or wire that connects the supply wires with those leading to the machine. "D" is an enlarged view of fuse links with copper terminal. If more current is consumed than the fuse is intended to carry, the fuse will be melted in two and your light will go out. Ordinary fuse wire can be used in place of fuse links. When ordering fuse links or fuse wire, always state the amperes wanted. This "fused switch" is much more convenient to use than a separate switch and fuse block. It has a slate base and is one of the best made.

ELECTRIC WIRE.

Every exhibitor using electricity should carry 50 or 100 feet of electric wire in his outfit, to convey the current from switch board to the machine. Flexible cable or lamp cord will be found much more convenient to use, when on the road, than the regular line wire. It consists of many strands of fine copper wire insulated with rubber or okonite. Being thoroughly insulated, it can be laid on the floor or handled without getting a shock. When ordering wire, remember the larger the number the smaller the wire, that is, No. 12 wire is larger than No. 14.

Do not attempt to use a wire too small as there is danger of over heating and melting it off. The ordinary electric lamp cord used on an incandescent bulb is too small to convey the required amount of current for a regular stereopticon light. It might be used and no serious results follow; but it is taking chances and violating the fire insurance law.

To splice an electric wire cut off the insulation leaving the copper wire bare and bright for two or three inches. Twist the two ends of the bare copper wire securely together and wind it with insulating tape.

No. 12 wire should be used for single stereopticon and No. 8 or 10

ELECTRIC READING LAMP.

This is something new and has the advantage of being clean and always ready for use. The battery is enclosed in an oak case and the light is turned on by simply turning the switch.

The bell reflector is movable so the light can be thrown at any angle desired. All metal parts are nickel plated and polished. The battery will give a continuous light for about five hours and when used for only a short period at a time the strength of the battery will be restored and thus remain active for a long time. The bulb is frosted and gives a soft, even light. A red bulb costs 50 cents and by substituting it for the white one, the lamp can be used in a dark room while developing photographic plates.

The Phonograph or Graphophone.

ITS VALUE AS AN ENTERTAINER.

One of the most efficient adjuncts to the stereopticon, and which insures one of the most instructive and charming entertainments that can be given, is the association of a high grade phonograph with a stereopticon or moving picture outfit. As there is no method of reproducing the real object to the vision, except by use of the stereopticon, so there is no other means of reproducing the real voice of music, song or speech to the hearing, except by the phonograph.

By associating the two you appeal to both the eye and the ear, and can give a most scientific and instructive entertainment.

You can take your audience, in one evening, around the world, viewing the most magnificent places and historic scenes while charming them with song and music as discoursed by the most famous artists. You have an orchestra or a band, piccolo or cornet solo, zyllophone or banjo, all the popular songs, as solos, or the sweet blending of voices in quartet. They are always at your command and ready when called upon. There are no hotel bills or railroad fares to pay.

We are not referring to the ordinary little phonograph you have heard, but the "Concert Grand," that uses a record 15 inches in circumference, the music from which will fill the largest hall or opera house. The volume and quality of tone is nearly equal to the original music from which the record is made.

Music and pictures are something that all people, old or young, of every nation, appreciate and understand. With this high grade phonograph and choice selection of records, any audience can be entertained. If you will leave the selecting of records to us we will give you the benefit of our experience, and send only those that will be popular with your audience.

New Graphophone $25.00.

This photographic illustration gives the exact likeness of an entirely new type of graphophone which on one machine reproduces both the Grand records, which are about 5 inches in diameter and the small records, which are about 2 1/4 inches in diameter. It also makes records on both style cylinders. The change from one cylinder or record to the other can be made in 10 seconds.

Besides its other advantages this instrument is provided with an entirely new feature which has never before appeared on any graphophone. This is a dial speed indicator, which, by the position of a pointer, enables the operator to tell at a glance the speed at which the machine is running, and to adjust the speed as desired by merely moving the pointer.

Its equipment consists of a very handsome cabinet, as illustrated, a reproducer, a recorder, and a 14 inch aluminum horn, price $25.00.

Reading Lamp.

A reading lamp for a stereopticon or moving picture entertainment is almost a necessity, especially if any manuscript is to be read. As the room should be kept dark, it is necessary to have a lamp that will concentrate the rays upon the manuscript without diffusing them through the room. A reading lamp using a candle is much preferable to one using oil. There is no danger of leaking when packed with other goods, and it is much cleaner to handle. The light is supplied by a special candle, held in position by a spring, that keeps the flame burning in the same place. Each candle will burn about four (4) hours.

Condensing Lens Mounting.

The best results for condensing the light are obtained by placing two plano-convex lenses with the oval or convex sides toward each other, as shown in above cut. They should fit tight enough to be held firmly in position, and still have a little room for expansion when hot.

Condensing Lens, Unmounted.

Objective Lens.

One of the most important points to consider in selecting a lantern is the objective lens.

In the cheapest lanterns a simple plano or double convex lens is used; but the better class of lanterns have a double achromatic lens. The quality and price of these vary greatly, depending on grade of material used and the time and labor spent in their construction. Every lens manufacturer makes two grades of lenses, putting their name and serial number only on the better grade. So when ordering lens of certain make, to be sure of getting the best grade, see that the name, address and number is stamped on the lens.

SPECIAL COMBINATION LENS.

We can supply a projecting lens with interchangeable back and front combinations, making the following size lenses: $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{3}{4}$, $\frac{2}{3}$ and 4:4.

CARBONS.

FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT.

It is impossible to obtain a good light with poor carbons and care should therefore be used in their selection.

Ordinary carbons, such as are generally used for street light are not suitable for stereopticon or moving picture machine.

Cheap carbons make a deal of dust when burning; they have hard spots in them that cause the light to grow dim at times and to make a loud hissing noise. We carry in stock a specially prepared carbon for stereopticon and other high grade electric arc light use. The combustion is even and perfect and practically, they produce no dust. They give a brilliant, uniform light and produce the highest standard candle power in proportion to the current consumed. We carry the following sizes in stock: 5-16, 7-16, $\frac{1}{2}$ and 9-16.

Price, 5-16 solid.....	$.60c per dozen.
7-16 solid.....	.65c " "
7-16 cored.....	.75c " "
$\frac{1}{2}$ cored.....	.85c " "
9-16 cored.....	1.20 " "

For direct current 15 to 20 amperes, use $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch top and 7-16 bottom; if using 25 to 30 amperes, use 9-16 top and $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch bottom.

For alternating current use 7-16 or $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch carbons, according to the number of amperes used. If you order 7-16 and $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch, carbons will give sufficient variety for general use on either current. For further information regarding use of carbons see Electricity, page 222.

Tinters.

Tinters are usually made of colored gelatine or glass, and a few bright colors will be found a valuable addition to an outfit.

For throwing colored lights on a tableau, the tinters should be used in a slide carrier or color wheel; but when used to tint a picture, they should be held in front of the projecting lens. They will be found useful for throwing tinted background on statuary and for giving to scenery a sunset or moonlight effect. With a little practice, a pleasing effect can be obtained by blending or dissolving one color into another.

We have two kinds of tinters; both are the same size as an ordinary stereopticon slide. One is made of colored gelatine between two cover glasses, and the other is colored glass. Gelatine is more easily affected by heat, and is therefore not so durable.

Price, Gelatine slide.....	15 cents.
Colored glass.....	25 cents.

MOVING PICTURE FILMS.

We have separate catalogue of moving picture films, which will be furnished on application. When selecting moving picture films, care should be taken to not only select interesting subjects; but those that are sharp, clear and distinct. You cannot judge the value or quality of a film by the name or description. If you will leave selection of film to us, we will give you the benefit of our experience and send you only those that are sharp and clear and interesting to the public.

COLORED FILMS.

Beware of cheap colored films. Some firms advertise to color films for two or three dollars each. This so-called coloring is simply tinting the film, or perhaps only a small part of each picture has a little color daubed on it. Many a good plain film is ruined and rendered hideous by this kind of work.

There are between seven and eight hundred pictures on a fifty foot film and to color them artistically, requires an expert artist and great deal of time.

Films colored by us are colored in entire. Not only the faces; but the furniture; carpets, wall paper and draperies are artistically colored and blended in pleasing harmony.

We keep in stock the following colored films: The American Flag, Skirt Dance and the Fire Dance. These films are beautifully colored by a high class artist who makes a specialty of coloring films. The great advantage of these films is, that the picture on the screen is the same, whether it is run forward or backward. A film of this kind can therefore be kept on the curtain as long as desired and in value to the exhibitor, is equal to a 150 foot film.

As a closing picture, there is nothing that will receive applause equal to a beautifully colored film of the American Flag waving in the breeze. It can be shown in any church or theater and will be found the most profitable investment an exhibitor can make. Coloring greatly improves some films, while others the improvement is not sufficient to warrant the additional expense. The American Flag and the Fire Dance without color are of comparative little value; but when properly colored always win big applause.

Price, Skirt Dance, Fire Dance, or American Flag, Colored $10 each. This price includes both the film and the coloring.

Price for coloring other films will vary according to the subject.

EXHIBITION OUTFITS.

So many combinations and different priced outfits can be made, even with the same style lantern, that we do not consider it practical to make a large list of complete outfits. In the list of outfits given here will be found a few of the most popular outfits in combination with the Leader Lantern (see description page 31). Should none of these meet with your approval, they will serve as a guide in selecting other outfits. If any one will select from the catalogue the style of lantern and light they prefer, we will take this as a basis and quote a price on a complete exhibition outfit; with itemized list.

MOVING PICTURES.

We would recommend the addition of a moving picture machine to all lecture outfits. Although a full entertainment can be given with only a stereopticon and slides, still the addition of moving pictures will greatly increase the attendance and yield better returns.

When used as part of an entertainment there should be about a dozen moving picture films. If not convenient to purchase this number to start with, three or four can be used and others added from the profits of the first few entertainments.

ILLUSTRATED SONGS.

One of the most popular additions to an entertainment is illustrated songs. While the song is being sung, slides illustrating the principal scenes, as described by the words, are thrown on the curtain. If the entertainment is given for a church or society, local talent can usually be found who will donate their services. By interesting home talent you increase the popularity of your entertainment.

TALKING MACHINE.

We do not refer to the little phonograph you have heard; but the latest improved concert grand machines using a large concert record. The volume and quality of tone is nearly equal to the original music from which the record was made. One of these machines will not only give an excellent variety of instrumental music; but will also be found most valuable for singing illustrated songs. The Victor Monarch Talking Machine uses the disk or flat record made of hard rubber. (See page 238). The advantage of this style record is the small space in which they can be carried and the fact that they are not so easily broken. List of records for Talking Machines sent on application. See Catalogue for description.

RENTED GAS TANKS.

In place of buying a calcium light outfit to start with, rented tanks can be used. In nearly all large cities there are firms who sell gas in tanks ready for use. It is necessary to have two tanks, one for hydrogen and one for oxygen. Approximate weight of the large tanks is 200 pounds, and they contain sufficient gas to burn six or eight hours. Cost of the gas is about $6.25, to which must be added transportation charges (see page 201).

Exhibition Outfit No. 1. Price $43.00.

Leader Lantern, double slide carrier, No. 2 carrying case, acetylene generator, acetylene burner, 5 pounds of carbide (for acetylene gas), curtain or screen, our special make, (see page 230), dating outfit (see page 250) and 1000 admission tickets.

Exhibition Outfit No. 2. Price $53.00.

If a double dissolving lantern is preferred in place of the single Leader, add $38.00 to above outfit.

Exhibition Outfit No. 3. Price $79.00.

Consists of outfit No. 1, Improved Model No. 3 Optigraph moving picture machine and double quick change (see page 38 and 243).

Exhibition Outfit No. 4. Price $81.00.

Consists of outfit No. 4 with the No. 3 improved calcium light gas making outfit (page 201), graphophone (page 234), 42 inch concert horn, stand for concert horn and twelve grand records. If the "ozo-carbi" light is preferred in place of the No. 3 calcium outfit, add $35.00 to the price.

Exhibition Outfit No. 6. Price $398.00.

For 2 or 3 Night Stands.

Double dissolving Leader Lantern, with two $\frac{1}{4}$ size large barrel genuine Bausch & Lomb projecting lenses, bearing their name and serial number, No. 3 improved model Optigraph Moving Picture Machine, with special lens, double quick change swing attachment, No. 1 carrying case for double lantern and Optigraph, two calcium light burners with mechanical lime turners, two best electric arc lamps, two rheostats, three electric switches, 50 feet electric cable, one can lime sticks, one dozen best electric carbons, improved style of curtain 15x15, two double slide carriers, No. 3 improved calcium gas making outfit with large tank, two sets of slides (52 each) with lecture, two carrying cases for slides each holding 100 slides, 30 comic slides, colored, one welcome and one good-night slide, colored, five illustrated songs, colored, twenty-four 50-ft. moving picture films, one of which is colored, either a Victor Monarch or a Graphophone Grand talking machine, two dozen grand records, film mender, bottle film cement, 15 feet blank film, reading lamp, electric signal, calcium light dissolver, electric light dissolver, 25 pounds of mixed chemicals for making gas, 3000 advertising posters and 2000 admission tickets.

The comic, the welcome and good-night slides, the illustrated song slides, and ten slides in each set of the lecture are all beautifully colored. One of the moving picture films (Waving of the American Flag) is also colored.

The above outfit is one of the largest and most complete exhibition outfits on the market. Two entertainments can be given with entire change of program, or three with partial change. The additional expense of remaining one more night in a place is small, and with this high grade outfit the receipts of the second night will exceed that of the first. To make special provisions for church or some religious society on Sunday evenings will pay for your entire outfit in six months.

Those who are making the most money are provided with outfits similar to the above, and we would advise purchasing an outfit like this when it is possible to do so.

List price of this outfit is $532.25, but we have made the very low price of $398.00 and it will pay you to make a special effort to secure it.

Anything can be added or deducted from this or any of the outfits, and we will be pleased to quote prices on such changes.

GASOLINE AND ETHER.

In making calcium light, gasoline and ether are both used in saturator as a substitute for hydrogen gas. A small quantity of oxygen gas from a tank or gas bag is allowed to pass through the saturator, which carries the gasoline or ether vapor to the jet. The ordinary gasoline cannot be used as it will not vaporize rapidly enough. 88 or 90 test gasoline is much more volatile, and is the only kind that can be satisfactorily used. About one-half pint is sufficient for a two hours' entertainment.

When sulphuric ether is used in saturator only the best grade should be used. As good results can be obtained with 88 gasoline as with ether, and it is much cheaper.

Price, 88 gasoline, 1 gallon can.....	$.50.

Sulphuric ether, per pound.....	1.00.

GLASS TANK.

Will fit the regular slide stage and can be used to show on the screen, chemical experiments, live specimens of small fish, leeches, etc. This tank is made entirely of glass, so there is no danger of leaking.

Will it Pay?

x x x

THIS is the question that naturally rises when one anticipates embarking in a new enterprise. Ten years ago it was prophesied that the stereopticon, as an entertainer, would be less used in the future than it was at that time. This, however, was a mistake, for the demand has been increasing ever since and today it is used more for entertainments than ever before. When you add a moving picture machine to the stereopticon, you double its value.

No other class of entertainment has so large a field in which to work, and no other can be operated at so small an expense. There are public halls, schools, churches, fairs, lodges, and an endless number of different societies where exhibitions can be given.

Another profitable channel is street advertising. Live business men are always ready to patronize any attractive method of advertising, for which they are willing to pay a good price. Advertising slides for this work can be made with a kodak by any amateur, or the local photographer will make them at small expense. They should be interspersed with comic slides of local scenes, portraits of prominent people, or still better with moving pictures.

Churches and societies are usually glad of an opportunity to raise money for their own financial assistance, and for a share of the receipts will sell the tickets and distribute the advertising posters.

It is not necessary to prepare your own lecture or to be a public speaker. Printed lectures on almost all subjects can be obtained, which are to be read as the slides are thrown on the screen. In all our lectures, each paragraph has a number to correspond with the slide, so no mistake or delay can be made. Many of the most successful exhibitors have never spoken in public before.

Some give the entire entertainment alone. This can be done by memorizing the lecture and describing each slide as it is thrown on the screen.

For one with limited capital, the small towns offer a good field. These people have few opportunities to see an entertainment; they are easily pleased and are liberal patrons of anything in this line.

About fifty views with printed lecture is usually sufficient for an entertainment. A few comic slides, however, will please the juvenile part of the audience and add "spice" to the exhibition.

Moving pictures are still in their infancy, and as improvements are made will grow in favor with the public. The fact of being able to bring to our very door all the important events of the world in actual life and motion, is sufficient proof that this class of entertainment will never grow old.

The Victor III Talking Machine, with flat hard rubber records, as shown in another part of this catalogue, will be found a valuable addition to an entertainment. With a combined stereopticon and moving picture machine and one of these Grand Concert talking machines, you can reproduce, at your command, all that is beautiful to the eye and all that is pleasing to the ear.

In every locality there is an opening for a man with small capital, and if you will only let it be known that you are prepared to give this kind of an entertainment, you will have little difficulty in procuring engagements.

The labor is light, the employment pleasant; expenses are small and the profits large when well advertised.

There are a few who have gone into this business and made a failure. This can usually be traced to an inferior machine and a class of views of no interest to the public, or to the exhibitor himself, who lacks sufficient tact and energy to manage the business and who no doubt has made a failure of everything he has undertaken. "A business neglected, is a business failure." For a steady, industrious man there is a good living and a good profit.

We have had twenty years' experience as exhibitors and manufacturers, and are always ready to give any suggestions or information to those who anticipate purchasing an outfit. Our dark room is provided with all kinds of lights used for projecting work, and is especially adapted for instruction and practice. Personal instructions are not necessary. By following the printed directions, anyone of ordinary intelligence can learn to operate the apparatus. Still, where convenient to do so, it would be time well spent to call on us, select your outfit, and receive personal instructions and practice under a competent operator.

Many who anticipate purchasing a lantern are at a loss to know what style of lantern to select or of whom to purchase it. We regret to state that there are many inferior lanterns and slides on the market—that from inferior goods, fine cuts can be made and cleverly worded descriptions given, that (with the low price usually quoted) "catch the unwary victim". From a cut you cannot tell the grade of material, class of workmanship or quality of lenses. We always have on hand a stock of second hand lanterns and point with pride to the fact that they are lanterns of other makes than our own. We usually get them in exchange from experienced exhibitors who have learned the difference between a poor instrument and a good one and who recognize and appreciate the superior quality of our lantern. Do not buy a lantern simply because it is cheap. Select what you think best adapted for your work even though it may cost a little more.

The first thing to decide in selecting a lantern, is whether you want a single one or a double dissolving lantern—the next question is the light—whether electric, oxy-hydrogen (calcium), acetylene, etc., and the last to consider is the slides or views. The latter can be rented if desired which will be found very convenient for those who are permanently located. We are the largest manufacturers of slides, stereopticons and supplies in this country—we occupy more space, employ more help than any other firm in our line and are therefore in position to furnish the best goods for the least money. Our goods must be seen to be appreciated.

Should you anticipate a visit to our city, we would be pleased to have your mail sent in our care and have you make our place your headquarters.

Setting Up and Operating a Lantern.

Care should be taken to have a good firm rest for the instrument, as the least shaking or movement of the lens is greatly magnified on the screen.

To obtain the best results, the lantern should be elevated as nearly on a level with the center of the screen as possible. When this is not convenient, tilt the lantern sufficiently so the light will be thrown on center of the curtain. If the instrument is tilted a good deal it would be well to tilt the screen to correspond. When using a short focus objective lens, the lantern is always placed near the screen and the nearer the screen, the less the lantern should be tilted. The same rule applies to placing the lantern on an angle with the screen it should be directly in front.

Place the lantern at proper distance from the screen to obtain the desired size picture, the greater the distance from the screen the larger the picture. Care should be taken to have the lenses clean, and if necessary to remove the glasses, be careful to replace them in the same order you found them.

Instructions for Single Lantern with Calcium Light.

Examine the tubes and blow pipe (light jet) to see that they are free from all obstructions. Place the lime pencil in the holder, so that in revolving it will keep at same distance from the tip of burner. When in proper position the lime should be from an eighth to a quarter of an inch from the tip, the distance varying according to the angle the tip is bent. If the lime is too close, the light will make great deal of noise, and if too far away, the light will not be so bright. After the lime is in position, place the burner in the lamp house, and by means of the rubber tubing, connect the burner with the tanks. Slowly open the hydrogen (black) tank and light at the tip. When the blaze is four or five inches above the lime, slowly turn on the oxygen (red) tank, until the blaze is nearly consumed. The hydrogen gas should always be slightly in excess, which will be indicated by little orange color around edge of the light. Adjust the amount of hydrogen and oxygen to obtain the best light with the least noise—place the burner so there is some light on the curtain—put slide carrier with a slide in the lantern—open or close bellows as the case may require, until an approximate focus is obtained—remove the slide and proceed to "clear up" the field. To do this see cuts and instructions "How to get a good light on curtain" page 11.

After a clear field or good light on the curtain is obtained then replace the slide before the condensing lens and "make the picture sharp" by the thumb screw on the objective lens. Do not look directly at the light in the lantern, as it will "blind" the eyes, so you cannot tell when the picture is in perfect focus. You can look at the back of the lime, or in nearly all lanterns there is a colored glass on side of the lamp house through which you can see the light.

Instructions for Double Dissolving Lantern with Calcium Light.

A dissolving apparatus consists of two lanterns of same design, so arranged that a view from each lantern can be alternately thrown on the screen. As one view disappears, the other appears in the same place and without darkening the screen.

To set up dissolving lantern, proceed with each lantern same as instructions for "Single Lantern with Calcium Light". After clear field is obtained and both lanterns are in focus, put a slide in each lantern and move the slide carriers a little to one side or the other to match the pictures sideways. Then tilt the top lantern up or drawn as the case may require to match the pictures up and down. The idea is to have both pictures cover the same place on the screen. Our "Leader" lantern is provided with special side and up and down adjusting screws which make registering the pictures very convenient. Great improvement will be found in using a slide carrier with a metal mat (see index for Improved Double Slide Carrier).

The Dissolving Key for Calcium Light.

By a simple device called a "dissolving key," the light from one lantern is "turned" into the other. By this means one view gradually blends, or dissolves into the other—as one fades away the other gradually takes its place. Of dissolving keys there are two kinds, namely the low pressure and high pressure. The low pressure key can be used with two tanks or with one tank and saturator, while the high pressure key can be used only with two tanks.

A dissolving key should occasionally be taken apart, cleaned and oiled. The oil and dirt should be removed with tissue paper or something free from grit. Care should be used not to scratch or injure the plug or seal when the dissolver is apart. Much time and skill is required to make a high pressure key and a scratch or little grit might cause the dissolver to leak, which would practically ruin it. Before the "plug" is put back in place, carefully wipe all the oil out of the grooves and see that the nipples are clear. Vaseline is better than oil for dissolving key.

Instructions for Using a Low Pressure Dissolving Key.

With low pressure key the amount of gas consumed is regulated by the valve at the tank and the gas therefore passes into the dissolver only as fast as it is consumed by the burners, i. e. the tank valve must occasionally be opened a little as the gas is consumed.

With the rubber tubes connect the blow pipe, or jet, of one lantern to one side of the dissolving key, and the other lantern to the other side of the dissolving key. The remaining two nipples of dissolving key should be connected with gas tanks—care should be taken to connect the hydrogen (black tank) with the nipple marked H and the oxygen with the nipple marked O. If not connected right the dissolver will not work. After limes have been placed in the burners and all connections with dissolver properly made, turn the lever or handle of dissolving key around half as far it will turn or until it stands directly over the two nipples connected with the tanks—then slowly open the hydrogen valve at the tank and light both burners—now turn lever of dissolving key from one side to the other and see that the set screws (in dissolving key) are so adjusted that only a small flame is left burning in the lantern that is turned off—when the lever is turned round far as it will go, it should strike against the end of one of these set screws, so the farther it is screwed in the larger will be the blaze. This small blaze of hydrogen is termed the "off flow" and its use is to light the mixed gas when the dissolving key is turned. With some dissolving keys the "off flow" is not controlled by lever striking against end of set screws but by thumb screws that are entirely independent of the lever.

After the flow of hydrogen on both burners is adjusted, turn the lever to one side and slowly turn on the oxygen. Before turning on the oxygen, there should be a blaze of hydrogen four or five inches above the lime. Regulate the amount of each gas until the best light with the least noise is obtained. See instruction under "Single Lantern with Calcium Light." Should the light "pop" or go out when turning the lever, it is usually from lack of sufficient hydrogen. Always keep the hydrogen a little in excess of the oxygen, which can be seen by the yellow fringe or flame around the light.

Instructions for a High Pressure Dissolving Key.

A high pressure key is usually attached direct to the tanks and full pressure of the tanks is turned into the key. The gas for each burner is regulated by small valve in the dissolving key. It is more convenient to operate and by many is preferred to the low pressure key. The Eureka high pressure key (see index) made by us is acknowledged by experts to be superior to any other key on the market.

The end marked O is attached directly to the Oxygen tank while the other end is attached to the hydrogen by means of short piece of high pressure hose. As full pressure of the tanks is turned in a high pressure dissolving key, care should be taken to see that there is no leak in the connections. Oxygen is the more expensive gas and is odorless, therefore special attention should be given to these connections. After the dissolver is connected with the tanks, see that the small valves of dissolver are tightly closed and then open freely both tank valves. By means of the rubber tubes connect the burners with the nipples on the dissolving key, so that one tube from the oxygen side of the dissolver, and one tube from the hydrogen side go to the same burner.

After limes have been placed in the burners and all connections properly made, turn lever or handle of dissolving key half way around or until it stands perpendicular, then slowly open both valves of the dissolving key on the hydrogen side and light both burners. Now turn lever of dissolving key from one side to the other and adjust the set screws so as to leave only a small amount of hydrogen burning in the lantern that is turned off. This is termed the "off flow" and for more information regarding it see "Instructions for using a Low Pressure Dissolving Key." When the "off flow" on each lantern is adjusted, turn the lever clear over to one side—have blaze of hydrogen four or five inches above the lime and then slowly turn on the oxygen from one of the small valves in the dissolving key. For more information regarding light, see instructions for "Single Lantern with Calcium Light."

Instructions for Stereopticon and Electricity.

For information regarding use of electricity as applied to the stereopticon, see index under "Electricity, Useful Information."

The method of setting up a lantern, getting a clear field and sharp picture, is the same when using electricity as instructions given for use of lantern with calcium light. In dissolving by electric light, you cannot gradually turn off one light and on the other. Both lights must be kept burning all the time, and it requires two electric lamps and two rheostats. The dissolver is a mechanical device placed in front of the projecting lenses. It is worked by a lever, and gradually covers one lens and opens the other.

Direct current is much better for the stereopticon than the alternating. It not only gives a more steady light but burns quietly. The alternating current burns with deal of noise. It also makes an unsteady light because the arc or crater does not remain on side of carbon next to the condensing lens. When the arc travels around to back side of carbon the light is dim. A rheostat used with an alternating current will become hotter than when used with a direct current of same strength. The larger the wire in a rheostat the more current it will use. Most rheostats are provided with a lever or movable contact called a "cut out." By moving this cut out more current will be consumed, but the rheostat will get hotter. The more resistance you cut out the hotter the rheostat will get. If small amount of electricity is used with alternating current the arc is more liable to "travel" around the carbons and make an unsteady light. To obtain the best results with alternating current, use a 25 ampere rheostat—place the lamp in a perpendicular position—use best 7-16 or $\frac{1}{2}$ inch cored carbons and tilt the carbons at angle shown by light lines in cut of Monarch Electric Lamp. Do not use too large a carbon with alternating current as it is more difficult to keep the arc or crater in front. The quality of light obtained from an alternating current will vary, owing to the strength of the current and the number of alternations per second. See "Electricity Applied to the Stereopticon," index front page of catalogue. Under this heading will find diagram for connecting electric lamp and rheostat, instructions how to make electric connections, starting the light, etc.

How to Get a Good Light on the Curtain.

The light must be in the right position in order to have the curtain properly illuminated ("clear field," as it is generally termed). When the disk has a dark shadow on the edge, as shown in figure No. 1, the light should be moved to the left; figure 2, it should be moved to the right; figure 3, the light is too high; figure 4, the light is too low; figure 5, the light is too near the condensers. Should there be an orange red fringe around the edge, the light is too far from the condensers. When light is in right position the curtain will be white, as shown in figure 6. To obtain a correct field it is necessary to have the objective lens in the proper position. A convenient way, is to first put a slide in the carrier, move the projecting lens forward or back till an approximate focus is obtained; then remove the slide and adjust the light for a "clear field."

Hand Feed Electric Lamps.

The "Standard."

Electricity is the strongest light used for projection work and should always be used when connection can be conveniently obtained.

Automatic or self feeding electric lamps are heavy, complicated and always getting out of order. Experience has proven that for traveling the hand feed electric lamp is much more satisfactory.

Right Angle Electric Lamp.

This cut shows a convenient form of electric lamp for use in stereopticons with a small lamp house. It can be used on either alternating or direct current and by some is preferred to the regular style of lamp. When thumb screw C is tightly set, turning either A or B will operate both carbons together. If thumb screw C is loosely set, either carbon can be operated separately. In other words both carbons can be operated together or each one separately as desired. A moves the top carbon and B the lower one. The carbon holders can be adjusted so as to give the carbons any angle desired and will accommodate either large or small carbon. The lamp is made of the best quality of tempered brass, nickel plated and polished.

Price,$8.50
Stand for electric lamp show in cut not included in the price.

The Monarch Electric Lamp.

A and B are levers for moving or feeding the carbons; C is carbon hood or light shield; D is handle of set screw for holding the lamp on the support and F is wire for conveying current to the carbons. The dotted or light lines indicate position the carbons should be placed when using alternating current. No cast iron is used in construction of this lamp; all parts are made of the best quality of brass, nickel plated and highly finished.

The lamp can be tilted at an angle desired while the light is burning. If the light burns little out of center, it can be instantly thrown in position. This will be found a great convenience, especially where a moving picture machine is used. The upright supports to which the carbon holders are attached, stand directly in front of each other, so the carbons are kept in perfect alinement. In other quick feed lamps these supports stand side-by-side with a gear feed between them.

The light shield C, catches sparks, dirt or refuse from burning carbons and prevents a flood of blinding light coming from rear of lamp house. It is a great protection to eyes of the operator while adjusting the light and will also prevent carelessly burning the carbons so short as to injure the carbon clamps. By means of knob or lever A, both carbons can be operated from side of lantern or by lever B, both carbons can be operated from rear of lantern.

By a friction swivel-joint the lamp can be tilted clear out of the lamp house and still remains rigid on the post. This leaves both hands free and will be found a great convenience should it be necessary to readjust the carbons or to put in a new carbon while the lamp is hot. The carbon clamps or holders are held in position by a lock screw so they will not work loose. The lamp has a quick feed, and will use a long carbon, sufficient for two and half hours continual use. All parts are thoroughly insulated, so there is no danger of short circuit or waste of current.

Points of Superiority.

The Monarch Electric Lamp has a number of improvements or points of advantage over other lamps.

WHY YOU SHOULD BUY A MONARCH ELECTRIC LAMP.

1. The carbons can be operated from the rear or side of lantern.
2. Has light shield to protect eyes of operator and those sitting back of the lantern.
3. Can be tilted at any angle while light is burning.
4. Has carbon shield to catch sparks and refuse from burning carbons.
5. Can swing back out of lamp house and still remain rigid on the post.
6. Has lock screw to hold carbon clamps rigid.
7. Upright supports for carbon holders stand directly in front of each other.
8. Can use long carbons.
9. Is adjustable so it can be used in a small or large lamp house.
10. Is light, strong and durable and the most convenient lamp on the market for a stereopticon or moving picture machine.

ECONOMY CALCIUM JET, No. 1

A burner constructed on a new principle, having an inner tube, i.e. a tube within a tube, by which the gases are mixed, both flowing in the same direction. The flow of gas is continuous, with no short turns to make it "noisy."

Advantages of this burner are—long mixing chamber by which the gases are more thoroughly mixed—economy in use—less consumption of gas is required to obtain a given amount of light—a brighter and more steady light, with less sputter and noise. Tip is the finest imported composition copper, special made, and can be easily removed for cleaning, or, if damaged, can be replaced with new tip. The lamp is provided with all adjustments for quick focusing.

Price, Calcium Jet No. 1$4.00

ECONOMY CALCIUM JET, No. 2.

Conducted on the same principle as No. 1, but is provided with mechanical line movement for turning, raising and lowering the lime.

Economy Calcium Jet No. 3.

This jet or burner is provided with stop cocks and with mechanical lime movement for turning, raising and lowering the lime.

For general description see Calcium Jet No. 1.

Stop Cocks are used with a double lantern and low pressure dissolving key and only then when the jets are not matched. With a single lantern or a high pressure key, stop cocks are of no use. Three tips are furnished in three sizes, small, medium and large bore. Choice of these will be furnished with each burner, but when the size is not stated, the medium will always be sent. For moving picture or when the machine is long distance from the curtain, much better results will be obtained by using tip with large bore. In case of an emergency it will be found very convenient to always have an extra tip and we would suggest tips with medium and large bore. When using tip with large bore, keep good pressure of gas (especially hydrogen) as the mixed gas is more liable to "snap" and burn back in the jet. We would advise using the $\frac{3}{4}$ limes and when ordering specify this size, otherwise the smaller size will be sent.

The King Acetylene Burner.

This is without question the best acetylene burner on the market. It consists of four tips, each having two jets of light, which unite in one blaze. These four brilliant flames, fed by eight air chambers, give perfect combustion and a powerful light. We have abandoned the old fashioned shape burner, because the tips are not durable. They are small, fragile and so exposed that they are easily broken. The tips used with a "King" burner are made from a solid block with heavy walls around the holes, so they will stand the rough usage of shipping. If the tips should become clogged, use a fine soft wire to clean them, being careful not to nick or chip the edge of small hole. A little defect in the tip will cause it to smoke.

Acetylene, when burning, generates great deal of heat and unless the lamphouse is well ventilated there is danger of breaking the condensing lenses. Oil lanterns are usually well ventilated and can therefore be used with acetylene light. It is estimated that acetylene gives from five to seven times as strong a light as oil and from one-third to a half as strong as calcium.

Alcohol Vapor Mantle Light.

This is the smallest and most compact gas mantle outfit on the market. The entire outfit can be packed inside the lamphouse, and weighs only about 20 ounces. An ordinary mantle is used and the gas is made from either wood or grain alcohol. At the beginning a small quantity of alcohol is poured in the metal cup at the burner and ignited. When the alcohol comes in contact with the hot metal, it is converted into vapor, which burns at the mantle. Wood alcohol is cheaper than the regular alcohol, and can be used equally as well.

Welsbach Mantle Burner.

The mantle gas light will be found very convenient to use in a lantern where a strong light is not desired. It can be used with ordinary illuminating gas or from vaporized gasoline or alcohol. Kerosene oil can also be used, but is more difficult to convert into a vapor and consequently is not used for this purpose as much as gasoline. There are several different styles of apparatus on the market for using a gas mantle, but as each one of these is provided with a mantle attachment, the above burner is principally used where the ordinary illuminating gas is in the house. By using a rubber hose it can be connected with any gas jet.

The amount of illumination obtained on the screen by using a mantle with a lantern is usually disappointing. Judging from the amount of illumination a good mantle light will make in a room, the general impression is that a picture almost equal to calcium light should be obtained. Such would be the case if all the light could be collected and utilized; but unfortunately only a portion of light from front of the mantle can be collected. The condensing lenses can condense into the objective lens only the light from place about large as a silver half dollar. The balance of the light from the sides, back and front of the mantle is lost.

One serious objection to using a mantle light is the large amount of heat generated and the danger of breaking condensing lenses. When using this style of light the lamp house should be well ventilated, and lantern set within twenty feet of the curtain. No mantle light is strong enough to make a satisfactory moving picture, and a stereopticon picture should not be made over eight feet in diameter. The stand or support shown in cut is not included in price of burner.

Acetylene Burner Cleaner.

The importance of frequently cleaning an acetylene burner can not be overestimated. The opening in the tip through which the acetylene gas passes is very small and is easily clogged. This opening is too small for a pin and if an effort is made to force anything in it there is danger of chipping off a small piece from the opening which will ruin the burner. With the acetylene burner cleaner the gas as well as air holes can be quickly cleaned without danger of injuring the tip. The cleaner is small, can be carried in the vest pocket and is always ready for use. No one using an acetylene burner can afford to be without one of these cleaners.

The best kind of lime tongs is pair of gas pliers. These pliers are made of drop forged steel and will last a life time.

Leader Electric Dissolver

The perforated metal or screen "G" and the V shape ends of dissolving shutter "D" give a dissolving and blending effect far superior to any other style of electric dissolver.

Cut "A" shows dissolver in position for use with portion of shutter cut away to show the mechanical construction.

Cut "B" shows dissolver when not in use, also the position, when both lights are on the curtain for registering the fields.

In dissolving views the light from both lanterns should be thrown on the screen in the same place. The top lantern is provided with regulating screws or some other device by which it can be adjusted so the disk will occupy the same position on the screen. For information regarding setting up and operating lantern with electricity, see index under "Instructions for Double Lantern," also "Electricity as applied to the stereopticon".

This dissolver is especially adapted to be used with the "Leader" lantern described in this catalogue. Support for holding the dissolving shutter is fastened to the lantern. This holds the dissolver firm and rigid and prevents any shake or movement of the picture on the curtain when the dissolving shutter is moved. To insure a steady picture and a convenient adjustment of the lenses, an electric dissolver should never be attached to the projecting lens.

Shutter "D" is made of aluminum, and by moving lever "B" the end of one lens is gradually opened, while the end of the other lens is gradually closed. As one picture fades away or disappears, the other picture takes its place.

"G" shows the perforated metal ends. The V shape ends of dissolving shutter is improvement over the straight edge, and the perforated metal or screen ends, is a great improvement over the opaque, solid metal ends of other dissolvers. With the improved shutter, the hard lines and strong shadows are removed and there is a mixing, blending or dissolving effect not obtained with any other electric dissolver.

The "Leader" Electric Dissolver is light and strong, simple to operate, and is the only electric dissolver adapted for stereopticon and moving picture machines.

By means of thumb screw C, shutter D can be securely held in position as shown in cut B. While in this position (by moving lever B), the dissolver can be used on the top lantern, leaving the lower lantern free for use of moving picture machine. This will be found a great convenience as it leaves the top lantern entirely free and independent. It can therefore be used without delay to announce name of next moving picture or for stereopticon slide before or after the films.

PRICE, Leader Electric Dissolver.....$8.00

The Gem Electric Dissolver.

This dissolver can be attached to the projecting lens and can therefore be used on any lantern. The shutter is made of aluminum, divided into two parts so it can be adjusted to suit the distance between the objective lens of any double lantern. Ends of the shutter are provided with perforated metal same as the Leader Dissolver. When ordering the Gem Electric Dissolver, give diameter of front end of objective lens to which the dissolver is to be attached. It is light, simple to operate and the perforated metal ends give a most pleasing effect.

CLAMP

SMALL BRASS NICKEL PLATED CLAMP
TO HOLD DISSOLVING KEY ON PLATE.

Dissolving Key Attachment.

This is a device for attaching a low pressure dissolving key to a calcium light tank.

A is connection for the tank, B is regulating valve, C is nipple for connecting the hose and D is plate for attaching the dissolver. A low pressure dissolving key is sometimes attached to the lantern, but is usually secured to the table or stand on which the lantern is placed. For general use, however, neither of these methods is practical.

There are very few lanterns to which the dissolving key can be attached. The lantern is usually so hot that it will destroy the rubber tubing and then turning the lever will usually shake the lantern. Every little jar of the lantern is greatly magnified on the curtain and gives a bad effect to the picture.

The usual method of using a low pressure dissolving key is to screw it to the top of the table. This will seriously damage and practically ruin the appearance of any stand or table. Attaching the dissolver to the tank overcomes all these objections and holds the dissolver firm and rigid. Everyone using a low pressure key can appreciate the convenience of this attachment.

Instructions for Using.

Connect attachment to tank by means of coupling A (see cut) and fasten dissolver to plate D. See that regulating valve B is closed and then open the tank valve. With a short piece of hose connect nipple C with nipple of dissolving key and with a longer piece of rubber tubing, connect the other tank with the dissolving key. Regulate flow of one gas by valve at tank and the other gas by valve B.

Be sure there is a good leather washer or gasket in coupling A, and that the joint is sufficiently tight to prevent leaking.

PRICE, Dissolving Key Attachment.....$3.50

Perfection Acetylene Dissolver.

Acetylene gas can be used for dissolving with a double lantern by using an acetylene key. The key shown in cut is one of the best made and is an improvement over the small acetylene dissolving keys now on the market.

The Perfection Acetylene Outfit described in this catalogue, (see index) is much superior to any other acetylene outfit for dissolving. It gives an even, steady flow of gas and a constant pressure.

Directions for Using the Perfection Acetylene Dissolver.

Connect the tank or generator with the middle nipple and each burner with nipple on either side. Turn handle of dissolver half way around until it stands directly over middle nipple—light both burners—then turn handle of dissolver clear around and adjust set screw, in post of dissolver, so the light can not be entirely cut off. This is called the "off flow" for more information of which, see Instructions for using Low Pressure Dissolving Key.

PRICE, Perfection Acetylene Dissolver.....$4.75

Low Pressure Dissolving Key.

The most popular method of dissolving with oxy-hydrogen or calcium light is by means of the low pressure key. This is not because the low pressure key is better than the high pressure, but because it is cheaper and can be used with a saturator or gas bags.

BEST MATERIAL AND WORKMANSHIP

The important thing in a dissolving key is to keep the "plug" or valve from leaking. Many dissolving keys are made of ordinary soft brass and leak after having been in use a short time.

Our dissolving keys are made from a special composition metal, that will last for years with proper care, without wearing sufficiently to cause leaking.

TWO TANKS OR SATURATOR

Many low-pressure dissolving keys work nicely with two tanks, but do not work well when used with a saturator. By our improved method of cutting the grooves, our low pressure key works perfectly with either two tanks or a saturator in place of hydrogen tank. Many exhibitors have stated that they could never use their dissolving key with a saturator until we had re-cut the grooves in the valve plug of their dissolver. The cost of this re-cutting is about $2.50.

There is nothing more annoying than a dissolving key that will not work properly and you can save this annoyance (and expense) by purchasing one of our keys.

When using a saturator in place of a hydrogen tank, care should be taken to see that there is plenty of gasoline or ether in the saturator and that in cold weather the saturator is kept sufficiently warm so a free flow of hydrogen gas will be obtained.

GUARANTEE

We guarantee our low pressure dissolving key to work perfectly with two tanks or with saturator in place of the hydrogen tank. We also guarantee them (with proper care) to wear for years without leaking. Before leaving our factory every key is thoroughly tested both with tank and saturator.

Cut A

The Leader High Pressure Key.

A high pressure key is used only with two tanks and cannot be used with a saturator or gas bags. Two separate regulating valves are provided for each burner and there is no darkening of the curtain when changing from one picture to the other. The illumination on the curtain is the same whether the light is on the top or bottom or equally divided on both. The Leader dissolving key shown in this cut is a great improvement on any high pressure key on the market.

THREE BURNERS.

Three calcium light burners can be run from the dissolving key at the same time. For each burner there are two separate regulating valves, so the gas for each burner is under perfect control of the operator. It will often be found very convenient when a double dissolving lantern and a moving picture machine is used.

LIGHT STANDARD.

When three calcium burners are not needed, the hydrogen regulating valve of the third burner can be connected to the light standard (as shown in cut A) and used as a gas light. It can be turned on or off at any time by the operator and gives him a good light at the machine. This will not only be found a great convenience when setting up and testing the machine; but can also be used to light up the room at close of the entertainment. The light standard extends about 3 feet above the tank and is attached by set screws to the dissolving key. Nipple N is connected to H-3 by rubber tubing.

31A

NO LOSS OF GAS.

The gas used for the third or extra burner does not pass through the dissolving plug, and with this burner every pound of gas in the tanks can be consumed. With all other high pressure keys there is sufficient gas left in the tank to burn about half an hour. When making your own gas this is of no great importance, but when buying gas in tanks it is a loss and is quite an item.

IMPROVED DISSOLVING PLUG.

The most particular part of a high pressure key is the dissolving plug. As the plug is subject to high gas pressure, a most accurate fit is necessary to prevent leaking. The dissolving plug of the Leader key is made of the best tool steel while the body of the key is a composition metal special made for the purpose. A spring is the only device known to take up wear. The dissolving plug of the Leader key is provided with a spring which not only takes up any little wear that may occur, but keeps an even tension on the plug and makes the dissolver work smoothly and easily. With this spring the dissolving plug never binds or moves with a jerky unsteady motion when the gas is turned from one burner to the other.

IMPROVEMENT IN DISSOLVING GROOVES.

The objection to the usual high pressure dissolving key is they do not give a perfect dissolving effect, the picture seems to "jump" into place. This is due to the way the dissolving grooves are cut. The improved method of cutting these grooves in the dissolving plug of the Leader high pressure key has overcome this objectional feature. When the gas is turned from one burner to the other, there is a soft blending or dissolving of one picture into the other, an effect very pleasing to the eye. If you want the best high pressure key on the market order a "Leader."

The Standard Rheostat.

When using a lamp with an incandescent electric current, it is necessary to use a Rheostat, sometimes called a Resistance Coil. The standard rheostat is light and strong, the wire is tightly wound and all parts are thoroughly insulated. It is provided with an improved sliding adjustment or "cut out", by which current of 110 volts or any voltage below that can be used. By moving this adjustment the light as desired, can be increased or decreased, made brighter or dimmer. This sliding adjustment when in position should be held firmly against the wire, so as to make a firm contact.

Most of the adjustable rheostats on the market depend on a spring for this contact. By constant heating and cooling this spring soon loses its tension and a poor contact is obtained. With a poor contact not only will less current be obtained, but there will be a constant sparking or small arcs formed where the adjustment comes in contact with the wire. This is liable to melt or burn the wire in two and ruin the rheostat. The standard rheostat has an improved adjustment by which a firm contact is always assured. This rheostat can be used on either direct or alternating current.

PRICE, Standard Rheostat, 110 Volts or less... $4.00

The Wonder Rheostat

FOR 125 VOLTS OR LESS.

A is sliding contact or "cut out" by which adjustment is made for the different currents, and the intensity of the light can be increased or decreased as desired.

B B are binding posts for attaching the electric wire.

C in small cut is fuse wire which takes the place of a porcelain fuse-block.

The Wonder Rheostat is constructed on a new principle, and of a new material. It weighs about four pounds, is adjustable for any current below 125 volts, is equal to any rheostat made for direct current, and superior to any rheostat for alternating current.

This is the only rheostat provided with a fuse, which dispenses entirely with the necessity of carrying a fuse block.

FOR 220 VOLTS OR LESS.

not only inconvenient to use, but being made of porcelain is easily broken. This expense and trouble is entirely overcome in the Wonder Rheostat.

It is so light and small that it can be conveniently packed.

Every traveling exhibitor using electricity knows the importance of a good Rheostat and the convenience there would be in having one that is small, light and substantial.

In this Rheostat is realized the exhibitor's fondest dream, for as its name implies it truly is a "wonder".

The "Wonder" Rheostat is constructed on a new principle and of new material whereby it is made light, strong and compact and when used on an alternating current does away with the vibration and noise given by other rheostats. The material with which this rheostat is made does not lose any of its conducting power nor does it deteriorate in value by constant use. Good many electric plants now being installed are for 125 volts and this rheostat can be used on current of this voltage or anything below 125. The ordinary rheostat is made for 110 volts and is not safe to use it on current of higher voltage.

The Wonder Rheostat is provided with a sliding adjustment, by which any current below the given voltage can be used. Composition of the resistance wire used in the manufacture of this rheostat is a new and most valuable discovery. It has eight times the resistance of iron wire (such as is generally used in making rheostats) and twice the resistance of German Silver wire, which formerly has been considered to have more electric resistance than any other wire. Another advantage of this new composition wire is the fact that it does not absorb the heat like other wire. And again constant heating and cooling does not make it "brittle" as is the case with German Silver wire.

Constructed on an entirely new principle, the resistance wire is not on a tension and therefore will not stretch and get loose when it gets hot.

When using alternating current it is necessary to use more electricity than when using direct current. With alternating current the tendency of the crater or light is to travel around the carbon. To obtain full benefit of the light the crater should be directly on front side of the carbon towards the condensing lens. When the crater is on the side or rear of carbons the light is dim. The smaller the amount of current consumed, the more the crater travels and the more unsteady the light. Therefore it is advisable when using alternating current (especially with moving picture) to use a rheostat that will give large number of amperes or to connect in multiples, two rheostats of smaller amperage. The larger the wire of a rheostat the more current it will carry and a larger number of amperes will be consumed. By using a larger wire and the greater number of amperes thus obtained, you will have a stronger and brighter light which we especially recommend for moving pictures.

Why You Should Use a Wonder Rheostat.

- 1st. It is light, weighing only a few pounds.
- 2nd. Much smaller than any rheostat made and is therefore convenient to carry or pack with other goods.
- 3rd. Keeps cooler—so constructed that there is free circulation of cold air through the center as well as on all sides of the rheostat coil.

4th. More durable—owing to the way it is made and the new material used in its construction, it is far more durable than any other rheostat.

5th. There is no vibration or noise in the rheostat when used with an alternating current (this is an important feature).

6th. By sliding adjustment you can regulate the amount of current consumed and thereby increase or decrease the light as desired.

7th. It is the only Rheostat provided with a fuse, by which it is not necessary to use a fuse block.

8th. It is lighter and smaller, more durable than and far superior to any other rheostat made.

As moving pictures require a much stronger light than a lantern slide, we would specially recommend for their projection the No. 2 Wonder Rheostat.

Wonder Rheostat with Wire Guard.

This cut shows a No. 1 Wonder Rheostat with wire guard. The law in some states requires a rheostat to be covered with a screen or wire guard. The object of this is to prevent anything coming in contact with the wire when hot. Although it serves as a safe guard, it also adds considerable to the size and some to the weight of the rheostat. The wire screen or guard will add one dollar to the price of the No. 1 or No. 2 Wonder Rheostat and a dollar and a half to the No. 3. If rheostat with wire guard is wanted be sure to so state it in the order.

Dissolving Rheostat.

For Single or Double Lantern, Direct or Alternating Current.

This is something new and strictly speaking the only scientific method of dissolving by electricity. The dissolving effect is perfect, as good if not better than can be obtained by calcium light.

The rheostat is intended for use with a lantern where the "Special Incandescent Globe" is used, description of which will be found in another part of this catalogue (see index front part of catalogue).

The 50 or 100 candle power globe can be used and connection made with any incandescent socket. This light is not intended to compete with the arc light or with calcium light, and is not strong enough for moving pictures. An excellent stereopticon picture 7 or 8 feet in diameter can be obtained and with the most beautiful dissolving effects.

BETTER THAN ACETYLENE OR MANTLE LIGHT.

The light in the special incandescent globe is so concentrated that it will give a much better picture than can be obtained with either acetylene or mantle light. Only about one-fourth the light from a four tip acetylene burner or from a gas mantle can be collected and used in a stereopticon. Both these lights give off great deal of heat and frequently break the condensing lenses. The Special Incandescent Globe gives off comparatively little heat, and with it there is no danger of breaking a lens.

SINGLE LANTERN DISSOLVING.

This rheostat can be used with either single or double lantern. With a single lantern the picture can be made to gradually disappear and when the light has reached the darkest point the slide is quickly changed and the new picture gradually comes into view. This change can be slowly or quickly made as desired. The effect with single lantern is not equal to that of double lantern. It is however a great improvement on the usual single lantern, as the audience does not see the picture change, and there is the gradual disappearing and re-appearing of the picture. The rheostat for the single lantern is little larger than the one for the double lantern.

DOUBLE LANTERN DISSOLVING.

With the double lantern there is a time when both pictures are on the screen and the gradual blending or dissolving of one into the other gives a most pleasing effect. The dissolving is done by simply moving the sliding contact from one end of the rheostat to the other. One light gradually grows brighter as the other grows dimmer. The light is quickly attached and the operating very simple. Complete instructions sent with each outfit.

	for double lantern.....	$10.00
	Dissolving Rheostat No. 2 (110 volts or less)

The above prices are for rheostats to be used on either alternating or direct currents of 110 volts or less. For currents of greater voltage, write for special price.

The "Monarch" Lantern.

To meet the demands of the public for high grade but cheaper lantern, we are pleased to announce that we can now offer such an instrument.

Cheap in price, but not in quality.

The lamp house is large, well ventilated and is made of high grade sheet metal specially finished to prevent rusting. When packing the lantern the extension or sliding top "4" can be removed and placed inside the lamp house with the objective lens. By doing this and closing the folding bellows-front the lantern will occupy no more than many other lanterns that have a much smaller lamp house.

CONDENSING LENSES.

The condensing lenses are $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter, mounted in ventilated spun brass nickel plated case. The extension front or folding bellows are of sufficient length so that either the short or long focus lens can be used.

OBJECTIVE LENS.

The objective lens is of good quality and has rack and pinion for accurate focusing. With each lantern is furnished at the same price either a short distance, medium or long distance lens. The short distance lens will make a disc or field about half the distance from the curtain to the machine or a 9 foot field at 18 feet. The medium lens 3-10 the distance from the machine to the curtain or a 9 foot field at 30 feet. The long distance lens $\frac{1}{4}$ the distance from the curtain to the machine or a 9 foot field at 36 feet. When a full size slide is used is used the picture is usually about 1-10 smaller than the field. This is due to the mat around the picture being smaller than the slide. With any of these lenses the machine can be set any distance from the curtain according to the size of the picture desired. For a more detailed description of the lenses see index, special objective lenses.

THE LIGHT.

The lamp house is large enough so any form of light can be used. With each lantern is furnished at the same price, any kind of light desired. A choice is given of electric arc, calcium or lime light, acetylene, mantle, a special made incandescent globe or an oil light. For description of each light see index first part of catalogue.

THE CARRYING CASE.

This is a telescope canvas covered case provided with leather corners, strap and handle, described elsewhere as No. 2 carrying case. No. 1 carrying case in place of No. 2, $4.50 additional.

PRICE, Monarch single lantern with either short distance, medium or long focus special objective lens, double slide carrier, a choice of electric, calcium, acetylene, special incandescent globe or oil light and canvas covered carrying case.....$ 24.00
This is known as "Monarch A" outfit.

PRICE, Monarch double dissolving stereopticon with two special lenses, (either short distance, medium or long focus), two double dissolving slide carriers, two burners, either electric, calcium or acetylene and a canvas covered carrying case.....$ 50.00
This is known as "Monarch B" outfit.

When ordering one of these lanterns or outfits do not forget to state the kind of light and size of objective lens wanted.

The Edison moving picture machine or the optigraph can be attached to either the single or double dissolving Monarch lantern same as with the "Leader" lantern, shown in another part of the catalog. Should moving picture attachment be desired add to the price quoted $50.00 for the Edison machine and $35.00 for the Optigraph.

REMARKS.

When ordering electric lamp or burner a rheostat or resistance coil is not included. To complete the outfit would require rheostat, fuse block, switch and 10 feet of flexible cable. An order for acetylene burner does not include generator. When using a weak light, use a short distance lens; for calcium or electric light, use medium or long focus lens. If a higher grade of objective lens is wanted, in place of a special lens, deduct $4.50 for the single lantern or $9.00 for the double lantern, then add price of the other lenses as quoted in catalog.

"New Century" Stereopticon.
(FOR CALCIUM LIGHT)

The above cut shows the stereopticon arranged for calcium light with moving picture attachment swung in position. This method of changing from moving pictures to stereopticon is new, and the simplest and quickest change on the market. See description, "Quick Change," page 30.

"NEW CENTURY" FOR CALCIUM LIGHT.—As its name implies, it is the latest improved stereopticon, and has several improvements possessed by no other lantern. The body and frame is made of aluminum and telescoping nickel plated brass rods. We have dispensed with the bulky lamp house and everything not necessary to the construction of a high grade lantern. It is light, rigid and compact. A new device is provided by which the dissolving fields are quickly and accurately registered.

The light shield has a handle and can be as easily removed and replaced as a door to a lamp house can be opened and closed. The lime jets have gear for raising, lowering and turning the limes. Condensing lenses are $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter, of the best quality, and can readily be removed for cleaning. Projecting lenses are the genuine Bausch & Lomb (their name is on the lenses). Carrying case is leather finished, nickel plated trimmings, lock and key, and is lined with dark colored cotton flannel.

"New Century" Stereopticon.
(FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT.)

The above cut shows Stereopticon arranged for electricity, with electric dissolver and the moving picture attachment swung out of position. The light shield on the electric lamps is on friction pivot and can be tilted at any angle desired, independent of the lamp. The shield is thoroughly insulated and so constructed that the carbons can be tilted at the proper angle for alternating current (see cut of electric lamp with carbons set for alternating current, page 15).

ELECTRIC DISSOLVER.—Much time and study has been given to perfecting an electric dissolver that would be simple in construction and produce the best dissolving effects.

After much experimenting we have succeeded in obtaining the best and simplest electric dissolver on the market. To obtain dissolving effect with electricity requires a different method than that employed for calcium light (see under dissolving effects). For general description of this stereopticon see "New Century" Stereopticon for calcium light.

Quick Change

FROM STEREOPTICON TO MOVING PICTURE AND VICE VERSA.

It is desirable to have little delay as possible between these changes, and to accomplish this, several methods have been adopted. The one shown on "New Century" Stereopticon is new, and is the simplest, quickest and the best. The stereopticon and the moving picture machine are each on a swinging arm. These arms are joined together by a connecting rod, so that as one swings out of position the other swings in position. The change from moving picture to stereopticon or from stereopticon to moving picture is done instantly and by one movement. No adjusting or re-focusing necessary. The change is complete and accurate.

THE "LEADER"

THIS LANTERN HAS MANY IMPROVEMENTS POSSESSED BY NO OTHER.

If you are contemplating the purchase of a lantern, do not buy until you carefully read what we say regarding the "Leader".

OBJECTIVE LENS.

An "adapter" is supplied with each machine by which either a large or small lens can be quickly attached. The objective lens is provided with rack and pinion for accurate focusing.

CONDENSING LENSES.

Condensing lenses are two in number, plano-convex, $\frac{4}{8}$ -inches in diameter and are made of the best quality of French crystal glass. The lens cell (or mounting) is made of spun brass, nickel plated, highly polished and thoroughly ventilated. It is so constructed that the mounting with lenses can be instantly removed for shipping or taken apart for cleaning.

VENTILATED AIR CHAMBER.

The lens holder is so constructed that a free circulation of air is obtained between the condensing lenses. The "Lens Cell" is placed just outside of the lamp house. Between the condensing lenses and light there is a ventilated air chamber which allows circulation of cold air between the lenses and the light. Free circulation of air on both sides of each condensing lens is thus obtained. This is a very valuable improvement and is found in no other lantern.

LAMP HOUSE.

Lamp House is made of aluminum and the finest quality of thin rolled steel, especially made for this class of work. Aluminum and gold are the only two metals that will not oxidize by exposure to the air. Being light and strong and free from tarnish, it is an ideal metal for the stereopticon. The lamp house is large and roomy, thoroughly ventilated and is therefore adapted for using any kind of light. All the parts are screwed or riveted together thus making it rigid and strong. Beware of a small lamp house, especially for electric light. It is not only very inconvenient to operate, but as only short carbons can be used, you are compelled to change them often. In purchasing a stereopticon see that the bellows is of good size and that the lamp house is much larger than the bellows.

QUICK ADJUSTMENT.

By a new device for support, we obtain double the adjustment for the light found on any other lantern. Two adjusting posts in front and two in the rear with set screws, permit of quick and accurate tilting of the lantern to any desired angle, to locate the light from any point on the proper position on the curtain. To obtain this result with other lanterns, it is necessary to "prop up" (as the case may require) either the front or the back end of the lantern and then the lantern is neither level nor steady. With our device you secure quick and accurate adjustment and your lantern is both true and firm. The sliding rods and folding bellows admit quick adjustment of the projecting lens, for both the different size lenses, and the varying distance from the curtain.

SLIDE CARRIER.

When using the ordinary unmounted glass slide, it is necessary to use a slide carrier, which remains stationary in the lantern, while the slides are being changed. As the least shake or jar is magnified on the screen, it is essential that the slide carrier remain firmly in position. The usual means provided to accomplish this is by using a spring. This serves the purpose while the spring is new, but when it becomes weak it is of little value. In the "Leader" the slide carrier is securely held in position by a thumb screw which is far superior to the old style spring. The thumb screw will never wear out; it not only holds the slide carrier more firmly than the spring, but the carrier can more easily be removed or placed in position.

WEIGHT AND SIZE.

Weight of lantern, without lenses is about 8 pounds. Size when packed ready for shipment, 10½-inches high, 7-inches wide and 17-inches long. The top or extension part of lamp house can be quickly removed and with the projection lens, packed inside of the main part of the lamp house. No other lantern of the size is so compact for shipment or so light in weight.

CARRYING CASE No. 1.

A special case is made for carrying the stereopticon with a separate apartment for stereopticon slides or the Optigraph moving picture machine. The case is leather finished with nickel plated trimmings and lined with dark colored cotton flannel. It is also furnished with a lock and key. This is not only a fine looking case, but the workmanship and material is of the best quality.

Style A for single lantern or with Optigraph, as above,	$6.00.
Style B for double dissolving lantern, only	6.50.
Style C for double dissolving lantern with Optigraph,	8.00.

CARRYING CASE No. 2.

This is a canvas covered case provided with leather trimmings, straps and handle. The case is large enough for the stereopticon and the Optigraph moving picture machine. Should the latter not be used, the extra space will be found very convenient for carrying stereopticon slides. Size of case (outside measure) 8x12x24. Weight about 5 pounds. Price $2.00 each. For Double Lantern or Double Lantern and Optigraph, the above style of case is furnished for $3.50.

We can also furnish a wood carrying case to those who prefer it; but a canvas covered case with leather trimmings is very much better. A wood carrying case, even with the best finish, has the appearance of a wooden box. A box is all right in which to ship goods; but when carried in the hand as a traveling case it looks out of place.

POINTS OF SUPERIORITY.

The "Leader" has many improvements or points of advantage over any other lantern.

Many claim their lantern is "the best lantern made," but do not tell you why. We claim the "Leader" leads them all and we will tell you why.

1st—Lighter and stronger, being made of aluminum and sheet steel, and all parts screwed or riveted together making it light and rigid.

2nd—The "adapter" for objective lens, by which either a large or small barrel lens can be quickly attached.

3rd—Ventilated cold air chamber, between the light and condensing lens.

4th—Double adjustment for focusing the light.

5th—Raising or tilting either the front or rear end of the lantern for adjusting the light on the screen.

6th—A set screw, in place of a spring, for holding the slide carrier firmly in position.

7th—The lamp house, both inside and out, is enameled and baked to a hard finish. This not only gives fine finish but prevents rust.

8th—The bellows are made of new material which does not stick, crack nor wear rough like leather. When wiped off with a damp cloth, it always looks bright and new.

9th—Style and appearance. The attractive outline of the "Leader" is shown in the accompanying cuts, and the combination of the engraved aluminum frame, satin finished, and nickel plated trimmings, highly polished, with the dark finish of the lamp house and the rich maroon color of the bellows, give this lantern a style and appearance superior to any other on the market.

PRICE. The "Leader" single lantern with $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch condensing lenses $\frac{1}{4}$ size objective lens, double (quick change) slide carrier and No. 2 carrying case. This is known as "Leader A". Price \$35.00.

The "Leader" single lantern with $\frac{1}{2}$ size objective, $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch condensing lenses, double (quick change) slide carrier, No. 1 carrying case and either Monarch electric lamp or calcium light jet with mechanical lime turner. This is known as "Leader B". Price \$48.00.

See description of carrying case No. 1 and 2.

"Leader B" ($48.00) is the "Best," most complete, convenient, high grade lantern ever offered to the public. The objective lens is the Bausch and Lomb, large mounting bearing their name and serial number. With it, two different size pictures can be obtained without changing position of the machine. This practically gives you two lenses in one mounting.

GUARANTEE. We guarantee the "Leader" to be as represented. We guarantee this stereopticon to have more scientific and practical points of value than any other lantern on the market. Send $5.00 deposit with order as guarantee of good faith and when requested, we will ship the lantern subject to examination before paying the balance. If lantern is not found to be as represented, the deposit will be refunded on its return.

LONG FOCUS LENS.

We can furnish a cheap long focus lens in place of the $\frac{1}{4}$ size lens for \$1.50 more. This lens will make about 10 foot pictures at distance of 40 feet from the curtain. We cannot, however, recommend this lens for good work. A high grade long focus or narrow angle lens cannot be sold so cheap. See catalogue under "Objective Lens".

THE "LEADER" STEREOPTICON.

(See description of single "Leader" Lantern. The Dotted lines and set Screws "D" show how either end of the Lantern may be elevated or "tilted.")

This consists of two "Leader" Lanterns mounted and arranged for dissolving views. All the castings being made of aluminum and all the parts being screwed together make the lantern very light, strong and rigid.

The sliding rods, the spun brass lens mounting, and all the brass trimmings are nickel plated and highly polished. The aluminum is given what is termed the "satin" finish, a new, beautiful, rich finish that will never tarnish and never grow old. The thin rolled sheet steel used in partial construction of the lamp house, has a Russian black finish. The bellows are of a rich maroon color and the projecting lenses are finished in the natural brass, highly polished and lacquered. This combination of color and finish, the decorating on the aluminum castings and the general appearance of the stereopticon, is not only artistic and pleasing, but gives the impression of lightness, strength and durability. See description of single "Leader" lantern.

The "Leader" Stereopticon (double dissolving lantern) consists of two complete lanterns that, when desired, can be made into two separate lanterns. This cannot be said of all double lanterns, for the top lantern of many makes is not supplied with the necessary supports and adjustments, so it can be used independent of the lower lantern.

An important point in a double lantern is that the top lantern should be firm and rigid. With the Leader dissolving stereopticon the top lantern is supported at either end and in the center. There are two thumb set screws at each end of the lantern which, when tightened, bind the two lanterns rigidly together. In other dissolving stereopticons, the top lantern is supported only in two places—usually the front and center but they are not provided with set screws at both ends.

REGISTERING THE FIELDS OR SLIDES.

In a double dissolving lantern the fields or pictures from each projecting lens should be the same size and cover the same space on the curtain. A new device of our own is provided by which this is quickly and accurately accomplished.

In order to accurately register the fields there must be a side adjustment as well as a tilting or "up and down" adjustment.

The side adjustment is usually accomplished by moving the slide carriers from side to side and the "up and down" adjustment by tilting the top lantern. The Leader double lantern is not only provided with these adjustments, but with a special side adjusting screw B and "up and down" adjusting screw C. By means of these screws a quick and more accurate register of the field can be obtained, than is possible by the old way. In shipping a double lantern they frequently get sprung or twisted a little so they are not in perfect line. By means of side adjustment screw B this defect can be quickly remedied.

When a lantern is set up the bellows is drawn out far enough to obtain an approximate focus, but to obtain an accurate focus, the thumb screw on the objective lens is used. An accurate focus could probably be obtained without using the thumb screw on the objective lens, but it would require much more time and would be very inconvenient. Now the adjusting screws, B and C, on the double leader lantern serve the same purpose and accomplish the same result that the thumb screw does on the objective lens, that is, they give an accurate (and quick) registration of the two fields.

The material used in the construction of the Leader lantern, the high grade workmanship, the style, the finish, convenience of operating and the many points of superiority all combine to make it "The Leader."

This is known as Double Leader C.

The special $\frac{1}{4}$ size lenses in Double Leader B will give a good picture, however to obtain the best results, we would advise using the genuine $\frac{1}{4}$ size large barrel Bausch and Lomb objective lenses bearing their name and serial number. This lens not only cuts a picture clear and sharp to the edge, but having a much larger barrel gathers more light, and therefore makes a brighter picture. Everything in this outfit is of the best quality. The only suggestion for improvement would be to use a high pressure key in place of the low pressure key.

THE "LEADER" AND OPTIGRAPH

Swung out of position.

This cut shows the Optigraph swung out of position and the Stereopticon lens in position for use See description "quick change" on page 55.

QUICK CHANGE.

From stereopticon to moving picture machine and vice versa.

It is desirable to have as little delay as possible between these changes, and to accomplish this several methods have been adopted.

The change shown above is the quickest, simplest and most accurate of them all. The stereopticon and moving picture machine are each on a swinging arm. These arms are jointed together by a connecting rod, so that as one swings out of position the other swings in position. The change from moving picture to stereopticon or from stereopticon to moving picture is done instantly and by one movement, no adjusting or re-focusing necessary. The change is complete and accurate and is done instantly. Price, Quick Change Swing Attachment $5.50

PRICE—"Leader" lantern with No. 1 Optigraph, - - $54.00.

"Leader" lantern with No. 3 (1900) model Optigraph, 64.00.

"Leader" (double lantern) with No. 3 Optigraph, - 94.00.

The Optigraph is furnished with a No. 1 lens of medium angle projecting a picture about 10 ft. in diameter at about 40 feet from the screen. If desired, the purchaser when ordering can substitute for the above, a No. 2 lens, projecting 10 ft. picture at about 30 feet from the screen or a No. 3 lens projecting 10 ft. picture at about 65 feet from the screen.

The above prices include the double slide carrier, No. 2 carrying case; and for the stereopticon a $\frac{1}{4}$ size projecting lens or a long focus lens in a $\frac{1}{4}$ size barrel or mounting. Much better results will be obtained by using a high grade $\frac{1}{2}$ size lens in a large barrel or mounting. The $\frac{1}{4}$ size lens makes a picture whose diameter is one-half the distance from the lantern to the screen, while the lens on the Optigraph makes a picture whose diameter is only one-fifth the above distance. The $\frac{1}{2}$ size lens brings the two pictures more nearly to the same size and the effect is much more pleasing. With this lens two different size pictures can be made which will be found very convenient for use in different size rooms. This is not only an advantage, but you will also get a much brighter, sharper and clearer picture.

If this lens with large mounting is preferred to the lens with a small mounting, add $10.00 to the price of each single lantern as quoted above, or $20.00 to the Double Dissolving lantern.

The lens is one of the most important parts of a lantern and the additional investment of $10.00 for the above combined machine will be found a most profitable one. Your stereopticon will then give as fine pictures as it is possible to obtain with any high priced imported lantern.

LEADER LANTERN SPECIAL.

This is without question the best, most artistic and beautiful lantern made. The finest material and best workmanship is used in its construction.

The entire lamp house is made of aluminum and hand engraved. The main part or body has soft satin finish, while the engraving is highly polished. Gold and aluminum are the only metals that will not tarnish, therefore this lantern will always retain its brilliancy. The body of lantern is set with the finest imported cut glass jewels, sapphires, rubies, emeralds and opals. When there is a light in the lantern, the brilliancy of these jewels gives a most pleasing effect. The "Leader Special" is not only the most beautiful lantern made but will give the best results that is possible to obtain with any lantern. Everybody will admire it and everybody will praise the high class work it does.

If you want something that will be the envy of your competitor, something that will ever be a source of satisfaction and something that will be a profitable investment, then buy a "Leader Special."

"Judicious advertising means success" and the "Leader Special" will be found a constant, faithful, living advertisement.

Acetylene Gas.

Acetylene gas for many years was known only as a laboratory curiosity, but in 1893 a method was discovered of manufacturing the carbide in quantities for commercial use. The gas is made by simply immersing calcic carbide in water. This chemical (usually called "carbide") is produced by fusing together in an electric furnace about 40 per cent finely ground coke and 60 per cent unslacked lime. This requires an intense heat, which can only be obtained by an electric furnace. In appearance it resembles lime stone and is just as safe to handle. The same caution applies to its care as does to unslacked lime, that is keep it dry. If a piece of calcic carbide be heated till it is red hot, it will not give off its gas or do it any injury; but place it in water and it immediately begins to liberate acetylene gas. In liberating gas it also liberates great deal of heat. Carbide as found on the market is usually in small pieces and the size used with both the Ideal and Perfection Generator is $\frac{1}{4} \times 1-12$. Each pound of carbide will produce from $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 5 cubic feet of acetylene gas. Two pounds of carbide will give sufficient gas for two hours use with the best quadruple burner. All acetylene tips are constructed on principle of a Bunson burner, that is, air is mixed with the gas before reaching the point of combustion. Every tip has two or more holes to admit air, which is mixed with the gas before burning. When used with a good tip, acetylene burns with a pure white light and without smoke or odor. In brilliancy it is about twelve times that of ordinary illuminating gas. Although it will not compare with calcium or electric light it will give a good ten foot stereopticon picture.

Explosions reported from acetylene gas are usually from using liquid acetylene or where the gas is confined under extremely high pressure. There is no more danger in the use of acetylene for stereopticon, than there is in using the ordinary illuminating gas. All accidents that have occurred with acetylene would have occurred with ordinary illuminating gas under the same circumstances.

We always have on hand a stock of second-hand goods, and point with pride to the fact that they are goods of other makes—have been received in exchange from experienced exhibitors who recognize and appreciate the superior quality of our own make.

The Ideal Acetylene Generator.

All authorities on the manufacture and use of acetylene agree that the best and scientific method of obtaining the gas is to drop small quantities of carbide in a comparatively large volume of water. The Ideal Acetylene Generator is constructed on this principle and automatically drops the carbide in the water as required.

IMPROVED METHOD

This method of dropping the carbide in water, possesses many advantages over the old method of immersing the carbide in water while contained in a wire basket. Generating acetylene gas develops great heat and it is desirable to keep the carbide and water cool as possible. When the carbide is dropped in the water it falls to the bottom, so the gas as liberated, bubbles up through all the water.

But when the carbide is used with a wire basket only the surface of the water comes in contact with the carbide. The top part of the water will soon become steaming (almost boiling) hot while the lower part is comparatively cool. To bring a large amount of carbide in contact with a comparatively small amount of water makes the carbide very hot. This not only produces a hot gas but also forms in the gas a tar-like impurity which lowers the brilliancy and clogs the small openings in the tips of burner. If a basket of carbide is lowered into the water, it becomes moist and continues to make gas even after it is removed from the water. There is also a waste of carbide from what is left in the basket. When using the Ideal Acetylene Generator where small amount of carbide is automatically dropped into a large volume of water, none of these difficulties arise.

With this generator the unused carbide is kept perfectly dry and the charged generator will stand for days without making or losing any gas. Sufficient carbide can be put in the hopper to run a four jet burner two and half or three hours. As the carbide in the hopper is always dry and clean, whatever is left can be poured back in the can with the rest of the carbide. Cost of gas is about ten cents per hour. Saving from carbide alone will soon pay the difference between this and an old style generator.

KEEPS GAS COOL AND DRY.

With the Ideal Generator, the gas not only passes through the water and is washed, but is further purified and dried by being filtered through dry carbide. This gives a cool gas, a dry gas and a pure gas. The brilliancy of the light depends largely upon the quality of the gas and the scientific method of purifying gas is to wash it and then pass it through a vessel filled with small pieces of dry lime. As carbide is made from lime it is equally as good for a dryer and purifier as plain unslacked lime which is used by all chemists. The Ideal Generator is the only generator that washes and filters the gas. Size of generator 9x24 inches, weight about 14 pounds.

NO DANGER.

It is impossible to explode the Ideal Generator as the gas is not confined under pressure. The generator is automatic in its action, making the gas only as it is needed and therefore only small amount of gas accumulates in the gas chamber at one time.

The Perfection Acetylene Generator.

MAKING ACETYLENE GAS

This acetylene outfit is constructed on an entirely new principle and is by far superior to any acetylene outfit made for the stereopticon or magic lantern. "P" is generator and wash bottle and "B" is the storage tank. No heat is required for making the gas. The carbide is gradually brought in contact with the water, liberating the acetylene gas, which is stored by its own pressure in the tank. The process is simple and in a few minutes sufficient gas can be made for several entertainments. The gas is made before the entertainment begins, so all you have to do is to turn on the gas and light it.

THE PERFECTION ACETYLENE GENERATOR ATTACHED TO STEREOPTICON.

IS IT DANGEROUS?

Some people have an idea that the use of carbide gas is dangerous. On this question we refer you to the Scientific American, Acetylene Journal, or any other work of authority. They will all tell you there is no more danger in using carbide gas than there is in ordinary house or illuminating gas, and some even claim, for general use, there is less danger. The generator is so constructed and the amount of carbide is so small that, practically, there is no danger whatever in making the gas. As a safeguard against danger from an accident while making gas, a safety valve is provided. It is very seldom an excessive pressure is obtained or an accident occurs; but in case of an emergency the safety valve will relieve the excessive pressure and no harm will be done.

OBJECTIONS TO THE OLD STYLE ACETYLENE OUTFITS.

In all other acetylene outfits the gas is made as it is used and is kept in the tank by what is termed a "water seal." When full pressure is obtained (or the tank stands unused for awhile) the gas will bubble out through the water, escaping in the air. This is not only disagreeable but unhealthy and dangerous. All the gas or carbide left in the generator after the entertainment cannot be saved for future use and is therefore a loss. Another serious objection is that water frequently gathers in the tube causing the light to constantly flicker.

ADVANTAGES OF THE PERFECTION GENERATOR.

In the "Perfection" acetylene gas generator there is no loss of carbide or gas. The gas stored in the tank can be shipped and used at any future time. There is no danger of gas escaping in the air. There being no water in the tank it is perfectly clean and can be used on a carpeted floor. The gas being free from steam or moisture, no water can accumulate in the tubes. The gas in the tank is always dry and under constant pressure; the flow of which is regulated by a needle valve. This gas gives a steady, bright light and for dissolving with a double lantern, it is far superior to any other acetylene gas making outfit made. Those who purchase the "Perfection" acetylene generator, can any time in the future, add the "Ozo" gas making part of the "Ozo-Carbi" outfit (described on page 86 of our catalogue). This will make the "Ozo-Carbi" outfit complete, which gives a light brighter than calcium and more simple than electricity. Expense of the "ozo" part of the outfit will be $40.00. Only few minutes is required to make the gas and the process will be found very simple. Full directions sent with each outfit.

Special Incandescent Electric Lamp.

This is a special incandescent electric lamp for use with a stereopticon. The carbon-filament is made spiral shape so as to concentrate the light. It is better and more convenient than acetylene or gas mantle and will give a very good stereopticon picture 10 feet square. The light, however, is not strong enough for moving pictures, which require either electric-arc, or lime (oxy-hydrogen) light. With the special incandescent lamp is furnished a connecting plug, twenty feet of electric lamp cord, base and support with set screw for attaching to the post in lamp house. The sliding saddle and post shown in cut is not included as part of the outfit. No rheostat is required, except where two lanterns are used and dissolving effect is desired (see dissolving rheostat). With the 50 candle power lamp the light is turned on and off with the socket key, same as an ordinary incandescent bulb; but with the 100 candle power lamp it should be turned on and off by a small switch at the machine. For home use, secret societies and small halls, this light will be found very convenient. We would advise using the 100 candle power lamp.

ARNOLD'S Improved Calcium Light Outfit

THE ONLY PORTABLE CALCIUM LIGHT OUTFIT CONSTRUCTED

CALCIUM LIGHT.

HOW MADE.

Calcium or lime light is made by heating a piece of lime to white heat by burning the two gases, oxygen and hydrogen. These must be kept in separate cylinders or tanks and mixed in the burner when used.

Making your gas with this outfit the expense for each entertainment will be about 35 cents. To buy gas and pay express charges both ways the expense will be from $1.50 to $2.00 for each entertainment. The saving in express charges alone will pay cost of an outfit in a very short time. Besides it avoids serious losses often accruing from delay in filling orders, misconnections and delays in transit. This is a very important item and one that is liable to occur at any time.

You can always make your own gas anywhere. In half an hour you can make enough to last you for an evening performance of two hours or more.

Where electricity cannot be obtained, where they insist on charging exorbitant pay for same, or where current fails (which is very often the case) the change can be made and you are always ready and independent.

GAS BAGS. From a stand point of convenience and economy, various methods and devices have been tried to obtain a Portable Calcium Gas Making Outfit. Among the most popular of these has been the "Gas Bag" Outfit.

The gas seems to rot the bags, and they soon get to leaking and are rendered useless. You can place no dependence on a gas bag. It is likely to get punctured or spring a leak at any time, and this unfortunate circumstance frequently occurs just before or during an entertainment. As gas cannot be shipped in a bag, what is left after an entertainment is a total loss.

A TANK can always be depended upon. Enough gas can be made at one time for several entertainments. There is no waste of gas, and all this expense and annoyance is avoided.

Small Tank Calcium Outfit.

Consists of the oxygen gas making outfit with small tank, the improved saturator and all necessary appliances and connections. This tank is 10x36 inches in size, is tested to 450 pounds hydraulic pressure and has no seams or rivet heads, thus preventing the usual cause of leakage. It is made by new process, drawn from a solid piece of steel and is galvanized inside and outside after the tank is made. This insures the tank against leakage and prevents action of oxygen or moisture from eating or rusting the tank. The tank is light and strong, weighing about 45 pounds, and holds sufficient gas for about two hours use.

The outfit consists of one box and one tank, weighs about 135 pounds and can be checked as baggage.

PRICE, Arnold's Calcium Light Outfit, No. 1...$40.00

the gas is made it passes through an "electro-galvanic modifier." The chemicals used will not explode, burn or decrease in value by handling and shipping. In appearance they are dark red coarse powder, and upon application of heat gradually liberate the several different gases. The "ozo" gas is colorless, has but little odor, is not combustible and is no more dangerous to use than compressed air.

The method of making the gas is similar to the one generally used in making oxygen, but is simpler, inasmuch as no wash bottle is required. In half an hour sufficient gas (of both kinds) can be made for several hours' use.

BETTER THAN ELECTRIC LIGHT.

For general use on the road, the "ozo-carbi" light is far superior to electric light. The best electric light for stereopticon is obtained from direct current of 110 voltage, but unfortunately for the exhibitor, this current is seldom found. We do not claim this light to be stronger than an arc light that can be obtained from a direct current of this voltage; but we do claim the light to be superior to that obtained from low voltage alternating currents, such as are usually met with on the road.

An arc light from an alternating current is very noisy and unsteady and requires much time and attention to keep it burning.

The "ozo carbi" light is perfectly noiseless and steady and requires very little time or attention to keep a bright, steady light.

If you depend on electricity you will frequently be obliged to hire an electrician and occasionally will be charged an exorbitant price for the current used. Figuratively speaking, with the "ozo carbi" light, you furnish your own electricity and are your own electrician. With this new light you will succeed where others fail.

A GOOD LIGHT MEANS SUCCESS.

A good light to the exhibitor means success and a poor light means failure. Moving pictures require a much stronger light than a stereopticon slide. The latter is made of glass and remains stationary, while the former is made of celluloid and moves rapidly before the light. A picture should be sharp and distinct, and unless a bright, strong light is used, a moving picture will be dim.

The public are quick to appreciate a good picture and are as quick to condemn a poor picture. A bright, steady light means a good picture—a pleased audience—a full house and a fat purse.

The purchase of an "ozo-carbi" light will be the most profitable investment you ever made.

MAKING THE "OZO" GAS.

The above cut shows the outfit connected with the retort when making the "ozo" gas. M is hood for covering retort to retain heat when using furnace or heater K. C is the galvanic modifier through which the gas passes before entering tank A. G is safety valve that in case of emergency prevents any possibility of an explosion.

The tank is made by new process, drawn from a solid piece of steel and is galvanized inside and outside after the tank is made. This insures the tank against leakage and prevents action of gas or water from eating or rusting the iron. This tank is tested to 450 pounds hydraulic pressure and has no seams nor rivet heads, thus preventing the usual cause of leakage.

Galvanizing a tank inside after it is made, is something new and greatly increases the life and value of the tank.

The tank weighs about 50 pounds and will hold sufficient gas for three or four hours. All brass fittings, valves and connections are polished and nickel-plated.

The "ozo" gas is very easily made. The mixed chemicals are placed in retort H, heat is applied, and as the "ozo" gas is liberated it passes through the galvanic modifier C and is stored in the tank.

FURNACE OR HEATER K is not included in outfit.

Any other method may be used to heat the retort; but if the furnace is used, much better results will be obtained by covering the retort with a hood to confine the heat.

Price of furnace, with hood, - - - - - $5.00 extra

MAKING THE CARBIDE GAS.

This cut shows the outfit as connected when making the carbide or acetylene gas. The carbide generator is also provided with a safety valve, that renders the manufacture of the gas perfectly safe.

The tank is light and strong, weighing about 45 pounds, and holds sufficient gas for three or four hours. It is fully described elsewhere.

Before an entertainment a connection with a support three feet high and acetylene jet can be attached to the tank so that the operator at the close of the entertainment can light the room temporarily if desired. This attachment will frequently prove very serviceable, enabling the operator to instantly control the lighting of the room, or any other place where illumination is wanted. The jet and standard will be furnished at the slight additional cost of $1.50.

No heat is required to make the carbide gas and by its own expansion it is stored in the tank. The "Duplex" generator is a combined generator and wash bottle. The process is very simple and in a few minutes sufficient gas for several entertainments can be made.

"OZO-CARBI" LIGHT IN USE.

This cut shows the "OZO-carbi" gas outfit as it appears when connected with a stereopticon.

A is stem of tank valve that is operated by a cylinder wrench furnished with the outfit. B is a regulating valve that is operated by the hand and is to be removed when the tank is packed for shipping. Each tank is provided with a gauge as well as a regulating valve. The gauges indicate at all times the amount of gas in each tank, and the regulating valves give the operator perfect control of the gas and insures an even, steady flow to the burner.

IS IT DANGEROUS?

There is no more danger in using a tank of carbide gas and a tank of "OZO" gas, than there is in using a tank of hydrogen and oxygen.

Some people have an idea that the use of carbide gas is dangerous.

On this question we refer you to the Scientific American, Acetylene Journal, or any other work of authority. They will all tell you there is no more danger in using carbide gas than there is in ordinary house or illuminating gas, and some even claim, for general use, there is less danger. The generator is so constructed and the amount of carbide is so small that, practically, there is no danger whatever in making the gas. As a safeguard against danger from an accident while making gas, a safety valve is provided. It is very seldom an excessive pressure is obtained or an accident occurs; but in case of an emergency the safety valve will relieve the excessive pressure and no harm will be done. The generator for making the carbide gas and the retort for making the "OZO" gas are both provided with a safety valve.

WEIGHT AND SHIPPING CASE.

The outfit when ready for shipping consists of two tanks and one shipping case. The shipping case contains the carbide generator, the "OZO" gas making outfit and two cans for chemicals and carbide.

Total weight of complete outfit is about 175 pounds, and can be checked as baggage. With each outfit is sent complete printed instructions, which will be found very simple.

It is always advisable to have some chemicals shipped with the outfit.

GUARANTEE.

This light is something entirely new and we guarantee it to be just as represented—superior to anything on the market—more simple to operate, brighter and stronger—more safe to use than any gas making tank outfit ever made. We will forfeit $100 to anyone who can prove that this is not the safest portable calcium tank outfit on the market. We will also forfeit $100 to anyone who can explode one of these outfits when directions are followed. The most enthusiastic advocate of the "ozo-carbi" light will be the exhibitor who has had experience with calcium and electric light. It is such a relief after using an unreliable, dim, or "wheezy" light, that a trial of the "ozo-carbi" light will always gain for it a most enthusiastic friend and advocate.

To introduce this light to the exhibitor, we will take your outfit in exchange as part payment on a new one.

REGULATING VALVE.

The main part of this valve is made from one solid piece of brass and the needle pointed stem of the best steel. The valve is nickel plated and polished and provided with fine adjustment for regulating the flow of gas.

A regulating valve will not only save the consumption of gas; but will also give a more steady and brighter light.

By using a regulating valve the light can be "set" before the entertainment begins and thereby save the delay and annoyance of adjusting the light after the audience is assembled.

To "set the light" open tank valve freely and adjust the flow of gas by the regulating valve. To turn off the light, close the tank valve and leave the regulating valve set.

Portable Gas Outfits.

Compare the Different Kinds.

There are a number of different styles of portable calcium gas making outfits on the market and they all have the same object in view—namely that of saving the exhibitor money.

Gas Bags.

This was the first and original portable outfit. The oxygen and hydrogen were both made and stored in the gas bags before the entertainment began. The bags being made of rubber are not durable and this style of outfit at present is not in general use.

Cost per hour for this light is about 35 cents.

Tank and Saturator.

This style of outfit has become very popular during the last few years. The oxygen is made and stored in the tank before the entertainment begins. The hydrogen is automatically made as used from gasoline or ether, by what is termed a "saturator." Beware of a small saturator.

The saturator that will cause the least trouble is the improved No. 3 described in this catalogue.

It is constructed on scientific principles and protected by patents. Compare it with any other saturator on the market and you will readily see its many points of advantage.

When the oxygen is stored in a tank, there is no waste of chemicals or gas—a free steady flow of gas is always obtained and by means of the gauge, you tell at all times just the amount of gas in the tank.

Cost per hour with this light is about 25 cents.

Oxygen Made by Heat as Used.

In this style of outfit no bags or tank are used; but both gases are made automatically as required. The oxygen is made by application of small alcohol lamps to a tube or series of cups filled with oxygen chemicals. This heats the chemicals sufficient to liberate the oxygen gas as required for use. The hydrogen is made by using a saturator. The outfit is light, weighing about 35 pounds and the expense of running is small. Owing to the trouble of making during the entertainment, both the oxygen and hydrogen gases, this style of an outfit has never been very popular.

Cost per hour of light with this outfit is about 30 cents.

Oxylithe and Water.

In this outfit like the preceeding one, neither tank nor gas bags are used, both gases being made while using the light. The oxygen is obtained by bringing in contact with water a chemical called Oxylithe. The hydrogen is made by using a saturator.

Although very good results can be obtained with this outfit, still it is not as convenient to operate as where the oxygen is made and stored in a tank. One of the serious objections is the expense of the chemicals (Oxylithe) for making the oxygen.

Cost of light with this outfit is about $1.00 per hour.

Ozo-Carbi Outfit.

THE KING OF PORTABLE LIGHTS.

This outfit requires two tanks. No saturator is used; but both gases are made and stored in the tanks. No gas is made while using the light. Everyone familiar with calcium light admits that two tanks of gas is the most reliable, convenient and best method of making calcium light. It is the method used by all the theaters, all the large companies on the road and all the best lecturers and exhibitors. The only way to obtain a constant, reliable, even flow of gas and a steady light is by using two tanks. Cost of light per hour with this outfit is about 20 cents.

Comparison of Gas Outfits.

By comparing the cost and quality of the different portable gas outfits, it will be readily seen that the "ozo-carbi" outfit is much superior to all other outfits. It costs less to run it; it gives a stronger and more steady light and is much more convenient to operate. As moving pictures require a very strong light, the "ozo-carbi" light will be found specially valuable to everyone using a moving picture machine. The one to appreciate this light most is the one who has tried some other gas making outfit.

Experience has taught every successful circus, show or theatrical manager to do everything that is possible before the entertainment or performance begins, "If you wish to be successful profit by the experience of those who have made a success."

Not only make your own gas but attend to every detail before time for the entertainment and you will succeed while others fail.

ELECTRICITY

AS APPLIED TO THE STEREOPTICON.

Electric arc light is the best artificial light used for projecting purposes. This is not only due to its brilliancy, but radiating from a small point there is no loss of light. An arc light cannot be made from a battery, but must be taken from a current where a dynamo is used. Electric light is rapidly coming into general use and there is little danger in handling it when taken from a regular incandescent current.

Electric currents are of two kinds: alternating and direct (sometimes called continuous current). An arc light from an alternating current makes a deal of noise, while an arc light from a direct current is practically noiseless. A direct current is therefore always preferable. When using electric light for a stereopticon, the carbons should be tilted at an angle to throw the light forward, toward the condensing lenses.

With direct current, both carbons should stand at an angle of about 25 degrees. The top carbon (when they both feed alike) should be a little larger than the lower one and point of the lower carbon should be about one-eighth of an inch further forward than point of the top carbon.

When using direct current, the positive wire should be connected with the top carbon, otherwise the light will burn, as it is termed, "up-side-down." You can tell which is the positive wire by allowing the light to burn a few minutes, then throw the switch and look at the carbons while they are still red. The carbon that is the redder and remains hot the longer is connected with the positive wire. If this should be the lower carbon, change the wires at the lamp, so the positive wire will go to the top carbon. The current should reach the lamp first and return through the rheostat.

With alternating current, both carbons should be of the same size and both soft cored. The carbon holders should have a swivel joint and the carbons tilted so the points of both carbons project out at an angle of about 45 degrees. In alternating current both wires are the same, so you cannot burn the light "up-side-down." New carbons should always be pointed before using; but after burning awhile the ends will assume the correct shape and remain so until the carbons are entirely consumed.

DISSOLVING.

DISSOLVING BY ELECTRICITY.—In dissolving by electric light, you cannot gradually turn off one light and on the other as can be done with calcium light. Both electric lights must be kept burning all the time, and it requires two electric lamps and two rheostats. The dissolver is a mechanical device placed in front of the projecting lenses. The shutter is worked by a lever and as the end of one lens is covered, the end of the other lens is opened. By this means the curtain is never dark. As the picture in one lantern gradually disappears the picture in the other lantern gradually takes its place.

TO CONNECT ELECTRIC LAMP AND RHEOSTAT.

DIAGRAM FOR DISSOLVING STEREOPTICON

DIAGRAM FOR SINGLE STEREOPTICON

There are several methods of connecting a Double Dissolving Electric Stereopticon; but the above method is considered one of the most convenient. Each light being controlled by a separate switch, the two lanterns are operated independent of each other. On the top end of each rheostat there are two thumb screws for fastening the wire.

THE FUSE BLOCK near the machine should be provided with a smaller fuse than the one controlling the current supplying the lights of the house. The Fuse Block is used simply as a protection for the house lights in case of an accident at the machine. It is made of porcelain and used to connect the fuse with the supply wire. About 30 or 40 amperes will be required for operating a double dissolving electric lantern and connection should be made at the main switch or on a wire large enough to carry 40 amperes. See that the fuse on main wire will carry at least 50 amperes, and the fuse on your fuse block (near the lantern) 35 or 40 amperes. It would be well to always have with you some extra fuse wire and a number of fuse plugs that will carry 50 or 60 amperes.

FUSE or fuse wire is a composition metal, of a low melting point, similar in appearance to lead. If more current is taken through the wire than is intended it should carry, the fuse will melt and the current will be broken.

The size or amount of current a fuse will carry without melting is indicated by amperes. A combined fuse block and switch will be found more convenient to use than to have a switch and fuseblock separate.

CONNECTING SINGLE STEREOPTICON.—As will be seen by the diagram, one wire goes direct to the lamp and the other wire to the rheostat. The single lantern is much more simple to "connect up" and operate than the double lantern. It is advisable to become familiar with operating a single lantern before undertaking to operate a double dissolving one.

A single lantern will require 15 or 20 amperes of current, No. 12 wire and 25 ampere fuse should be used.

TO MAKE ELECTRIC CONNECTIONS.—1st connect the electric lamp, rheostat and switch as shown in the diagram for single lantern. 2nd see that the switch at the machine is open and the carbons are separated. 3rd connect your flexible cable wire to the supply wire at the switch board. Many houses provide a wall socket, screw plug or a switch, for convenient attachment of a stereopticon. When no such provision is provided, attachment can be made direct to the main switch or on one of the house circuits. Connections with the house wire should always be so made that current to the machine can be supplied while the house is in darkness.

See that the set screws holding the carbons in the lamp and the set screws holding the wire in the switch, rheostat and lamp are all tight.

TO START THE LIGHT.—When all the connections are properly made, close the switch and screw the carbons close enough together to start the light. Soon as you see a spark separate the carbons far enough to obtain a bright light. If the carbons are separated too much it will "break the current" and the light will go out. If the carbons are too near together, the arc will be so small that full power of the light will not be obtained. The points of the carbons should be far enough apart to show a little blaze. By the "arc" is meant the light, which is the distance between the points of the two carbons. As the carbons are consumed they must be screwed closer together, otherwise the distance between the carbons will be so great that the current cannot, figuratively speaking, jump from one carbon to the other and the light will go out.

THE RHEOSTAT.

A rheostat, or resistance coil, is used to convert an incandescent current into an arc light. Most of rheostats on the market are made for currents of 110 volts. Some are adjustable for any voltage below 110, while others have set connections and can be used only on current of 52 or 110 voltage. All our rheostats are adjustable, with sliding contact, and by it the light can be used on any voltage below 110, and the degree of light can be increased or decreased, as desired. When moving contact slide adjustment to increase brightness of the light care should be taken that the rheostat is not "burned out" that is, the wire melted in two).

The larger the wire used in making a rheostat, the greater amount of current will be consumed, and (if the carbons are the right size), a bright light will be obtained. If the current is too strong for the size of the carbons, there will be too much of a blaze at the carbon point and full benefit of the current can not be obtained. The usual rheostat for stereopticon use is for 15 or 20 amperes and $\frac{1}{2}$ inch carbon should be used in the electric lamp. For 25 or 30 amperes use $\frac{3}{4}$ carbons.

WATER RHEOSTAT.

Water can be used as a substitute for a resistance coil and will often be found a great convenience if not a necessity. In case of an emergency it can be used in place of a regular wire rheostat; but the principal use of a water rheostat is to reduce the voltage of a strong current. Should you carry a rheostat large enough to reduce a 500 volt street car circuit, it would not only be an expensive investment but would also be cumbersome and heavy.

HOW MADE.

Take a tub or barrel that does not leak and fill it nearly full of water. Dissolve in a pail of warm water $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ pound of washing soda and same amount of salt and add this solution to the water.

Take the ends of the wire that is attached to the rheostat, cut off the insulation (covering) two or three inches, leaving the copper wire bare, and securely fasten each end of the wire to a different piece of metal, that is convenient. A car link or coupling pin will serve the purpose very well. Place both these pieces of metal, attached to the wire, in the water. As the distance between these two pieces of metal is increased or decreased, so will the resistance and strength of the light be increased or decreased. The pieces of metal should be from one to two inches apart. A convenient way is to place one piece of metal with wire attached in bottom of the tub or barrel and hang the other piece of metal over the side directly above the metal in the tub. The piece of metal can be lowered or raised in the water as desired; but care should be used that they do not touch each other. The electricity will act upon the metal, gradually dissolving it.

Another way of regulating the resistance is to suspend both pieces partly emerged in the water from an insulated bar across the top of the tub.

After making a water rheostat a few times it will be found very simple; but to begin with it would be well to experiment with a current of low voltage.

CAUTION—Do not use a leaky tub or barrel—see that the floor around the tub is dry—do not allow the two pieces of metal to touch each other—be sure the switch is open when fixing the rheostat—always have an electrician to assist when connecting a 500 volt circuit.

GENERAL INFORMATION ON ELECTRICITY.

No electric outfit is complete without 50 or 100 feet of wire to convey the current from the main supply wire to the stereopticon. No. 12 lamp cord is large enough for a single lantern and being a flexible cable will be found more convenient for use on the road than the cheaper electric line wire. For double stereopticon No. 8 or 10 wire should be used. If not convenient to obtain this size, use No. 12 lamp cord and double it. If the wire is too small, it not only checks the supply of current, but there is danger of over heating the wire and burning off the insulation.

Should you wish to adjust or change the wire or carbons in the electric lamp, first throw the current off the lamp by opening the switch. The carbon holders are insulated so there is no danger of a shock by adjusting the light. A shock from an incandescent current of a 110 volts or less, is not sufficient to cause any alarm; but great care should be exercised when using a 500 volt circuit. This current (500 volts) is the usual strength of a street car current and is frequently used for lighting the opera house or hall. Always consult the local electrician when using this current and never attempt to use a high tension arc (1500 or 2000 volt) current.

Place your fuse block and switch on the end of the operating table or in some convenient place near the machine. There are holes in the porcelain base for screws to hold it firmly in place. Never allow the ends of the two "live" wires to touch each other or to touch the same piece of metal. If any conductor of electricity should touch both sides of the metal part of the switch at the same time, there will be a flash of light from the arc made at the switch. So if the switch should be placed on top of the operating table, see that there are no carbons, tools, or metal near it.

Never look directly at an arc light unless wearing dark colored glasses. There is not only danger of injuring the eyes; but the light will (for the time being) "blind you" so you will not be able to tell when the picture is in sharp focus.

Care should be used in selecting only the best quality of carbons. The ordinary street light carbons have hard spots in them, that will cause the light at times to hiss badly and grow dim.

Some electric lamps are provided with a double screw feed, where by for direct current, the top carbon is moved twice as fast as the lower carbon. When this lamp is used, both carbons are the same size whether used on direct or alternating current. The single feed lamp is much more simple in construction and more satisfactory to use than the double feed.

ELECTRIC SWITCH AND FUSE.

This cut shows a fuse and switch combined ("fused switch") with the connecting wire attached. Wires "a" are the supply wires that lead from the switch board to the machine. Wires "b" are the wires that lead to the rheostat and electric lamp. "c" are the fuse links or wire that connects the supply wires with those leading to the machine. "D" is an enlarged view of fuse links with copper terminal. If more current is consumed than the fuse is intended to carry, the fuse will be melted in two and your light will go out. Ordinary fuse wire can be used in place of fuse links. When ordering fuse links or fuse wire, always state the amperes wanted. This "fused switch" is much more convenient to use than a separate switch and fuse block. It has a slate base and is one of the best made.

ELECTRIC WIRE.

Every exhibitor using electricity should carry 50 or 100 feet of electric wire in his outfit, to convey the current from switch board to the machine. Flexible cable or lamp cord will be found much more convenient to use, when on the road, than the regular line wire. It consists of many strands of fine copper wire insulated with rubber or okonite. Being thoroughly insulated, it can be laid on the floor or handled without getting a shock. When ordering wire, remember the larger the number the smaller the wire, that is, No. 12 wire is larger than No. 14.

Do not attempt to use a wire too small as there is danger of over heating and melting it off. The ordinary electric lamp cord used on an incandescent bulb is too small to convey the required amount of current for a regular stereopticon light. It might be used and no serious results follow; but it is taking chances and violating the fire insurance law.

To splice an electric wire cut off the insulation leaving the copper wire bare and bright for two or three inches. Twist the two ends of the bare copper wire securely together and wind it with insulating tape.

No. 12 wire should be used for single stereopticon and No. 8 or 10 for double stereopticon. When price is quoted on flexible cable or lamp cord, it is always double wire, that is, two conductors while price quoted on electric line wire is single wire, only one conductor.

Screens or Curtains.

The screens or curtains are made of the best quality of bleached muslin and are provided with loops or made with a hem for the rope or cord.

Practical experience has proven that a screen frame is not only a useless expense, but is bulky and inconvenient for transportation. A convenient way to put up a screen is to screw two screw hooks in the wall or window frame, pass a small rope through the loops of one side of screen, and bring the ends of the rope over the screw hooks, securing them to two screw hooks in the floor. To steady the screen attach a cord to the lower corner and also attach ends of this cord to the screw hooks in the floor. Small rope or cord, screw eyes or hooks, can be obtained in any hardware store. A hook, however will be found more convenient than a ring.

Our screens or curtains are made on the improved principles and are the best made screens on the market. The strain, wear and tear of a screen is on the edge and corners and this is the part to "give out" first. To make this part the strongest, all of our screens are bound with a strong wide linen tape or webbing and the corners are made double thickness. The loops are made of the same webbing and body of the curtain, is made of the best quality of bleached muslin.

All our screens are made reversible, that is, so made that either side of the curtain can be used for the picture.

Loops for supporting the corners are much superior to the iron or brass rings that are sometimes used. Rings make the screen heavy and more difficult to handle. If the screen gets damp or wet they rust or rot the cloth and must be removed before the curtain is washed. The loops accomplish all the rings do without the objectionable features.

NEW PREPARATION FOR TREATING A SCREEN.

A picture thrown on a screen consists of lights and shadows; white and black and the varying shades between these extremes. To obtain the best results it is not only important to have a white curtain; but the curtain should not permit the light to pass through it. This "filler" is not a whitewash, calomine or a paint; but a metallic mixture, that whitens the curtain and fills the pores, rendering the curtain impervious to light. Treating your curtain with this preparation will increase the quality of your picture twenty-five per cent., making it sharper and brighter and more distinct.

It is easily and quickly applied. This preparation is put up in five pound packages, with full instructions for using.

One package will keep your curtain in good shape for a year.

Price, per package,.....$1.00

With each curtain purchased from us, as listed in the catalogue we furnish free one package of this filler.

Screen or Curtain on Spring Roller.

These curtains are on spring roller like a window shade and are rolled up out of the way when not in use. These curtains are opaque and as they will not permit any light to pass through them, are much better than the ordinary screen. If once a year they are given a light coating of curtain filler, they will always be white and clean and give the best results. They cannot be folded and are therefore not convenient for a traveling exhibitor; but are specially adapted for lodges, schools or any place where the curtain can be a permanent fixture. We carry the six, eight and ten foot in stock, but the largest size must be made to order.

ELECTRIC READING LAMP.

This is something new and has the advantage of being clean and always ready for use. The battery is enclosed in an oak case and the light is turned on by simply turning the switch.

The bell reflector is movable so the light can be thrown at any angle desired. All metal parts are nickel plated and polished. The battery will give a continuous light for about five hours and when used for only a short period at a time the strength of the battery will be restored and thus remain active for a long time. The bulb is frosted and gives a soft, even light. A red bulb costs 50 cents and by substituting it for the white one, the lamp can be used in a dark room while developing photographic plates.

Reading Lamp.

A reading lamp for a stereopticon or moving picture entertainment is almost a necessity, especially if any manuscript is to be read. As the room should be kept dark, it is necessary to have a lamp that will concentrate the rays upon the manuscript without diffusing them through the room. A reading lamp using a candle is much preferable to one using oil. There is no danger of leaking when packed with other goods, and it is much cleaner to handle. The light is supplied by a special candle, held in position by a spring, that keeps the flame burning in the same place. Each candle will burn about four (4) hours.

The Phonograph or Graphophone.

ITS VALUE AS AN ENTERTAINER.

One of the most efficient adjuncts to the stereopticon, and which insures one of the most instructive and charming entertainments that can be given, is the association of a high grade phonograph with a stereopticon or moving picture outfit. As there is no method of reproducing the real object to the vision, except by use of the stereopticon, so there is no other means of reproducing the real voice of music, song or speech to the hearing, except by the phonograph.

By associating the two you appeal to both the eye and the ear, and can give a most scientific and instructive entertainment.

You can take your audience, in one evening, around the world, viewing the most magnificent places and historic scenes while charming them with song and music as discoursed by the most famous artists. You have an orchestra or a band, piccolo or cornet solo, zyllophone or banjo, all the popular songs, as solos, or the sweet blending of voices in quartet. They are always at your command and ready when called upon. There are no hotel bills or railroad fares to pay.

We are not referring to the ordinary little phonograph you have heard, but the "Concert Grand," that uses a record 15 inches in circumference, the music from which will fill the largest hall or opera house. The volume and quality of tone is nearly equal to the original music from which the record is made.

Music and pictures are something that all people, old or young, of every nation, appreciate and understand. With this high grade phonograph and choice selection of records, any audience can be entertained. If you will leave the selecting of records to us we will give you the benefit of our experience, and send only those that will be popular with your audience.

Improved Victor III, $40. With 42 in. Horn, $52.

This style of talking machine uses a flat hard rubber record. These records being made of hard rubber are not liable to break, require very little room for shipping and are therefore much more convenient for road use. The large records are especially adapted for concert work.

The highest types of excellence in talking machines are all combined in the Improved Victor III. It is made as accurate as a scientific instrument, and will last a life time.

Among its points of excellence we mention:

Rigid tapering arm: the latest scientific method of reproducing sound.

Cabinet: handsome quartered-oak with hinge top.

Motor: double tandem spring; plays several records with one winding; and can be wound while playing.

Turn-table: 10-inch; can be used for all size records.

Sound-box: Concert (Exhibition if preferred).

Horn: including tapering arm, 27 inches long.

Needles: 200 with two-part box for new and worn needles.

Larger horn, turn-table and cabinet than the $25 type. and on account of its price the most popular talking machine made.

109A

"Victor" Trumpet for Improved Victor III.

A new synchronizing horn, length, including taper arm equipment, 34 inch; diameter of bell, 18 inch. Equal in volume to the largest metal horn and superior in musical tone.

It is not a non-vibrating horn. It vibrates as all horns must which are good for anything. But it vibrates in harmony with the sound waves, and gives them character.

The proper vibration of the column of air in the horn as well as the sympathetic vibration of the horn itself, is an important factor in good record playing. The Trumpet vibrates in harmony with the sound waves set in motion by the sound box.

Beware of horns warranted not to vibrate. They are dead.

Made of fibre board, finished outside in brown, inside in orange. will not warp, lose its shape or break. Is practically indestructible.

Quality of voice depends not so much upon the vocal chords as upon the shape and formation of the chambers through which the sound passes. In like manner the quality, or voice, of the talking machine depends more upon the horn than upon the sound box.

In voice the trumpet has no equal. It is entirely free from harshness.

There is no shivering either of horn or listener.

The Trumpet has a voice; the average horn hasn't.

The Edison Universal Projecting Kinetoscope.

This is the latest Edison moving picture machine combined with stereopticon. The above cut shows front view with light centered on the moving picture attachment.

The moving picture part and the stereopticon objective lens are on sliding rod so the change from moving pictures to stereopticon slides can be made instantly. The machine is provided with a take up device by which the film is re-wound as fast as it runs through the machine.

The 1903 model is great improvement over the old style Edison machine. It is lighter and smaller and much more convenient to operate.

Lens furnished with moving picture machine as above, makes picture size of 3 feet for every 10 feet of distance. If a lens with longer focus is preferred, it will be sent in place of the regular lens for a difference of $5.00. If lens with longer focus is desired in addition to the regular lens, either one projecting picture size of 3 feet for every 14 feet of distance, or, 3 feet for every 20 feet distance will be furnished for $10.00.

It is provided with a triple sprocket gearing, by which a loop is formed both top and bottom of the intermittent gearing. The quick framing device by which the film can always be kept in perfect frame is a great convenience.

The Edison Kinetoscope and Leader Lantern.

The above cut shows the latest 1904 Model Edison Moving Picture Machine combined with the Leader lantern. For description of Leader lantern see page 46 and points of superiority page 49 and 50. The change from moving picture to stereopticon can be made instantly. This combination outfit is much superior to anything of the kind on the market—not only in the result obtained, but also in appearance and convenience in operating. The Leader lantern used with this outfit is "Leader B" as described on page 50.

A SPECIAL BASE BOARD is used for the lantern and moving picture mechanism. It is so constructed as to be quickly separated in two parts for convenience in shipping, and will be found much better than the regular board furnished with the machine.

A CONE OR HOOD is attached to the moving picture mechanism connecting it with the bellows of the stereopticon. This not only prevents the light from shining in the eyes of those sitting near the machine; but also prevents any side light from reaching the curtain and making the picture dim.

DOUBLE DISSOLVING LANTERN. Another advantage of using the Leader lantern with the Edison machine, is that a top lantern can be added at any time, thus making a double dissolving lantern.

REEL HANGERS OR SUPPORTS. With the regular reel hangers or supports furnished with the machine a reel holding about 600 feet of film is used. In place of these we can furnish the larger size reels and hangers, holding one thousand feet of film. This will be found a great convenience where more than 600 feet is used at one entertainment. When the large reels are used an extra roller is put on lower part of machine over which the film passes to the rewind.

CARRYING CASE is same style and finish as No. 1 described on page 48. Separate apartment is provided for the Edison machine except the base board which can be packed in a trunk.

STEREOPTICON OBJECTIVE LENS. The objective lens for the stereopticon is the genuine, large barrel, $\frac{1}{2}$ size Bausch and Lomb lens, bearing their name and serial number. With all lenses, size of picture can be regulated by distance between the machine and curtain; but with this lens two different size pictures can be made without changing position of the machine. It is practically equal to two lenses and will be found a great convenience for use in rooms of different size. You can set the machine anywhere from 20 to 75 feet from the curtain.

SPECIAL MOVING PICTURE LENS. A special high grade moving picture lens is made that has a larger barrel or mounting than the regular lens furnished with the Edison machine. It gives a white, flat field, a bright picture sharp and clear to the edge, and we take pleasure in recommending it to professional exhibitors.

IMPROVED CRANK OR HANDLE. The regular crank or handle furnished with the Edison machine is provided with a slot that fits loosely over a projection on the shaft. While turning the machine the handle frequently slips off this projection, which permits the crank to turn but not the machine. When the picture film stops moving it will quickly take fire from the concentrated heat of the light, and many an exhibitor has met with serious loss through an accident of this kind.

We furnish with the Edison machine a crank provided with a snap spring catch so that it is impossible for the crank to slip off.

With this crank the machine is always under perfect control of the operator and an accident of this kind is impossible.

So many serious accidents have occurred by the machine stopping while the light is on the film that many cities have passed a law requiring the crank or handle on all moving picture machines to be securely attached to the shaft so it is impossible for it to slip or become detached while turning the machine. Such a law is now in effect in Chicago.

FRAMING PLATE. After films have been made for some time they have both an "up and down" movement as well as a side movement. This vibration or movement is magnified on the curtain and makes the picture unsteady. The appearance is not only bad, but it is also very trying on the eyes. Some films shrink more than others, depending on how well the stock is seasoned before the picture is made.

Every exhibitor has among his list of films some that have shrunk considerably and are very "shaky." This Framing plate largely overcomes this defect and prevents the shaky appearance on the curtain. All films become more or less unsteady from wear and the framing plate will greatly improve appearance of picture on the curtain.

Large Barrel Stereopticon Lens as described, Edison 1903 Model Moving Picture Machine, special Base Board for the combined machine, Long Reel Hangers and large Reels, Special Moving Picture Lens, Cone or Hood for shutting out the light, No. 1 Carrying Case, Improved Crank or Handle, Framing Plate and either Monarch Electric Lamp or Economy Calcium Jet No. 2, $110.00

This outfit is known as "Leader and Edison No. 1."

The Edison Moving Picture Machine and Leader Lantern as described, is without question the most complete high grade outfit on the market. The attractive appearance, the light weight, the convenience of operating and the many scientific and practical improvements all combine to place it far above all combinations of other makes. Compare it with any other combined moving picture machine and stereopticon and you will agree with us that it has no equal. Only experienced exhibitors can fully appreciate its many advantages. If you anticipate purchasing a moving picture outfit, and do not feel that you can afford so high a priced machine, it will pay you to cut down some other part of your outfit and buy a Leader and Edison. Have a good foundation to build on and you can add to your outfit later on.

Objective Lens.

One of the most important points to consider in selecting a lantern is the objective lens.

In the cheapest lanterns a simple plano or double convex lens is used; but the better class of lanterns have a double achromatic lens. The quality and price of these vary greatly, depending on grade of material used and the time and labor spent in their construction. Every lens manufacturer makes two grades of lenses, putting their name and serial number only on the better grade. So when ordering lens of certain make, to be sure of getting the best grade, see that the name, address and number is stamped on the lens.

Size of the picture on the screen is not governed by the size of the lens, but by the focal length. (See table, page 123.)

SPECIAL COMBINATION LENS.

We can supply a projecting lens with interchangeable back and front combinations, making the following size lenses: $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{3}$, $\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{2}{3}$ and 4-4.

By simply changing the glasses, pictures as made by the above size lenses can be obtained.

Special Objective Lens.

To meet the demand of the public for a cheap stereopticon objective lens, we carry the following lenses in stock:

PRICE, LENSES IN QUARTER SIZE TUBES OR MOUNTINGS.

$\frac{1}{4}$ size short distance.....	each \$4.50
$\frac{1}{8}$ " medium short distance.....	" 4.50
$\frac{1}{2}$ " " distance.....	" 4.50
$\frac{3}{8}$ " " long distance.....	" 4.50
4-4 " long distance.....	" 4.50

For different size pictures made with lenses, see table for lenses page 5.

The $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{8}$ and $\frac{1}{2}$ size lens in $\frac{1}{4}$ size mountings will give good picture; but we would not recommend the $\frac{3}{8}$ or 4-4 in so small a tube. If lens of this size is wanted good results will be obtained by taking them in the $\frac{1}{2}$ size tube.

PRICE, LENSES IN HALF SIZE TUBES OR MOUNTINGS.

$\frac{3}{4}$ size medium long distance.....	\$15.00
4-4 size long distance.....	15.00
Special long distance.....	18.00

Of these special long distance lenses we have three sizes, No. 1,

No. 2 and No. 3, giving picture about 1-6, 1-7 or $\frac{1}{8}$ the distance of machine from the curtain.

DIAMETER OF STANDARD OBJECTIVE LENS.

$\frac{1}{4}$ size Projecting Lens, diameter of glass $1\frac{1}{8}$ inches.

$\frac{1}{4}$ " " " " " "	" 2 $\frac{1}{4}$ "
$\frac{3}{8}$ " " " " " "	" 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ "
4-4 " " " " " "	" 3 "

The diameter given is size of lens glass and not the tube or mounting.

The size of a picture made by a lens, does not depend on the size of the tube or mounting, but upon the focus of the lens; and the focus of the lens is governed by the curve or shape the lens glass is ground.

To obtain the best results, the longer the focus, the larger the glass and mounting should be. With a long focus lens in a small tube, it is not possible to obtain a clear field or a sharp picture.

Special Wide Angle Lens.

With all lenses, the size of the picture will vary according to the distance the machine is from the curtain. It is sometimes desirable to place the lantern near the curtain and still obtain a good size picture. To meet this requirement a special wide angle lens is made that will give about a 10 inch picture for every foot the lantern is from the curtain.

6 feet from curtain, will give 5 foot picture.

12 " " " " " "	10 " "
20 " " " " " "	17 " "

When using this lens the lantern must be elevated so the lens will be on a line with center of the curtain. If tilted either front or back one side of the picture will be out of focus.

Sometimes it is more convenient to set the lantern behind the curtain and throw the picture through the screen. In this case this lens will be found very convenient.

PRICE, SPECIAL WIDE ANGLE STEREOPTICON LENS $7.00

Law and Table for Objective Lenses.

The size of a picture made by a lens does not depend upon the size of the tube or mounting, but upon the focal length, and the focus is governed by the curve or shape the lens glass is ground. The size of picture and the focal length will vary somewhat in lenses of different makes, however, the following table gives the approximate length of focus for the standard sizes of all makes:

APPROXIMATE LENGTH OF FOCUS.

Wide angle, objective.....	4 in.	focal length.
Quarter size, "	6 in.	" "
One-third size, "	7½ in.	" "
One-half size, "	10 in.	" "
Two-thirds size, "	12 in.	" "
Four-four size, "	15 in.	" "
Special long size, objective.....	18 in.	" "

It should be remembered that with all lenses the size of the picture will increase or decrease according to the distance from the lens to the screen. Name and law governing size of the picture of lenses, having different focal length, is approximately as follows:

A "one-fourth" size projecting lens will give picture or disk, in diameter, one-half the distance from the machine to the curtain; a "one-third" lens, two-fifths; a "one-half" lens, one-third less 10 per cent; a "two-thirds" lens, one-fourth; and a "four-four" lens, one-fifth the distance.

The following table will illustrate the above rules:

SIZES OF LENSES.	10 ft.	20 ft.	30 ft.	40 ft.	50 ft.	60 ft.	70 ft.	80 ft.	90 ft.	100 ft.	110 ft.	120 ft.	130 ft.	Size in feet of picture on the screen.
Wide Angle.....	6¾	13½	20
¼.....	5	10	15	20
⅓.....	4	8	12	16	20	24
½.....		6	9	12	15	18	21	24
⅔.....			7½	10	12½	15	17½	20	22½	25
¾.....				8	10	12	14	16	18	20	23	27

By unscrewing and removing the back lens from the tube, a smaller picture can be made, and as the focal distance is lengthened the lens, (to focus the picture), must be moved farther from the light. Although this detracts a little from the sharpness of the picture, still, in case of an emergency, it will be found a great convenience.

The Allen Universal Focusing Lens

Something New

FOR

Stereopticon and Moving Picture Machines

This lens is constructed upon an entirely new principle, and is the only lens on the market which will project a large or small picture, or any size between these extremes, without changing the distance of the lantern from the screen.

It is not the lens with a removable tube that has been on the market for some time; but is something entirely new and far superior to anything of the kind ever offered to the public. Perfecting this lens has accomplished what lens makers considered impossible and is an important discovery in the science of optics. By simply turning the front of the lens (as indicated by the hand) the picture will gradually grow larger or smaller and remain in perfect focus during the change.

When using any other lens, the machine must be placed about a certain distance from the curtain to obtain the size picture desired and to do this is often a source of inconvenience and a waste of valuable time.

With the Allen lens, the machine can be placed in any convenient place and a picture the desired size be obtained.

The stereopticon lens will make picture one-half to one-fifth the distance from machine to the curtain. Size of the picture can be changed while the machine is in use and the picture will remain in focus during the change. Every exhibitor of moving pictures should have one of these lenses.

The moving picture lens will make picture one-third to one-fifth the distance from machine to the curtain.

	SMALLEST	LARGEST	SMALLEST	LARGEST
" 30	4 feet and 6 "	7 feet 10 "	4 and 6 "	12 feet 15 "
" 40	6 "	10 "	6 "	20 "
" 50	8 "	14 "	8 "	25 "
" 60	10 "	17 "	10 "	30 "
" 80	12 "	20 "	12 "	40 "
" 100	15 "	25 "	15 "	50 "

Any size between these extremes can be made at will by revolving the front ring of the lens and the different size pictures can be made while the machine is in operation.

Special provisions are necessary for attaching the Allen lens to the Optigraph and the Edison Moving Picture Machines. The cost of this attachment is $1.50 in addition to the price of the lens.

When ordering moving picture lens please specify with what machine the lens is to be used.

We would specially recommend this lens for the moving pictures. To enlarge or reduce size of a moving picture, keeping it in perfect focus during the change, so that a man or horse will grow larger or smaller while in motion, will be found very amusing. In all parts of the country will be found amateur photographers and kodak operators who are somewhat familiar with the use of lenses, and the novelty and scientific principles involved in this lens will be of great interest to them.

The use of this lens will be found a novel feature and those present at an entertainment where its magical powers are shown, are sure to talk about it afterwards. The enterprising operator who adds this lens to his outfit will not only have the present satisfaction of giving an attractive entertainment, but the future advantage of considerable free advertising.

Moving Picture Lens.

The projecting lens is one of the most important parts of a machine, for with a poor lens, a good picture cannot be obtained, no matter how good the other parts of an outfit may be.

The size of each photograph on a moving picture film is about $\frac{3}{4}$ of a square inch while a lantern slide picture is about 9 square inches. It will therefore require a lens with much greater power (wider angle) for a moving picture than for a lantern slide.

A moving picture film is made of celluloid, which is translucent, while the lantern slide is made of glass and is transparent.

One moves rapidly before the light, while the other is stationary. And again the shutter on a moving picture machine shuts the light off the curtain about one-third of the time.

Therefore the moving pictures require a much stronger light and upon the screen never appear so bright as the slide. The larger the picture the less brilliant—the larger the space covered by the light, the dimmer the field. Where the same light is used it is always advisable to make the moving picture about $\frac{1}{3}$ smaller than the stereopticon pictures.

This lens is made by Bausch & Lomb and special care has been used in its construction, both in workmanship and in the material used. The picture is cut sharp and clear from center to edge and we can recommend it as giving a better picture than any other moving picture lens on the market.

It gives a picture a little over one-fifth of the distance from the machine to the curtain (12 foot picture at 54 feet).

PRICE, BAUSCH & LOMB MOVING PICTURE LENS $12.00.

Short Distance Moving Picture Lens.

This lens will give a moving picture about one-third of the distance between the machine and the curtain, or a 10 foot picture at 30 feet. This will be found convenient where it is necessary to get near the curtain.

PRICE, WIDE ANGLE MOVING PICTURE LENS $7.00.

Long Distance Moving Picture Lens.

Moving Picture Lenses are usually designated as short, medium, and long distance. Machines when sent out are usually supplied with either the short or medium focus lens. There are however occasions when it is desired to place the machine 75 or more feet from the curtain. In such instances it is necessary to use a special long distance lens of which we quote the following:

PRICE, No. 4. Special Moving Picture Lens.....$10.00

This makes a picture about one foot for every seven feet distance between the machine and curtain.

No. 5. Special Moving Picture Lens..... 12.00

This makes a picture about one foot for every eight feet distance.

No. 6. Special Moving Picture Lens..... 15.00

This makes a picture about one foot for every nine feet distance.

Condensing Lens.

A condensing lens is a circular piece of glass and in shape is called a "plano-convex," that is, flat or plain on one side and oval or convex on the other.

Two of these lenses are used with their convex sides toward each other. They are mounted in a cell or case and are placed next to the light. The purpose they serve is to gather or condense the light so it can pass through the projecting lens.

The thinner the lens, the longer the focus, and the thicker the lens the shorter the focus. The condensing lenses generally used in stereopticon are the $5\frac{1}{2}$, $6\frac{1}{2}$ and $7\frac{1}{2}$ inch focus. When using a $5\frac{1}{2}$ inch focus lens, the light is nearer the lens than when using a $7\frac{1}{2}$ inch focus.

With the long focus lenses there is less danger of breakage, but there is also some loss of light. When two lenses of different thickness or focus are used, always place the thinner or long focus one next to the light.

Our lenses are of the best quality, free from imperfection, with accurately ground curves and well polished surfaces. Experience has proven that condensing lenses of $4\frac{1}{2}$ inch diameter are the most practical for stereopticon use.

PRICE, Condensing Lens $4\frac{1}{2}$ inch diameter, each....\$1.50

Condensing Lens Mounting.

The illustration under Condensing Lens shows pair of condensing lenses and mounting (or cell) cut in two.

The lenses should be placed with convex sides towards each other and slightly separated. They should be held firmly in position, still have room for expansion when hot. This lens mounting or cell is made of spun brass, nickel plated, highly polished and thoroughly ventilated.

PRICE, Lens Mounting or Cell, each.....$1.50

Eureka Single Dissolver

It will make your Single Lantern a Dissolving Lantern.

This cut shows the Eureka Single Dissolver attached to lantern ready for use.

Ever since the double lantern has been in use, efforts have been made to devise some means whereby dissolving effects could be obtained with a single lantern. To accomplish this might seem an easy task; however, until this invention was perfected, all such efforts have proved a failure.

HOW USED.

With adjustable thumb screw A, it is attached to the front of the objective lens. By moving the lever B controlling the dissolving shutters, one picture will gradually disappear and another will gradually replace it. There is always light on the curtain, and at no time during the change is the curtain dark. The dissolving can be done slowly or quickly as desired and with either electric or calcium light.

When dissolving slowly, the picture gradually fades away, while the other picture gradually grows brighter until the full illumination is obtained. C and C are dissolving tinters, by means of which a scene may be dissolved from daylight to sun set and from sun set to night scene. Beautiful effects can be obtained by using these dissolving tinters.

The dissolver is made of aluminum, satin finished and beautifully engraved. It can be attached to any lens, is simple in construction, light and strong, and will prove an ornament to any lantern. No one using a single lantern can afford to be without this dissolver. It will double the value of your lantern and will be the most profitable investment you ever made. We guarantee this dissolver to be just as represented and upon receipt of $2.00 as proof of good faith will ship the dissolver subject to examination, remainder of $8.00 C. O. D.

Price, Eureka Single Lantern Dissolver No. 1, $10.00

Eureka Single Lantern Dissolver No. 2, 13.50

No. 1 Dissolver is adjusted to fit any lens the diameter of rim of front end of objective not exceeding $3\frac{3}{4}$ inches. The No. 1 dissolver will fit $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{2}$, or $\frac{3}{4}$ size Darlot or Bausch & Lomb lens

No. 2 Dissolver will fit objective lens, diameter of whose front ring exceeds $3\frac{3}{4}$ inches. This will include 2-3 and 4-4 size Darlot or Bausch & Lomb lens. Unless specified the No. 1 Dissolver will always be sent.

Double Slide Carrier.

For general use this is the simplest and best carrier on the market. Being made of wood it is light, and when in position need not be removed during the entertainment. While one slide is showing another is put in the other compartment. The change is quick, accurate and self-centering. No springs or levers to get out of order. Can be used equally as well for dissolving as for single lanterns.

Price, $.50

Improved Double Slide Carrier.

For dissolving stereopticon this is without question the best slide carrier on the market. It is not only suitable for double lantern, but equally as good for single lantern. To obtain the best dissolving effects every slide should occupy exactly the same place in the slide carrier and all the mats should be of the same size. "A" is a spring that automatically centers each slide, holds it rigid and always in the same place. "B" is a metal mat of aluminum frame that makes the picture of all full size slides the same size. The paper mat on a slide is not reliable. In putting the mat in place it is frequently pulled a little to either one side or the other, and again mats cut by the same form or die will vary in the size. A large number are cut at the same time, so that the pile of paper will "squash" or stretch. A very little difference in the size or shape of the mat when magnified is sufficient to give bad appearance on the curtain. The metal mat not only prevents this, but also serves as a most valuable guide in matching the fields of a dissolving lantern. Another feature of this slide carrier is that it can be used for both American and English size of slides.

SLIDES OF DIFFERENT SIZE.

The American slide is $3\frac{1}{4} \times 4$ inches while the English is square $3\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{1}{4}$. The picture however on both slides is the same size and the metal mat will therefore fit the picture of either slide. To center an English slide all that is necessary is to place in the slot of slide carrier opposite the spring, a small piece of wood about $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch wide. For double lantern, the slides are used only in one side of the carrier, therefore the other side can be used for the English size. This will be found very convenient where the operator has both the American and English size.

A BRIGHTER PICTURE.

When using a double lantern with calcium light, a dissolving key is used to turn the gas from one burner to the other. This leaves the lime luminous in the "off" lantern, which always shows light on the curtain and dims the picture. This objectionable light is often termed a "ghost" and is sometimes prevented by holding the hand over the objective lens or capping it with the lens cap. As previously stated, with a double lantern, slides are used in only one side of the double carrier. By keeping a "blind" (piece of cardboard or other opaque substance) in opposite side of carrier this "ghost" is instantly and completely destroyed, soon as the carrier is pulled over to change the slide. This "blind" will also be found convenient to keep the light off the curtain when lighting up the machine or until ready for the first picture. When using a double lantern, should an accident occur to one of the lanterns, the Improved Double Slide Carrier will be found a great convenience.

SPECIAL MADE CARRIER.

This carrier is not the ordinary double slide carrier made of cheap material and put together with iron nails. The Improved Carrier is made heavier and stronger, of the best cherry and special provision is made in the construction to accommodate the metal mat. All joints are glued and the small nails used are polished brass. The spring used in each side of the carrier is of polished brass and so simple in construction it will not get out of order. Each carrier is packed in separate box with directions for using.

POINTS OF ADVANTAGE.

1. Picture made same size on curtain.
2. Preventing "ghost" on curtain.
3. Can use both English and American size slides.
4. Accurate matching fields for double lantern.
5. Shutting off all light from curtain when desired.
6. Can be used for single or double lantern.

IMPROVED SHUTTER CARRIER

INSTANTANEOUS CHANGE: ALWAYS IN FOCUS: NO MOVEMENT SEEN.

This slide carrier is provided with a shutter that conceals movement of the slide during the change and is great improvement on any other carrier on the market. The slides are all put in and removed from the carrier on the same side of machine where the operator stands. This gives speed, accuracy and convenience which are important to the success of operating a machine.

In all other carriers of a similar nature, the operator is required to reach over the lantern to put in and remove half the slides. All the slides are put in and removed at "B" and by pushing lever or button "A" the change can be quickly or slowly made as desired.

The carrier is made of aluminum, engraved and finely finished. It is simple in construction, light and strong and will fit any standard size slide holder. When using poses plastique slides, to obtain the best result, some form of shutter should be used and the Improved Shutter Carrier will be found just the thing. With this carrier the light from the machine can be completely shut off the curtain as long as desired, which will be found a convenient way to keep light from the curtain until ready for the first slide. In simplicity of construction, convenience in operating and the results obtained this carrier has no equal. Size $\frac{7}{8}$ inch thick and $4\frac{1}{4}$ inches high.

The Chirograph.

This is something new and is the most novel and interesting screen specialty on the market. With it the operator at the machine can write anything he wishes and the audience can see it being written on the screen. Portraits of celebrated people, comic newspaper cartoons, landscapes or scenery can apparently be drawn on the curtain by anyone. The process consists simply of tracing the outlines of a picture with a pencil. In appearance the Chirograph somewhat resembles a double slide carrier and will fit any lantern. In one side is placed the paper on which to write or the picture to be traced and in the other side is the blank opaque slide. By means of a reverse lever every move of the pencil is reproduced on the opaque slide in a reverse manner so it appears right side up on the screen or curtain. The curtain is perfectly black only as the needle or metallic point cuts through the opaque coating on the glass. The glass is made opaque by smoking it over a candle or coating it with a liquid opaque furnished with the Chirograph. This coating can be wiped or washed off with water and used over any number of times.

To see writing being done or a picture being drawn on the screen, with no visible means of doing it, will be found a most valuable attraction. It is something new, novel and mysterious—it will create more talk and advertise you more than any other feature on your programme. The 10 or 15 minutes time taken up by the Chirograph will be the most interesting part of your entertainment and no exhibitor can afford to be without it.

Pressure Gauge

To anyone using gas a pressure gauge is a great convenience and almost a necessity. Without it the operator is at a loss to know the amount of gas in the tank or the amount used at each entertainment. The usual size cylinder used on the road, in which gas is sold and shipped, is 12x48 inches. The amount of gas in this size tank when fully charged is 50 feet and should show pressure of about 225 lbs. This gauge will not only show at all times the pounds pressure in the tank but also the number of cubic feet. BEWARE OF CHEAP GAUGES!

Quality the Best.

This gauge is made of the best quality of brass (no iron), fully nickel plated and polished—the face is the best French plate glass, with bevel edges—the interior mechanism is the finest skilled labor can make—the dial is made by a new process on a composition metal that will always remain bright and distinct.

Each gauge has a box or case with sliding cover which protects the gauge when shipping.

Price, complete with connection for tank.....$5.00
This quality and finish of gauge is usually sold for seven dollars.

CARBONS.

FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT.

It is impossible to obtain a good light with poor carbons and care should therefore be used in their selection.

Ordinary carbons, such as are generally used for street light are not suitable for stereopticon or moving picture machine.

Cheap carbons make a deal of dust when burning; they have hard spots in them that cause the light to grow dim at times and to make a loud hissing noise. We carry in stock a specially prepared carbon for stereopticon and other high grade electric arc light use. The combustion is even and perfect and practically, they produce no dust. They give a brilliant, uniform light and produce the highest standard candle power in proportion to the current consumed. We carry the following

For alternating current use 7 16 or ½-inch carbons, according to the number of amperes used. If you order 7-16 and ¼-inch, carbons will give sufficient variety for general use on either current. For further information regarding use of carbons see Electricity, page 95.

Special Alternating Carbons.

Everyone familiar with alternating current knows it is noisy and that the light is not steady. The advantages claimed for this carbon is that it greatly reduces the noise and makes the light burn more steadily. Owing to the shape of the carbon, the length of the arc is reduced thus reducing the noise and by the flat side of the carbon the "erater" is kept more on the front side of the carbon. When in use the flat side of both carbons should face the condensing lens. The carbons are made in one size only 9-16x10 inches.

To use the tip the insulation should be removed from the wire, so the set screw B will come in contact with the base wire. This tip will not only be found a great convenience; but will insure perfect contact so full strength of the current will be obtained.

Monkey Wrench.

A wrench of this style will be found useful for those using gas tanks or a portable gas making outfit. The entire bar of this wrench is a solid steel forging of one piece, thereby having the greatest tensile strength. Length 12 inches, jaws will open 2 1/4 inches.

PRICE, 75 CENTS EACH

Stock Slide Box.

For stock we have had boxes made twelve inches in length, neatly covered with black cloth, without partitions, holding about 100 slides. These will be found very convenient for slides not in constant use.

PRICE, EACH 35 CENTS.

Tinters.

Tinters are usually made of colored gelatine or glass, and a few bright colors will be found a valuable addition to an outfit.

For throwing colored lights on a tableau, the tinters should be used in a slide carrier or color wheel; but when used to tint a picture, they should be held in front of the projecting lens. They will be found useful for throwing tinted background on statuary and for giving to scenery a sunset or moonlight effect. With a little practice, a pleasing effect can be obtained by blending or dissolving one color into another.

We have two kinds of tinters; both are the same size as an ordinary stereopticon slide. One is made of colored gelatine between two cover glasses, and the other is colored glass. Gelatine is more easily affected by heat, and is therefore not so durable.

Price, Gelatine slide 15 cents.
 Colored glass 25 cents.

Leader Slide Box.

For convenience and practical use, for strength and finish, this slide box exceeds anything on the market. The box is made of wood covered with leather, has metal corners, leather drop handle, metal clasps, lock and key, four compartments separated by card board partitions, a separable top and holds 120 slides. If desired, to carry more than 120 slides, the cardboard partitions can be quickly removed and 60 more slides added to the box.

One of the important features of this box is the removable top or cover which is a great convenience to the operator. As a rule the room on a table by the machine is limited and a box with a hinge cover when open, requires twice as much room as though the cover could be removed. The metal corners not only strengthen and protect the box from injury, but also greatly improves its appearance.

As special protection to the slides, this box is padded top and bottom. Each side is firmly held in position by cushion so it cannot shake or rattle, and will not break.

Slides are usually carried in the hand and if there is any one thing about an outfit that should be first class it is the slide box.

PRICE, $5.00.

Standard Slide Box.

A slide box for unmounted slides will be found not only a great convenience for carrying slides, but almost indispensable to the operator as a means of keeping his slides in proper rotation. The slide box shown in above cut is covered with cloth, has nickel plated clasp, and card board partitions. It is light and strong, and a decided improvement on the wood box.

This box is made in two sizes holding 60 and 100 slides. The box holding 100 slides is provided with straps and handle for carrying.

Price, Standard Slide Box No. 1, for 60 slides $1.00 each.
Standard Slide Box No. 2, for 100 slides 1.75 "

Jumbo Slide Box.

As there is danger of breaking slides when checked as baggage, it is advisable to always carry them. To accommodate those who have a large number of slides, we have a box holding 240 slides.

This box or carrying case is 25 inches long, 9 inches high and 5 inches deep—has removable cover—card board partitions—metal corners—lock and key and a drop handle similar to the one shown in cut of Leader Slide Box.

Business Advertising Slides.

See List Page 325

Every business man realizes the importance of advertising. The value of an advertisement depends on the attractive manner in which it is displayed and there is no method more attractive than an artistic and beautifully colored lantern slide. An advertisement of this character will not only arrest one's attention, but will be carefully read by every body who sees it. This can not be said of any other class of advertising and for this reason little trouble will be experienced in soliciting ads.

These are the most striking slides of this character ever shown and were gotten up by one of the leading advertising artists of this country.

Some are comic cartoons, some fancy lettering, some appropriate pictures relating to the subject and some are beautiful scenery.

Name of Advertiser.

On all these slides is left a blank space for name of the advertiser. The usual method of "filling in" the name of the exhibitor is to write or print it on the slide with a pen and India ink. India ink on glass, even when used by an expert, will flow or spread more or less and when magnified on the curtain gives a very bad appearance.

We have entirely overcome this objection, by devising or discovering a method of printing opaque letters on glass. With it any one can fill in the name, and then the entire slide will have the appearance of being specially made for the advertiser. Not only that, but special ads or announcements can be printed on a plain slide glass and thrown on the curtain. This outfit for printing on glass is put up complete in small box and by using it you can double the value of your advertising slides.

Price, Opaque Printing Outfit on Glass,.....$1.50

A Clear Profit.

It is easy to get ads when you have fine slides to show and what you get in this way is a clear profit. Quoting from one exhibitor he says: "Since receiving your advertising slides I have made enough from my ads to pay all my rail road fare and hotel bills. It is just like finding that much money every day."

Advertising customers will create local interest in your entertainment which means large audience and increase in the profits.

On receipt of 25 cents we will send print of the complete list of Advertising Slides. Of some lines there are a number of different styles and new ones are constantly being added.

Special slides made to order.

Lantern Slides or Views.

The making of good lantern slides is a special branch of photography and the coloring of slides a special branch of art. A photographer or an artist, as the term is usually applied, cannot make good lantern slides, nor successfully color them.

Our slide department is the largest and most complete of any in this country. We employ the best and largest staff of photographers and color artists and make both wet and dry plate slides. We have four dark rooms, with a capacity of eight hundred slides per day.

In our show room are over two thousand slides under electric display. A visit to our establishment will convince the most skeptical of the truth of our statements. We have our own power and electric light plant and buy all material used in making slides direct from the manufacturers in Europe and America. The size of our plant and the plan on which it is conducted enables us to make a high grade slide at a low price.

Slides from Paintings and Drawings.

It is not possible to make all slides equal in quality. Slides made from drawings and paintings will not have the detail and brilliancy of those made from life posings. Owing to lack of sufficient light slides of interior views are not as a rule equal to those of exterior views. Quality of a slide depends largely upon the quality of the negative and to obtain good negatives, not only requires a good lens, but also good light.

Song Slides.

We are large manufacturers of song slides and with few exceptions all song slides made by us are from life posings. We do not use painted back ground for scenery; but send our photographers to California, Florida, Canada or wherever it is necessary to obtain the actual scenes for the song. For instance if a song called for scenes of the Swanee River, we send a photographer to the Swanee River to get them. Our song slides are therefore true to life and correctly represent the sentiment of the song.

There are many cheap song slides on the market. They are usually copied from other slides and are poorly colored. "A good slide will help a poor song and a poor slide will kill a good song."

Coloring Slides.

Beware of cheap colored slides—they are dear at any price. There is as much difference in artists who color slides as there is difference in artists who paint pictures. In both classes you will find "daubs."

Good coloring increases the value of a slide, poor coloring decreases the value. Better to have a good plain slide than a poorly colored one.

All slides are colored by hand and all colors must be transparent colors.

Slides Between Moving Pictures.

A most valuable investment will be a few choice slides to use between moving pictures. They will be found restful to the eye and will please the audience; they will lengthen your entertainment and give variety to your program.

We have twenty-five of these slides, and every one is a work of art. They are made by reduction from large negatives, and are full of detail, sharp, clear, and brilliant. The coloring is done by the best color artists, and no better slides were ever made at any price.

Among these slides is a beautiful view of Niagara Falls at sunrise in summer time; another is a view of Niagara Falls in winter, after a heavy snow. This scene was taken in the morning while the sun was shining, and the piles of ice and snow glisten like diamonds. Another slide is a night scene of a vessel on the ocean. The moon is partly hidden by a fleecy cloud; the reflection or path of the moon shows plainly in the water; large volumes of smoke are pouring from the smoke stacks, while a flood of light streams from all the windows of the vessel. Another is a land scene of a raging storm. It shows a high wind, heavy dark clouds, with flashes of lightning and torrents of falling rain.

Every slide represents some striking feature, and is from an artistic standpoint far superior to other high class views.

The Wonders of America, or Uncle Sam's Success

This descriptive and illustrated lecture describes the great and successful things that have made this country the admiration of all the world. Never before has a lecture been written covering a field so broad or a subject so popular. There is so much on this subject to select from that the monotonous details ("dry part") usually found in all lectures has been omitted and only the choice crisp parts of each subject used.

The lecture is divided into fifteen different headings or subjects all combined in one grand descriptive lecture. It is so written that each part or subject is complete in itself and any amount of time desired (from ten minutes to three hours) can be assigned to this lecture. This will be found very convenient to those who devote only a portion of their entertainment to a lecture.

To gather this authentic and valuable information has required an expenditure of a great deal of time and money. Access has been had to the leading public and private libraries of the country. The leading literary, political and financial men as well as great inventors of the day have lent their assistance to perfecting this work. Never has a lecture been written that received such universal support of press and public as THE WONDERS OF AMERICA (the things in which we excel the world). The verdict of all who see and hear it is, that as an instructive and interesting lecture it has never been equalled.

A GRAND SUCCESS.

A set of slides with lecture on the "WONDERS OF AMERICA" will make your entertainment popular with the public and local press; it will fill your house and bring return dates; it will insure success where there might be failure. If you wish to increase your profits buy a set of these slides for no one using the stereopticon can afford to be without them. To an exhibitor this set of slides is like a bank account. You can draw on it for any amount of time you wish to occupy.

The entire lecture will last about three hours and is illustrated by 124 slides. It is however, so arranged that the full number of slides can be used in an evening's entertainment, or if desired any one of the fifteen different subjects can be presented independently.

Price. Set No. 1, with printed lecture,.....$22.75
Set No. 2, " " 45.00
Set No. 3, " " 58.00

Set No. 1 consists of 30 colored and 32 plain slides. This set covers all the subjects or headings in the lecture, omitting a portion of each subject and using only half the slides. Those used in this set (see list of slides) are marked with a star. If preference is given we will send an equal number of any other selection.

Set No. 2 consists of 60 colored and 64 plain slides.

Set No. 3 All the slides (124) are beautifully colored.

In the lecture, the descriptive part of each slide is divided in two parts so that all the slides can be used and the entire subject covered in about an hour and a half.

Set No. 2 and No. 3 can be used for one or two entertainments as desired.

MAKE YOUR LECTURE RICH WITH SLIDES.

Much interest will be added to the entertainment by using a large number of slides and you will find it greatly to your interest to purchase the full set.

Set No. 3 with this lecture will make the finest and most interesting entertainment of the kind ever offered to the public, and we would advise you to make a special effort to secure it.

Poses Plastique

FOR LIST OF SLIDES SEE PAGE 387

This is a screen specialty in which the picture is thrown on the individual in place of on the screen. The picture usually covers the entire slide with a V or U shape piece cut out of the picture for the head.

The individual who is posing stands before a black curtain dressed in white costume (white dress or tights) and wears a cloak that is white inside and black outside. With extended arms the inside of the cloak and the white costume, take the place of the curtain on which the picture is thrown. When the picture is changed the cloak is closed by bringing the arms together. While the cloak is closed the picture is changed, so when the cloak opens a new picture is shown. A single or double lantern can be used; but as a rule a single lantern with a double slide carrier is preferred. When this is used the operator should cap the projecting lens, while the next slide is being "pushed" in place. As the cloak opens and closes, the picture should appear and disappear.

When closing the cloak, some think the effect much better to bring the arms together high enough to conceal the head. The object of standing in front of a black curtain, is, so that only the part of the picture falling on the cloak will show. The curtain should be made of some rough material that will absorb light, like black velvet or black cotton flannel. Better results will be obtained by placing the black curtain about ten feet back of the party posing.

THE CLOAK.

The cloak is usually square or oblong, fastened at the shoulders and should have a loop near the edge for the hand to hold the cloak when the arms are extended. The cloak is very easily made as there are no sleeves or armholes to be made or any fitting to be done. The objection to buying a cloak ready made is the difficulty of getting one the proper length. Spread of the cloak can be increased by using a short stick held in the hand between the cloth and lining. The best cloak is made of black velvet outside and white satin inside. Cheaper material, however, can be used with good results. If not convenient for the party posing, to wear a white costume, the cloak can be placed in front of the individual and fastened at the shoulders, and waist. The cloak should extend from the shoulders to the floor. One of the advantages gained by placing the cloak in front is that the party posing can stand on a box or some elevation which will give appearance of being much taller. This will enable a person of short stature to make a good size picture and for ancient and fashion costumes this is specially desirable.

Many prefer these slides without cut outs but if any desire to have them made with cut out, kindly state so when ordering.

Poses Costumes and Ancient Costumes

Black Curtain Not Necessary with these Slides

Slides of Ancient Costumes will be furnished as requested with head "cut out" for poses or when not used for posing will be furnished complete with the head and head-gear. These costumes are authentic in both style and color and were secured at expenditure of much time and money. They date back over two thousand years and are the only set of slides of the kind ever made. They are sharp and clear, brilliantly colored, (true to life), and will be found not only instructive, but novel and interesting.

Black Curtain not necessary. In slides of Ancient Costumes the back ground is "blacked out," so only the costumes will show on the curtain. Therefore it is not necessary for the party posing to stand in front of a black curtain. The cloak and method of using the slides is the same as described under head of "Poses Plastique."

On the black back ground of each slide, cut in white letters, is the name of the nation and date the costume was worn.

Selections can be made all from one nationality, showing the different style of dress or costumes worn by a certain country at the different centuries. In this selection you can include Kings, Queens, Men and Women of rank, Warriors, Bishops, Priests, Musicians, Citizens, Servants, etc. Another interesting set can be made by selecting from each country one or more individuals of similar rank, by which a comparison of their odd and interesting costumes can be made. If this selection is left to us, we will send only those that are strikingly odd and interesting.

FOR LIST OF SLIDES SEE PAGE 380.

Poses Facion and Fashion Costumes

Like the slides of ancient costumes, these slides will be furnished with or without "cut out" for the head. The slides are made from the latest Paris fashion plates, artistic in design and beautifully colored. There is nothing more interesting to a lady than a fashionable gown and whatever interests the ladies, will secure patronage of the gentlemen.

There is set of twenty-five of these slides consisting of different styles of ladies' evening dress, street costumes, etc. They will be sold separately or in sets as desired.

A Profitable Investment.

Some of the ancient court costumes are gorgeously brilliant in precious stones and rich colors. One of the expenses incurred in the manufacture of Costume Slides, is the time required to obtain accurate registration, that is, the neck of the picture should exactly fit neck of the individual who is posing. These slides can be shown with equal interest in theaters, churches or schools and will prove a most profitable investment.

If not convenient to use them with a cloak for posing, order them complete with the head. They will give variety to your entertainment and prove a most valuable addition to your program.

Slides of Tissot's Life of Christ.

Tissot's paintings of the Life of Christ are universally considered to be the finest production ever made of this great subject.

They are not only valuable as a work of art; but cover nearly every incident in the Life of Christ as well as the Gospel stories. The McClure-Tissot Company are owners of the copyright and control all publications and reproductions of Tissot's paintings. These slides are therefore sold at higher price than other slides and each slide is marked copyright. For churches and Sunday evening services these slides will be found very popular. They are sold both plain and colored. The colored slides are an exact reproduction of the original paintings.

These slides should be used only colored, for without coloring it is not possible to conceive this great artist's idea of the scenes. We usually keep sets of these on hand for rental.

For list of slides see page 431. There are 76 with lecture marked with star in the list.

MOVING PICTURE FILMS.

We have separate catalogue of moving picture films, which will be furnished on application. When selecting moving picture films, care should be taken to not only select interesting subjects; but those that are sharp, clear and distinct. You cannot judge the value or quality of a film by the name or description. If you will leave selection of film to us, we will give you the benefit of our experience and send you only those that are sharp and clear and interesting to the public.

COLORED FILMS.

Beware of cheap colored films. Some firms advertise to color films for two or three dollars each. This so-called coloring is simply tinting the film, or perhaps only a small part of each picture has a little color daubed on it. Many a good plain film is ruined and rendered hideous by this kind of work.

There are between seven and eight hundred pictures on a fifty foot film and to color them artistically, requires an expert artist and great deal of time.

Films colored by us are colored in entire. Not only the faces; but the furniture; carpets, wall paper and draperies are artistically colored and blended in pleasing harmony.

We keep in stock the following colored films: The American Flag, Skirt Dance and the Fire Dance. These films are beautifully colored by a high class artist who makes a specialty of coloring films. The great advantage of these films is, that the picture on the screen is the same, whether it is run forward or backward. A film of this kind can therefore be kept on the curtain as long as desired and in value to the exhibitor, is equal to a 150 foot film.

As a closing picture, there is nothing that will receive applause equal to a beautifully colored film of the American Flag waving in the breeze. It can be shown in any church or theater and will be found the most profitable investment an exhibitor can make. Coloring greatly improves some films, while others the improvement is not sufficient to warrant the additional expense. The American Flag and the Fire Dance without color are of comparative little value; but when properly colored always win big applause.

Price, Skirt Dance, Fire Dance, or American Flag, Colored $10 each. This price includes both the film and the coloring.

Price for coloring other films will vary according to the subject.

*THE FAMOUS BOX TRICK.....	65	$ 9.00

This is one of the most surprising and clever subjects of the entire series. The conjurer causes to appear suddenly on the table a box, from which a boy emerges. He is immediately cut in two pieces at a blow from the axe of the conjurer. Instead of falling to the floor, the pieces assume the shape of two lively youngsters, who commence to fight with each other. The conjurer not approving of this conduct, causes one suddenly to disappear. The other boy, whom he takes up in his arms, he dissolves into an English and an American flag, which are vigorously waved by the magician. A most interesting film, sharp and clear.

A clown is seen entering a hall, in which he gathers together the different portions of armor, adjusting the same on a pedestal in the shape of a man. He places a cabbage on the helmet of the armor, which he endeavors to shoot off with a bow and arrow, as did William Tell of old. Immediately when his back is turned, the suit of armor comes to life, taking the cabbage from his head, throwing it at the clown. He approaches the dummy, pulling off his arm and again adjusting the same before proceeding for the second time to accomplish his purpose. The dummy takes exception to being made a target of and pounces upon the clown, whom he swings into the air, finally wiping up the floor with him, making his exit from the scene. The clown, who has the appearance of a limp rag on floor, gathers himself together, but in endeavoring to make his escape he knocks against the bow-string, which causes the gun to discharge, piercing him with the arrow; the gun also causing fine smoke effects. A very funny subject, full of life.

The magician produces an egg, performing several slight-of-hand tricks, and places it upon the table with the small end downward. He then crudely draws a human face upon the shell, and the egg immediately begins growing larger until it reaches the size of a normal head. The form of the egg fades away and there immediately appears the head of a very pretty girl. Then two more of the same type appear on either side of the original. The heads of the girls are merged into one head and from this appears the hideous head of a hobgoblin. The hobgoblin fades away into the original egg. The egg is reduced to its normal size and is removed from the table by the magician, who swallows it. He then takes his place on the table, reverting back to the skeleton, which is removed by the attendant, thus closing the picture.

The latter toys with a balloon while a soldier makes up to the two nurses and takes them away for some refreshments. Bob Kick perceives a bottle of champagne upon the table evidently forgotten. He puts his balloon down upon the table, drinks the wine, becomes intoxicated, and falls asleep. In his sleep he sees the balloon change into the head of a woman which in turn becomes the head of a grimacing man. He awakes with a start, and, seizing a stick, strikes the head which bursts into pieces while the table tumbles over on to him, imprisoning him beneath it. The grotesque character to whom the head belongs leaps upon the table crushing under his weight the unfortunate Bob Kick.

His nurse returns just in time to rescue him and gives him a hoop which she has just bought. Bob uses the hoop as a skipping rope, then he calls the second nurse. He makes the nurse hold the hoop in the air. He leaps through it and disappears.

The nurses hunt around for him and finally continue their quest outside. The soldier returns much disturbed with the baby which one of the nurses has entrusted to him. He rushes to the right and to the left hunting for the nurses while holding the child in his arms. He makes a false step, falls upon the child and flattens it out. He hustles away as fast as his legs can carry him.

THE APPARITION, OR MR. JONES' COMICAL EXPERIENCE WITH A GHOST (very comical).....	170	29.00

Interior of the bedroom of an inn. Arrival of a traveler accompanied by a servant who shows him into the room and places upon the table a candlestick.

She assists the traveler in removing his coat and in slipping on his house-coat. He seats himself beside the table to read his paper, when suddenly the candle moves itself to the other end of the table. The traveler brings back the candlestick to its place, and again it moves away. And for three times it does the same thing. The traveler enraged takes his seat on the other side of the table, but the candle instantly flees from him. A most strenuous pursuit begins, the candle always keeping away from the traveler. After awhile, the candle suddenly becomes enormously large, then it changes into an almost invisible shape, and finally it resumes its normal size. The traveler believing that he can read in peace starts again to peruse his paper, when the candle moves up and sets fire to it. He throws the paper quickly away and strives to put out the flames with a siphon of seltzer water, but they, on the contrary, grow larger and in the midst of them appears the genius of Fire who changes imperceptibly into a phantom or grotesque apparition. The traveler starts a topsy-turvy combat with the spectre, thwarting it in every way, while he overturns furniture, wash-basin, chairs, stumbling down every moment. But the phantom is in no wise affected, and it begins a grotesque dance, sometimes becoming very indistinct, sometimes clear, sometimes transparent, sometimes opaque. Finally it enters into the most marvelous vibrations, horizontal and vertical. (New trick.) These strange contortions of the spectre, the changes in distinctness of the apparition while the rest of the picture together with the traveler remains clear, constitute a very curious fascination. The traveler, in a final effort, makes an attempt to strike the ghost with his umbrella, but it vanishes, and when the door opens again, the maid enters with a collation just in time to receive the blow intended for the spectre. Her tray, the dishes, the bottles fly into pieces, while the traveler falls to earth exhausted.

THE HUMAN FLY.....

This is a moving picture that moves. Positively the greatest magical picture ever offered. A Hindoo magician appears and dances for the entertainment of six pretty maidens. Then, to the astonishment of all, he runs up the wall, dances and turns handsprings in mid-air, introducing many tricks that are entirely new in animated photography. The most puzzling of all the mystical series.

THE MELOMANIAC.....

Here we return to an astonishing subject most fantastically worked out. A singing teacher, followed by his pupils whom he has trained to manœuvre with considerable skill, meets in the field some telegraph wires strung on poles. These wires, the professor thinks, would form a very effective musical staff. He carries an enormous key of G which he throws upon the wires to give the proper pitch to his pupils. He forms a measure by fixing his cane in a perpendicular position among the wires which run in a parallel direction, thus forming the lines of a staff of music. In order to have notes he tears off his own head and fixes it among the wires. Thus he obtained the first note of his air. Then he fixes upon this bizarre staff several heads corresponding in position to the first part of the tune, "God save the King." One hears the beating of drums, the heads rearrange themselves, and one sees the second line of the air. Another beating of drums, and the heads shift about until they form the third line of music. Satisfied, the professor departs followed by his pupils. The heads, abandoned among the wires, cast a look at the crowd as it disappears. Immediately they are changed to birds and fly away.

This subject accompanied by the proper music, produces great laughter.

TARGET PRACTICE.....

This picture is sharp and clear and one of the best comic subjects on the market.

The scene opens showing two back yards with a fence between. In one of the yards a woman is washing clothes. In the other yard a young man and a woman are practicing shooting at a target. At first they hang the target on a tree but later place it on the fence opposite where the washer-woman is at work. The shot goes through the fence and strikes the washer-woman amidship, causing her to tip over the tub. In her anger she throws the young man on the ground, beats him over the head with a pail. He finally manages to get away and tries to climb a tree. The washer-woman's dog makes a dash for him and fastens his teeth in the bosom of the young man's trousers. The woman then throws the tub at him, striking him in the back of the neck. Very funny.

SMASHING A JERSEY MOSQUITO.....

A man and his wife are seated in their happy New Jersey home. A huge mosquito appears and buzzes around their heads. The man seizes a broom handle, making a smash at the singing insect. He misses it, hitting his wife a stinging blow that knocks her to the floor. Then they combine their efforts to kill the terrible insect. As they miss the mosquito each time they make a blow, the weapons used hit something else in the room. Pictures, mirrors and other household effects are quickly demolished. The man then stands upon the table and endeavors to catch it. His wife strikes at it, but hits her husband instead, knocking his feet from under him, smashing the table, through which he falls. The woman finally wounds the mosquito, and as it falls to the floor, the man jumps on it, when a terrific explosion takes place, great clouds of malarial gas escaping and wrecking the room.

MILLER AND CHIMNEY SWEEP.....

The miller, while flirting with a young lady, suddenly bumps into a chimney sweep, who carries a bag of soot just removed from a chimney of a nearby house, and after exchanging words, they end up with a fight, each using his bag as a club. After the battle is over the miller is blackened so that he would hardly be recognized, and the chimney sweep looks as though he had just been pulled out of a flour barrel. The air grows so thick with the mass of flour and soot that the contestants are almost lost for a few seconds. A very laughable picture.

CASEY'S TWINS.....

An Irishman is seen lighting his pipe and rocking the cradle. Baby cries. He takes it on his lap and gives it a bottle, then sits it on the floor. He then takes a pig from the cradle, dressed in baby clothes, and places it on the floor. The pig proceeds immediately to fight the baby for the bottle. Small dog runs in and takes part in the fight.

Calcium Light Gas Companies

For the convenience of those who wish to purchase gas we submit the following list of calcium light companies, where oxygen and hydrogen can be purchased in cylinders and tanks. Gas is sold in several different size cylinders; but the one in general use is the large size, 12×48 inches. When charged to 225 pounds, this size cylinder holds 50 cubic feet of gas, sufficient to run about seven hours. All cylinders, large or small, are charged to the same pressure, 225 pounds. Two cylinders are required, one of hydrogen and one of oxygen. A pair of the large size cylinders (12×48) weighs about 200 pounds. The price of gas will vary somewhat with different companies, but is usually about $12\frac{1}{4}$ cents per foot.

The Chicago Calcium Light Company charge $6.25 for two large cylinders of gas (one of oxygen and one of hydrogen), each holding 50 feet. No charge is made for use of the tanks, if returned within thirty days.

Electric Stage Connection.

For traveling exhibitor as well as where the lantern is permanently located, this will be found a most convenient way of making a quick connection. The part of the connector with the holes or sockets should be attached to the supply wire, and the part with the posts or plugs to the wire leading to the machine. When using this connector should the lamp be burning "up-side-down", the current at the lamp can be instantly changed by pulling out the plug and turning it half over. The connector will carry from 35 to 45 amperes and has split posts or plugs that always fit tightly and make a good contact.

PRICE, $1.00

Curtain Pulley.

A curtain is usually hung by a rope drawn tightly over screw hook. Frequently it is not possible to make the screw hook firm and then much trouble is experienced in drawing the curtain tight. If the rope is run over a pulley, the curtain can be drawn tighter and with much less strain on the screw hook. As the expense of these pulleys is so small no one using a curtain can afford to be without them.

PRICE, 10 CENTS EACH.

Cut A.

Cut B.

Gas Pressure Pump.

The above cut shows two styles of hand pumps, which might be termed Low Pressure and High Pressure. Cut A shows the direct or low pressure pump and cut B the lever or high pressure pump.

When buying gas for calcium or oxy-hydrogen light there are always two tanks, one of hydrogen one of oxygen. The gas sold for hydrogen is ordinary illuminating gas pumped in the tank. For those who buy their gas, one of these pumps will be found a most valuable investment. They can be quickly connected with any gas jet and in a few minutes sufficient hydrogen pumped in the tank for an entertainment. It will not only save price of the gas, but will save cost of transportation of the hydrogen tank both ways. One of these pumps will also be found convenient for those who make their own oxygen and prefer to use a tank of hydrogen in place of a saturator. To use a hydrogen tank in place of oxygen with a saturator gives a very rich gas and requires much less hydrogen.

LOW PRESSURE HAND PUMP.

The low pressure hand pump as shown in cut A is made of seamless brass tubing—cast brass ends—back pressure valve and steel plunger. It has high pressure hose with screw couplings to connect tank and pump and rubber tubing to connect pump and gas jet. With this pump 50 to 75 pounds of gas can be pumped in the tank.

HIGH PRESSURE HAND PUMP.

For the high pressure hand pump see cut B. The best results are obtained with this pump, for the leverage on the piston rod increases as the pressure of each stroke increases. This lever is on the principle of the well known "toggle joint," whereby the greatest leverage is obtained as the piston finishes the stroke—increase pressure, increase leverage. Cylinder is seamless brass and frame is the best malleable iron. This pump may not pump fast as the "Low Pressure Pump," however about 200 pounds of gas can be pumped in the tank.

PRICE, Low Pressure Hand Pump with connections for tank and gas jet.....	$ 5.00
High Pressure Hand Pump with connections for tank and gas jet.....	12.00

If any change from above cut is made in pump, it will be as an improvement.

We always have in stock second-hand lanterns, burners and rheostats, and point with pride to the fact that they are not of our make. These goods have been received in exchange from experienced exhibitors who recognize and appreciate the superior quality of our own goods.

Hydrogen Pump Outfit.

A, is tank valve; B, is connection for high pressure hose to tank; C, is the high pressure hose connecting pump and tank; D, is back pressure valve; E, is connection for supply tube; F, is the supply tube, connecting gas jet and pump, and H, is pump handle.

Hydrogen under pressure in a tank is more convenient to use than a saturator and many would use it if they had a cheap way to obtain it. Several methods have been used by traveling exhibitors for making hydrogen, but none of them have proved practicable.

When hydrogen gas is used it is generally purchased in tanks from some calcium light company. The gas sold by these companies for hydrogen is not pure hydrogen, but is the ordinary artificial illuminating gas pumped in the tank. With the hydrogen pump outfit anyone can connect to a gas jet and in a few minutes pump in the tank sufficient gas for an entertainment. For those who buy gas one of these pumps will be found a most valuable investment. It will not only save price of the hydrogen, but will also save transportation charges on the tank both ways. Those who have their own tanks, will find it a profitable investment to purchase an oxygen gas making outfit and make their own oxygen.

The hydrogen gas can be taken from any gas jet. If the tip in the pillar is removed the gas will flow more freely and it will not require so long to fill the tank.

The tank shown in cut is made of drawn steel without seams or rivets (see description under Calcium Light Outfit.)

Caution—Keep the oxygen tank painted red and the hydrogen tank painted black, so no mistake will be made in filling the wrong tank. If a tank has ever had hydrogen in it, do not, under any circumstances, use it for oxygen.

LOW PRESSURE HAND PUMP.

The low pressure pump is made of seamless brass tubing, cast brass ends and steel plunger. With it a pressure of about 75 pounds can be obtained.

HIGH PRESSURE HAND PUMP.

The best results are obtained with this pump, for the leverage on the piston rod increases as the pressure of each stroke increases. This lever is on the principle of the well known "toggle joint," whereby the greatest leverage is obtained as the piston finishes the stroke—increase pressure, increase leverage. Cylinder is seamless brass and frame is the best malleable iron.

With this pump a pressure of about 150 pounds can be obtained.

Electric Signal

It is necessary for the lecturer to have some method of communicating with the operator and of all devices used the Electric Signal has proven the most satisfactory. It consists of two dry batteries or cells, flexible covered wire, a push button and what is known as an electric "buzzer." The lecturer holds the push button in his hand, while box containing buzzer and batteries is placed at the machine with the operator. Sound of buzzer can be so regulated as to be heard only by the operator, and will therefore not interrupt the lecturer by attracting the attention of the audience.

Electric Signal No. 1 has 75 feet of flexible covered wire. The outfit is packed in a special made box, dovetailed corners, sliding cover and separate apartment for the batteries. This outfit is equal in service to any high priced outfit.

ELECTRIC SIGNAL NO. 2.

Electric Signal No. 2 has 100 feet flexible covered wire, wound on a spool with crank for re-winding. This outfit has fine carrying case, leather finish, nickel plated trimmings and is lined with dark colored cotton flannel. This "buzzer" and push button are of new design, very attractive in appearance and simple in construction.

This is the finest and best signal outfit on the market.

Price,.....$9.00

When ordering, please state whether No. 1 or No. 2 is wanted.

Limes.

Good Limes for calcium light should be smooth, fine grain, and not too soft or too hard. They are made of unslacked lime and should not be exposed to the air longer than necessary. We handle the celebrated Bird Lime, found only in the state of Maine. They are packed in air tight screw top cans. The lime dust is to exclude the air and should not be thrown out.

Price, per can, (1 doz. limes), small size 75; large,.....$ 85

Limes in Glass Tubes.

Limes soon spoil when exposed to the air. They are usually sold a dozen in a can, and unless used soon after opening, half of them will spoil. These limes are wrapped in tin foil put in glass tubes and sealed air tight. This is not only a convenient way to keep limes, but always insures you a fresh lime and unless great many are used, it will be found more economical to purchase them in this form.

PRICE, each 15c. Two for 25c. Twelve for $1.25.

Geometrical Chromatropes.

On two glasses are transparent geometrical designs in brilliant colors which revolve in opposite directions. By turning the crank at different speeds, forward and backwards, the lines weave into each other, making a large variety of artistic designs. These designs blend, dissolve into each other, disappear and appear again in a manner most pleasing.

We carry only the best quality of imported chromatropes.

PRICE, EACH $3.00.

Good Night Chromatrope.

This consists of three glasses. On one is the words "Good Night" which remains stationary, on the other two are brilliantly colored designs which revolving in opposite directions, produce a most pleasing effect. Is the best imported make and will fit any lantern.

EXHIBITION OUTFITS.

So many combinations and different priced outfits can be made, even with the same style lantern, that we do not consider it practical to make a large list of complete outfits. In the list of outfits given here will be found a few of the most popular outfits in combination with the Leader Lantern (see description page 46). Should none of these meet with your approval, they will serve as a guide in selecting other outfits. If any one will select from the catalogue the style of lantern and light they prefer, we will take this as a basis and quote a price on a complete exhibition outfit; with itemized list.

MOVING PICTURES.

We would recommend the addition of a moving picture machine to all lecture outfits. Although a full entertainment can be given with only a stereopticon and slides, still the addition of moving pictures will greatly increase the attendance and yield better returns.

When used as part of an entertainment there should be about a dozen moving picture films. If not convenient to purchase this number to start with, three or four can be used and others added from the profits of the first few entertainments.

ILLUSTRATED SONGS.

One of the most popular additions to an entertainment is illustrated songs. While the song is being sung, slides illustrating the principal scenes, as described by the words, are thrown on the curtain. If the entertainment is given for a church or society, local talent can usually be found who will donate their services. By interesting home talent you increase the popularity of your entertainment.

TALKING MACHINE.

We do not refer to the little phonograph you have heard; but the latest improved concert grand machines using a large concert record. The volume and quality of tone is nearly equal to the original music from which the record was made. One of these machines will not only give an excellent variety of instrumental music; but will also be found most valuable for singing illustrated songs. The Victor Monarch Talking Machine uses the disk or flat record made of hard rubber. (See page 109). The advantage of this style record is the small space in which they can be carried and the fact that they are not so easily broken. List of records for Talking Machines sent on application. See Catalogue for description.

RENTED GAS TANKS.

In place of buying a calcium light outfit to start with, rented tanks can be used. In nearly all large cities there are firms who sell gas in tanks ready for use. It is necessary to have two tanks, one for hydrogen and one for oxygen. Approximate weight of the large tanks is 200 pounds, and they contain sufficient gas to burn six or eight hours. Cost of the gas is about $6.25, to which must be added transportation charges (see page 69).

Exhibition Outfit No. 1. Price $43.00.

Leader Lantern, double slide carrier, No 2 carrying case, acetylene generator, acetylene burner, 5 pounds of carbide (for acetylene gas), curtain or screen, our special make, (see page 105), dating outfit (see page 138) and 1000 admission tickets.

Two entertainments can be given with entire change of programme or three with partial change. With this high grade outfit the receipts of the second night will exceed those of the first night and there is no expense for railroad fare or advertising.

If each article in this outfit was taken separately at list price, the outfit would cost over $600.00; but as special inducement we offer it for $493.00.

If electric attachments are wanted in place of calcium burner add $5.00 to price of outfit. If both Electric attachments and calcium burner are wanted add $10.00 to price of outfit.

GASOLINE AND ETHER.

In making calcium light, gasoline and ether are both used in saturator as a substitute for hydrogen gas. A small quantity of oxygen gas from a tank or gas bag is allowed to pass through the saturator, which carries the gasoline or ether vapor to the jet. The ordinary gasoline cannot be used as it will not vaporize rapidly enough. 88 or 90 test gasoline is much more volatile, and is the only kind that can be satisfactorily used. About one-half pint is sufficient for a two hours' entertainment.

When sulphuric ether is used in saturator only the best grade should be used. As good results can be obtained with 88 gasoline as with ether, and it is much cheaper.

For prices and terms of rental on slides, see pages 251 and 252.

To bring additional matter in the right place, the same page number with a letter of the alphabet is sometimes used. For instance, following page 20 is 20A. Similar cases will be found elsewhere, both in omitting a page number and in repeating the page number with consecutive letters. Please remember this when consulting the index.

We exercise all due precaution in packing goods, and our responsibility ceases when goods are delivered to transportation company.

All claims should be made within ten days after goods have been received.

When sending orders in while traveling, kindly give more than one address, as it is not always possible to make prompt shipment, and mail may be delayed so that order is not received by us on the date expected.

If not convenient to obtain money order, enclose a bill. The risk of loss is very small when paper money is sent by mail. For anything less than one dollar, send two-cent stamps.

It is not necessary to know exact price of goods as an excuse for not sending money, for if too much money is sent, we will promptly refund balance, or place the amount to your credit, as preferred.

To protect ourselves from loss, we must insist that when goods are ordered sent C. O. D., sufficient money must accompany the order to pay express charges both ways. When telegraphing, deposit money with agent of express company by which goods are to be shipped, and have him wire us the order, stating amount of money deposited.

Freight charges are based upon 100 lbs. weight, so that it will be found cheaper as well as safer to send most packages weighing less than 100 lbs. by express. Should customers desire small shipments sent by freight, 50c should be added to their remittance to defray drayage in Chicago.

For prices and terms of rental on slides, see pages 251 and 252.

To bring additional matter in the right place, the same page number with a letter of the alphabet is sometimes used. For instance, following page 20 is 20A. Similar cases will be found elsewhere, both in omitting a page number and in repeating the page number with consecutive letters. Please remember this when consulting the index.

We exercise all due precaution in packing goods, and our responsibility ceases when goods are delivered to transportation company.

All claims should be made within ten days after goods have been received.

When sending orders in while traveling, kindly give more than one address, as it is not always possible to make prompt shipment, and mail may be delayed so that order is not received by us on the date expected.

If not convenient to obtain money order, enclose a bill. The risk of loss is very small when paper money is sent by mail. For anything less than one dollar, send two-cent stamps.

It is not necessary to know exact price of goods as an excuse for not sending money, for if too much money is sent, we will promptly refund balance, or place the amount to your credit, as preferred.

To protect ourselves from loss, we must insist that when goods are ordered sent C. O. D., sufficient money must accompany the order to pay express charges both ways. When telegraphing, deposit money with agent of express company by which goods are to be shipped, and have him wire us the order, stating amount of money deposited.

Freight charges are based upon 100 lbs. weight, so that it will be found cheaper as well as safer to send most packages weighing less than 100 lbs. by express. Should customers desire small shipments sent by freight, 50c should be added to their remittance to defray drayage in Chicago.

"IN HIS STEPS." Slide No. 67, in the Set of 150.
Copyrighted 1900 by G. W. Boston.

"In a few minutes the audience was beyond Maxwell's control. He turned to Rachel with a sad smile.

"Sing something, Miss Winslow. They will listen to you," he said, and then sat down and put his face in his hands.

"It was Rachel's opportunity, and she was fully equal to it. Virginia was at the organ and Rachel asked her to play a few notes of the hymn:

"Savior I follow on Guided by Thee,
Seeing not yet the land
That leadeth me;
Hushed be my heart and still Fear I no farther ill.
Only to meet Thy will,
My will shall be."

"Rachel had not sung the first line before the people in the tent were all turned toward her, hushed and reverent."

A letter to us from the author of "In His Steps" is given on next page.

Dear Sir

I was pleased with your lantern slides illustrating In His Steps, which I saw for the first time a short time ago and have referred different lecturers to them. I hope they may be used to do much good

Very cordially yours,

"IN HIS STEPS."

Most conspicuous today among thinkers and workers, who are trying to promote the interest of humanity and religion, is Charles M. Sheldon. His unique and noble effort to edit The Topeka Capital, a daily paper, for one week, as he thought Christ would do, attracted the attention of the entire civilized world and aroused a keen discussion in the columns of every newspaper in the land. Prior to this, his book entitled "In His Steps or 'What Would Jesus Do,'" had become the most popular book of modern times.

In this country nearly four million copies of this book have been sold, and in Europe twelve different prominent publishing houses have issued large editions. At an expenditure of much time and money, a set of 150 slides have been made from life models, that completely illustrate this popular, thrilling and instructive story.

The extremes of society, the wide variety of religious work, from stately cathedrals to the humble missions, afford a field true to life and character for illustrating this work. In these illustrations are shown palatial homes, fashionable equipages on the boulevards, elegant churches, aristocratic audiences, the preacher speaking, the cantatrice singing, the tragedy of the tramp's appearance therein, the agitated after meetings, the stirring scenes following in parlors, libraries, business offices, factories and editorial sanctums, scenes on the boulevards, the avenues and the busy streets; scenes among the slums, with hordes of outcasts, the mission meetings in the tent, the election crowd, the drunken mob, the tragedy in palace hall and in slum street and many scenes of sublime enthusiasm and daring heroism. All these scenes follow each other in rapid succession, and chain the attention by their variety and dramatic posings.

None of these illustrations are made from paintings, or "Gallery-make-ups", but all were taken from real characters and actual scenes. Every slide is full of life, sharp and clear, brilliant and sparkling.

Sold in sets only at 50 cents per slide colored, 150 slides covering the complete book for 3 night's exhibition with printed lecture, and 50 slides, covering the complete book for 1 night's exhibition with printed lecture.

A complete copy of the book sent free with every set. No plain slides sold of this illustration. Broken slides will be replaced at 65 cents each.

Figures in full face type indicate the slides in the set of 50, which are also shown by ordinary figures on the right.

THE HOLY CITY.

The interest of the audience in such a lecture as "In His Steps" is increased by the proper introduction of sacred songs. "The Holy City" has been illustrated by sixteen beautiful slides and appropriate title and is one of the most popular of the present day. The dreamer is represented by life posing, and as he lies asleep on his couch, the visions described in the song appear successively upon the screen, as the slides are projected in their proper order, and the audience are held in rapt attention from the beginning to the end.

- 1 Last night I lay a-sleeping, there came a dream so fair,
- 2 I stood in old Jerusalem, beside the Temple there;
- 3 I heard the children singing, and ever as they sang,
- 4 Methought the voice of Angels from Heaven in answer rang,
- 5 Jerusalem, Jerusalem, lift up your gates and sing
- 6 Hosanna in the highest, Hosanna to your King!
- 7 And then methought my dream was changed, the streets no longer rang
- 8 Hush'd were the glad Hosannas, the little children sang
- 9 The sun grew dark with mystery, the moon was cold and chill,
- 10 As the shadow of a cross arose upon a lonely hill,
- 11 Jerusalem, Jerusalem, Hark! how the Angels sing
- 12 Hosanna in the highest! Hosanna to your King!
- 13 And once again the scene was changed, new earth there seemed to be!
- 14 I saw the Holy City beside the tideless sea;
- 15 The light of God was on its street, the gates were open wide;
- 16 And all who would might enter, and no one was denied.
- 17 No need of moon or stars by night; nor sun to shine by day;
- 18 It was the new Jerusalem that would not pass away.
- 19 Jerusalem, Jerusalem, sing for the night is o'er,
- 20 Hosanna in the highest, Hosanna forevermore!

PRICE, Set No. 1—$8.00. Improved Set No. 2—$12.75 per set. Improved Set No. 2 is made by new process for vision scenes by which double and triple exposures are made on the same plate. THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET

This old favorite poem has been illustrated with beautiful scenes from the Gulf Coast and other appropriate sections of our country and the 15 beautiful views as indicated below make one of the finest illustrations that have ever been brought before the public, colored only. Price, 50 cents each.

- 1 How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood,
When fond recollection presents them to view;
- 3 The orchard, the meadow, the deep tangled wild wood,
And every loved spot which my infancy knew.
- 5 The wide spreading stream and the mill that stood by it
- 6 The bridge and the rock where the cataract fell,
- 7 The cot of my father, the dairy house by it,
- 8 And e'en the rude bucket that hung in the well
- 10 The moss covered bucket I hail as a treasure,
For often at noon when returned from the field,
- 11 I found it a source of exquisite pleasure,
The sweetest and purest that nature can yield.
- 12 And now far removed from the loved situation,
The tear of regret will intrusively swell.
- 13 As fancy reverts to my father's plantation,
- 14 And sighs for the bucket that hung in the well.
- 15 The old oaken bucket, the iron bound bucket,
The moss covered bucket that hung in the well.

I. WHERE IS MY BOY TO-NIGHT?

"Where is My Wandering Boy To-Night?"

- 2 Where is My Wandering Boy To-Night
 The Boy of My Tenderest Care
 3 The Boy that was Once My Joy and Light
 The Child of My Love and Prayer
 CHORUS
 4 O where is My Boy To-Night?
 O where is My Boy To-Night?
 5 My Heart o'erflows, for I Love him he knows;
 O where is My Boy To-Night?
 6 Once he was Pure as Morning Dew
 As he Knelt at his Mother's Knee
 7 No face was so Bright, no heart more true
 And none was so sweet as he
 CHORUS
 8 O where is My Boy To-Night?
 O where is My Boy To-Night?
 9 My Heart o'erflows, for I Love him he knows;
 O where is My Boy To-Night?
- 10 O could I see you now, my Boy
 As fair as in olden time
 11 When Frattle and Smile made Home a Joy
 And Life was a Merry Chime
 CHORUS
 12 O where is My Boy To-Night?
 O where is My Boy To-Night?
 13 My Heart o'erflows, for I Love him he knows;
 O where is My Boy To-Night?
 14 Go for my Wandering Boy To-Night
 Go search for him where you will 15 But bring him to me with all his blight
 And tell him I Love him still
 CHORUS
 16 O where is My Boy To-Night?
 O where is My Boy To-Night?
 17 My Heart o'erflows, for I Love him he knows;
 O where is My Boy To-Night?

CHRISTMAS.

The rapid increase in the use of the Stereopticon by the Church and Sunday School, has created a demand for an appropriate series of slides for a Christmas entertainment. The list which follows has been selected by Rev. J. T. Ladd, an eminent Scholar and traveler, who has used the Stereopticon with telling effect in his own Sunday School and Church work, and has thus been fitted for the task which he has so well performed, of arranging the views which make up the series and writing the accompanying lecture. We have this set of forty-two beautiful slides under electric light in our display room, and cordially invite you to come in and see them.—Rental, per week, $4.20 the set.

16 Not unlike to iron in the furnace.

18 Answering not, mine eyes I raised.

RARE OLD BIBLE PICTURES.

There are many choice pictures which do not appear in recent books and that are not common. Having been made from original paintings, many of them are very valuable. Read the list given below. You may find a picture that you have been looking for. We give in the first slide a reproduction of the title page showing the style of printing and spelling of the English of 1752.

THE DRESDEN GALLERY.

Some one has said that the Dresden Gallery is an "Assembly of Collections such as can scarcely be equaled in the world." We have succeeded, at great expense, in obtaining photographs of fifty of the finest examples of the old Masters of this famous Gallery. All lovers of art, engaged in Stereopticon work, will be interested in seeing the collection which we have in our display rack under electric light. Come in and see them.

1. Titian's Daughter, by Titian 1477-1576. "This picture is one of the most celebrated portraits in the world. 'Titian-colored hair' excited the universal enthusiasm of the art-world." Her graceful poise, and magnificent jewels adorning her hair, neck, and arms, give the appearance of luxury. She holds a beautiful rose in her delicate hands.
2. The Virgin, Holy Child, and St. John, by Titian 1477-1576. This picture represents a young and beautiful woman timidly approaching the mother of God, who leans forward to graciously listen to her who is soon to know a kindred joy. At the side John the Baptist, is supporting the Holy Child who, standing in His Mother's lap, embraces her around the neck. St. Paul with a sword and Jerome with a crucifix, press forward to worship the Saviour.
3. The Madonna di San Sisto, by Raphael, 1483-1520. The beautiful mother with the Saviour in her arms is descending from the heavens, surrounded by innumerable heads of angels. St. Sixtus and St. Barbara kneel before her, while two charming little cherubs are in front. "It is the most finished, and perhaps the very best, work of its immortal author."
4. Michael the Archangel, by Penni, 1488-1528. The archangel Michael, dressed in a Knight's armour, hovers above the dragon, whom he has thrown from heaven to earth as narrated in the Apocalypse. The dragon represents Satan, and Michael's victory over him, the triumph of Christianity over Paganism.
5. Saint Sebastian, by Correggio, 1494-1534. It is one of the most beautiful of this wonderful artist's masterpieces. The Virgin and babe is descending from heaven surrounded by rays of light, and angels ministering to her. St. Germinion, St. Sebastian and St. Roche are in the foreground. Beneath is a little child, called "the little one of Modena," holding the model of a temple, supposed to indicate the church for which this painting was intended.
6. The Madonna (of the Meir Family) by Holbein. 1495-1543. The custom of presenting to a church a picture by those whose prayers have been answered gave the name to a church picture. This is such a picture. The Madonna stands in a vaulted niche of the wall, beautifully ornamented. She holds the little one whom she has saved in her arms, while the Meier family are kneeling in adoration before her.

- 7 Portrait of Hubert Morett, by Holbein, 1495-1543. The question as to the author of this fine portrait was only recently decided by the discovery of the magnificent drawing for it among Holbein's works.
- 8 The Adoration of the Magi, by Paul Veronese, 1530-1588. The Virgin with the babe surrounded by a halo of glory, sits on the steps of a fine building. An old king with a long, richly embroidered robe is kissing the Saviour's feet, while back of him stand the other kings magnificently dressed presenting their costly gifts. St. Joseph and a shepherd stand beside the holy mother. "The grandeur and freedom of the idea, the dignity and truth of the composition, the expression of the figures, and brilliancy of the coloring, place this among the principal masterpieces of Veronese."
- 9 The Marriage at Cana, by Paul Veronese, 1530-1588. "It is glowing in color, and claims attention, at once, by its magnificence. The grouping of the figures, the diversity of costumes and the grandeur of the architecture, all combine to attract and satisfy the eye."
- 10 The Dead Christ, by Salviati, 1535-1585. The Saviour is represented as being laid in the tomb by angels. It is a most impressive picture. One is lifting the dead body, another is kissing His pierced hand, while the third with clasped hands and upturned face, is imploring the aid of God the Father.
- 11 Soldiers Playing Cards in a Guard Room, by Caravaggio, 1569-1609. The soldiers are evidently men of distinction as is shown by their elegant uniforms, and the gold on the magnificent table.
- 12 The Lion Hunt, by Rubens, 1577-1640. The marvelous talent of this world-famed artist is shown in this picture. A lion has overmastered one of the hunters whom he is pulling from his horse. In the horrible scene of combat, midst the bloody struggle, a lioness is seen intent only on saving her little ones. This picture is proof of the almost universal skill of this "Prince of the Flemish School."
- 13 Satyrs and Nymphs, by Rubens. Four nymphs, with their dogs, are accosted by three satyrs laden with fruit. The contrast of these half-brutal, sensuous satyrs and the virgin modesty of the Nymphs is depicted with great skill.
- 14 The Boar Hunt, by Rubens. This is another master-piece by the same great author.
- 15 The Supplication of Esther by Strozzi, 1581-1644.
- 16 The Smokers, by Teniers, 1582-1649. "This picture is in Tenier's well-known manner and represents a subject which seems to have been almost the only one congenial to painters of his calibre and school."
- 17 A Village Festival, by Teniers. A joyous band are enjoying themselves before a Dutch village inn. They are dancing, playing musical instruments, drinking, chatting, and amusing themselves in various ways.
- 18 The Dentist, by Honthorst, 1594-1660. "The composition as well as the drawing and expression of this picture, is correct and full of life. The effect of the light in this painful scene is really admirable, and produces a shudder in looking at it."
- 19 Martin Engelbrecht, by Van Dyck, 1599-1641. "The piercing eye, the noble forehead, and the expressive mouth can only belong to a man of strong mind and character, and the conception and execution of the portrait are quite worthy the fame of the greatest of portrait painters."
- 20 Evening, by Albert Cuyt, 1606-1691. A small flock of cows and sheep are grazing on the high banks of a pond, while the shepherdess and herdsmen rest after the weary labors of the day, and the setting sun casts a reddish light over all. It is an exceedingly fine picture of repose in nature.
- 21 Rembrandt and His Wife, by Rembrandt, 1608-1674. Rembrandt, dressed in uniform, sits at a well spread table, embracing his wife with his left arm, and raising a glass of champagne with his right. His young, happy wife wears a dress of pearl colored satin, richly embroidered in gold.

- 22 Rembrandt's Daughter, by Rembrandt. "The picture represents a young girl, of graceful form and rosy complexion, whose dark eyes and red lips smile gaily at us."
- 23 A Lady in a Satin Gown, by Terburg, 1608-1681. The lady before the dressing table is viewing herself in a small mirror. All the accessories of the picture tend to heighten the effect of the lustre of the white satin dress. "As a composition of color, it is one of the most charming in the Dresden Gallery."
- 24 The Wild Boar Hunt, by Jacobson, 1610-1664. The agony of the wounded dogs, the fierceness and the fury of the attacking ones, and the helplessness of the struggling boar to escape, all render this a masterpiece of this artist who is especially gifted in painting hunting scenes and combats of wild beasts.
- 25 A Dutch Village Tavern, by A. Van Ostade, 1600-1685. A company of peasants are round a table in a Dutch village tavern. The man at the right is probably the painter himself. The hostess is pouring out brandy midst a little group in the rear, while overhead is the loft, scattered with household utensils and bits of straw and cob webs.
- 26 A Flemish Ale House, by Teniers the Younger, 1610-1694. The hostess is preparing apple fritters, midst a little group of peasants. Great interest is visible on the faces of some others, eagerly watching the accountant figuring their bill. The inn-keeper is unconcernedly chalking on the wall the number of glasses consumed.
- 27 A Hermit, by Ferdinand Bol, 1611-1681. A venerable, white-haired man is reading a large book in a solitary and tranquil place.
- 28 The Dentist, by Gerard Dou, 1613-1674. The dentist with pompous air and satisfied expression holds up as a trophy the tooth just extracted, while his victim, a distressed looking boy, well displays the feeling, of one obliged to go through such an operation.
- 29 Gerard Dou in His Studio, by Gerard Dou. The great artist looks up at us while he sketches on a leaf of a great album. His studio is filled with interesting objects, all of which are painted in the most careful manner, and with infinite pains.
- 30 The Hermit by Gerard Dou. In the court of an old monastery, the white-headed hermit is kneeling before a large book which he is intently and devoutly reading. "This picture shows, even in the smallest details, that indefatigable application and excessive delicacy which characterize the work of Dou."
- 31 The Woman Winding Silk, by Van Tol, died about 1680. An elderly woman sits by an open window surrounded by foliage. It is a charming portrait.
- 32 The Poultry Dealer, by Metz, 1615-1669. A poultry dealer, seated on a tub, is offering a cock for sale to a richly dressed young lady bargaining for it. Much truth and beauty are manifested in the animals around them. The whole is very picturesque.
- 33 The Poultry Woman, by Metz. An elderly woman, plucking a pigeon, is conversing with a young lady who is holding up a leveret in her hand which she wishes to buy. "The whole displays that fidelity to nature and vividness of imagination which distinguishes the principal works of Metz."
- 34 Gabriel Metz and His Wife, by Metz. Metz is embracing his wife with his left arm and holds a glass of champagne in his right hand.
- 35 A Dutch Winter Landscape, by I. van Ostade, 1617-1657. A number of peasants with their dogs are skating, or urging forward their sleds laden with wood, over the frozen canal, while a motherly face peers from the window of a thatched cottage at the side.
- 36 The Camp, by Wouverman, 1620-1668. Some soldiers of a cavalry regiment are assembled near a tent, and utterly heedless of the trumpeter, continue their rest and refreshment unconcerned, while the camp, extending far into the distance, is seen in the back ground.

THE DRESSEN GALLERY—Continued.

- 37 The Cavalry Engagement, by Wouwerman. "The composition and execution as well as the characteristic details, obtain for this picture a place among the best productions of the celebrated artists. The design and the bearing of the men and horses are well conceived, and are in perfect harmony with the beauty and brilliancy of the colouring."
- 38 A Group of Oxen, by Paul Potter, 1625-1654. "The animals are painted with the most marvellous exactitude."
- 39 The Nativity, by Maratti, 1625-1713. "Maratti has been very successful in the design and coloring of this picture and in the harmony and grace of form. The Holy Mother and the radiant features of the angels express heavenly love and the highest form of happiness in the contemplation of the Divine Infant."
- 40 The Monastery, by Ruysdael, 1625-1681. An artist sits on the bank of a beautiful stream, into which a herdsman is driving his cattle, and two fishermen fishing. At the foot of some well-wooded mountains stands the monastery, partly in ruins, lit up by the sun's rays. The landscapes of Ruysdael are "eminently poetical and yet perfectly faithful."
- 41 The Avenue, by Ruysdael. "Whoever longs to fly from the constant turmoil of town life to the stillness of nature, will thank the great landscape painter, who has created for us in all his forests, groves and plains, a refuge from the troubles and cares of the world in the sanctuaries of nature."
- 42 The Traveling Tinker, by Mieris, 1635-1681. Before a Dutch tavern, a traveling tinker is holding up to the light an old caldron that a woman has brought to be mended. The living figures, the vine covered house, the old tree trunk, the remains of an old wagon, all are painted with great fidelity to nature, and make it a fine picture, a masterpiece of genius.
- 43 Mieris in His Studio, by Mieris. The artist, seated before his easel, has turned toward us to converse with his wife, whose portrait he is painting. The studio is very artistically furnished.
- 44 A Winter Scene, by A. Van de Velde, 1639-1672. Many peasants and townspeople are enjoying the skating, riding in the sleds, or conversing on the bank of the frozen stream. His landscapes are particularly distinguished by "an air of transparency and faithful rendering of nature."
- 45 A Lady at Her Toilet, by Netscher, 1639-1684. The lady, wearing a satin skirt and velvet tunic, is caressing a little spaniel in her lap, while her maid carefully arranges her hair. "The talent and minute care of the artist are seen equally well in the composition and drawing of the figures, and in the execution of the accessories."
- 46 The Seamstress, by Netscher. Her pleasant, womanly face, and neat, simple attire make a charming and attractive picture of a Dutch house-wife.
- 47 The Lace Maker, by Slingsland, 1640-1691. A beautiful young Dutch lady is interrupted by an old woman who offers her a cock for sale, and the little spaniel is barking violently at this intruder. "All that we see in this picture displays the great talent and indefatigable application of a great artist."
- 48 The Infant Saviour Sleeping, by Andrea Pozzo, 1642-1709. "The drawing, coloring and composition of this picture render it one of the principal works of this painter."
- 49 A Young Girl Reading a Letter, by Peter de Hooch, 1643-1708. A happy young girl stands by a window earnestly reading a letter, and her beautiful profile is reflected in the glass panes. "The treatment is free and bold, the effect of the sun rays, which glitter brilliantly on the window, is rendered with much truth and power."
- 50 The Dismissal of Hagar, by A. Van der Werff, 1659-1722. The poor, forsaken woman looks wistfully back at the home from which she is exiled, while Sarah watches her from the doorway. Abraham leans forward with outstretched hands to bless her, with piety and anxiety for their welfare, evident in his earnest face. Little Ishmael follows with lingering looks at his brother Isaac who is playfully hiding in his fathers robes.

RAPHAEL'S BIBLE.

The illustrations are, with a few exceptions, from Old Testament History. This set of slides is especially appropriate for a Sunday evening service or an art entertainment. THROUGH THE CAUCASUS TO ST. PETERSBURG, with Lecture.

The beautiful Provinces of Trans Caucasia, with its grand mountain scenery, picturesque nationalities and classic associations and Cis Caucasia with its mineral springs and fashionable resorts have been little explored by American tourists. While distance added to the difficulties of traveling continue to keep them comparatively unknown regions, a trip in imagination will be found intensely interesting under the guidance of Mrs. L. C. Van Hook, who has traveled extensively in these delightful portions of Russia, and who furnishes pictures gathered on the spot.

THE VILLAGE BLACKSMITH.

8 Slides, including portraits of Longfellow and beautiful view of his home.

*Under the spreading chestnut tree,
The village smithy stands;
The smith, a mighty man is he,
With large and sinewy hands;
And the muscles of his brawny arms
Are strong as iron bands.*

*His hair is crisp, and black, and long,
His face is like the tan;
His brow is wet with honest sweat,
He earns what'er he can,
And looks the whole world in the face,
For he owes not any man.*

*Week in, week out, from morn till night,
You can hear his bellows blow;
You can hear him swing his heavy sledge,
With measured beat and slow,
Like a sexton ringing the village bell,
When the evening sun is low.*

*And children coming home from school
Look in at the open door;
They love to see the flaming forge,
And hear the bellows roar,
And catch the burning sparks that fly
Like chaff from a threshing-floor.*

*He goes on Sunday to the church,
And sits among his boys;
He hears the parson pray and preach,
He hears his daughter's voice,
Singing in the village choir,
And it makes his heart rejoice.*

*It sounds to him like her mother's voice,
Singing in Paradise!
He needs must think of her once more,
And with his hard, rough hand he wipes
A tear out of his eyes.*

*Toiling,—rejoicing,—sorrowing,
Onward through life he goes;
Each morning sees some task begun,
Each evening sees it close;
Something attempted, something done,
Has earned a night's repose.*

*Thanks, thanks to thee, my worthy friend,
For the lesson thou hast taught!
Thus at the flaming forge of life
Our fortunes must be wrought;
Thus on its sounding anvil shaped
Each burning deed and thought.*

WITH LECTURE BY REV. FLAVIUS J. BROBST.

At the commencement of every decade the peasants of Oberammergau enact the drama of Christ's Passion in their own Mountain Village. The theatre in which these scenes are rendered is however one of the largest in the world. During the past summer of 1900 this play was again given. The interest in this play shown by the entire civilized world was greater than ever before. People from all parts of Europe and America went there and the throngs numbered many scores of thousands.

We herewith present a series of slides taken recently of the last rendition of the play which covers the drama. They will be found to be first class.

THE OBEDIENT HUSBAND

Comic Recitation, illustrated by six colored slides and title.

To be obedient is a plan I've acted on through life,
And on this simple principle I always treat my wife.
The other day her cousins came, each one a charming miss,
And like a loving relative, I gave them all a kiss.
Four lovely girls. I kissed them all twice. Then my wife yelled at me,
"Why don't you kiss the cook and then the servant girl! Go on!"
I did it! I did it! It didn't take me long.
I did it! I did it! I didn't think it wrong.
My wife kicked up a rumpus, and with me wiped the floor,
But I only did as I was bid, a fellow can't do more.

I like to lead a quiet life. At night I like to sleep,
But when the kid begins to yell, from bed I have to leap.
One night I held it in my arms when up there came a baw!
And in my agitation there, I let the baby fall.
"Oh! you monster!" cried my wife, "Why don't you throw the poor baby out the window?"
I did it! I did it! It didn't take me long.
I did it! I did it! I didn't think it wrong.
My wife went in hysterics, and set up such a roar!
I only did as I was bid! A fellow can't do more.

One night I came home from the club, and feeling rather gay,—
It's very seldom that I'm found in the hilarious way,—
I tried hard not to wake my wife but creep in unawares,
But, stumbled as a fellow will, and tumbled down the stairs.
"That's all right! you drunken loafer!" yelled my beloved, "break your infernal neck!"
I did it! I did it! I didn't think it wrong,
I did it! I did it and here I stop my song.
My neck is dislocated, I can't sing any more.
But I only did as I was bid. A fellow can't do more.

SOUTH AFRICA.

Mr. J. Martin Miller, a gentleman with experience as a newspaper correspondent and an extensive traveler, has selected these views illustrating the British-Boer war, and has written the accompanying lecture. He has written a popular book as the results of his travels, and has copyrighted his lecture and photographs taken on the field, so that in order to get the best series of slides on the market, representing the thrilling scenes and battles of the British-Boer war, orders should be sent directly to us. These slides being made from photographs are very clear and distinct, and when properly projected upon the screen give a representation that is wonderfully lifelike and true to nature. The lecture is so printed as to make an evening's entertainment if desired, but if otherwise, the historical portions being in smaller type can readily be omitted and only the portion descriptive of the views be used.

SAMOA.

Hon. Bartlett Tripp, United States Commissioner to Samoa, collected a very fine selection of views during his stay among the beautiful islands of the southern seas, and the series of slides given below is among the most attractive which we offer. Their value is increased by the interesting lecture which our commissioner has prepared to accompany them, giving in addition to the description of the scenes, a very complete and concise statement of the resources of the Islands and the character of their inhabitants. A SUMMER TRIP THROUGH EUROPE.

The value of a series of slides illustrating travels is greatly enhanced by a lecture prepared by one who has himself visited the places shown, and is thus able to give a clearness of description and a vividness of detail which would be impossible to any but an eye-witness. Hon. Bartlett Tripp, United States Commissioner to Samoa, has selected the finest views that could be found in his summer trip through Europe, and has accompanied them with a graphic account of their present appearance and interesting facts regarding their past history which will render this series one of the most attractive and popular that we make.

THE BIBLE.

A SERIES OF TEN SERMONS BY REV. J. T. LADD.

FIRST.—WHY DO WE HAVE THE BIBLE. The sermons under this division portray vividly the need of a divine revelation, by showing that man is not able to get a correct idea of the character of God or of human duty from nature, or civilization, or the non-christian faiths.

SECOND.—HOW WE GOT THE BIBLE. These sermons treat of the production, preservation, discovery and present places of deposit of important Hebrew and Greek manuscripts; of ancient versions and modern translations, and of their publication and circulation.

THIRD.—WHAT THE BIBLE IS FOR. The sermons under this last division illustrate the beneficial influences of the Bible. The opinions of famous men and women are considered, and there are shown a remarkable collection of striking contrasts between the conditions of people before they became Christians and after they became Christians. These are from many mission fields.

Each sermon is so far independent that it may be used separately, and yet in the series each is intimately related to all.

Several of the sermons are specially helpful in missionary work. The pictures present the needs and the benefits of the Gospel with tremendous power. All are fervently evangelical.

THE NOBLE ARMY OF MARTYRS IN CHINA.

"Slain for the word of God and the testimony which they held".—Rev. G. G.
BY G. H. CASE.

The ferocious cruelty of the Boxers inspired and encouraged by the wicked and deceitful Empress Dowager of China; and the splendid heroism and faithfulness of the missionaries and native Chinese Christians has never been surpassed in the history of the world.

Over two hundred missionaries and many thousand of native Chinese Christians were murdered in the most cruel manner that fiendish minds could devise.

"They were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. They had trials of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover, of bonds and imprisonment; they were stoned, were slain with swords; they wandered about in sheep skins and goat skins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented; of whom the world was not worthy; they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth."

Mr. Charles H. Case, has had a long experience in promoting missionary work and a personal acquaintance with many of the martyrs. In order that he might bring their "great sacrifice" in a more real and vivid way before the public he has prepared a series of lantern slides with lecture. Many of the martyred ones had been in his home before they went to China, and some of the survivors of the siege have been at his table since their return to their own land. This has enabled Mr. Case to present many interesting facts and traits of character which would otherwise have been left out of a descriptive lecture.

AFRICA.

These slides were made from photographs brought from his field of labor by Rev. M. Fraser who has worked for years at Elat, W. Africa, under the Presbyterian Board. The lecture was prepared by the Rev. J. T. Ladd, under the direction of the missionary.

There is an interesting pictorial account of the Bulu Savages, their occupations, amusements, etc., of school and church work among them, and of the results. One series of illustrations widely presents the effects of witchcraft as it is believed in and practiced in Africa to-day.

We heartily commend this illustrated lecture to those who care to know what real missionary work is among savage heathens. It is a powerful missionary sermon.

AROUND THE WORLD

By J. MARTIN MILLER.

The historical events of 1900 and 1901 have been of such thrilling character that the eyes of the world have been directed toward the far east, as never before. The geography, customs and habits of the Orientals, so little known before this time, have now become of great and increasing interest to the general public.

The writer has taken advantage of this fact and in his trip around the world spent most of his time in China, Japan and Ceylon. Some of his photographs were made in the "Forbidden City" where never before had a camera been. This "Around the World Trip" differs from the usual ones in that it combines with the scenes of public buildings and panoramic views of large cities, beautiful views of waterfalls, tropical plants, trees and products, coffee and tea plantations, and illustrates the customs and habits of the people, making an exhibition that will hold the attention and please the audience so that praise and commendation will go before and follow the exhibitor from place to place. Read the list of slides and notice the great variety of subjects treated.

THE SIEGE IN PEKIN.

The implements and methods of warfare have made great advancement during the past few decades.

The methods of communication between nations and the armies and agents have kept apace. No sooner had Dewey sunk the Spanish fleet than the news had been flashed to the whole world.

The destruction of Cervera's fleet was known the world over ere the smoke and flames from the beached wreck had died away.

Accustomed to almost constant and instant communication with their agents, the nations of the world were not prepared for the report that their Ambassadors and ministers were shut up in Pekin, in imminent danger of their lives.

But as day followed day without communication, the suspense, caused by rumors of massacre of the representatives, their wives and children, grew. Week after week dragged on. Inquiry after inquiry was sent out. The world waited. Never before had history recorded such an event. Think of it!

The representatives of America, England, Russia, Germany and France shut up in the Capitol of a nation at peace with them, with means of communication so perfect that minutes only separated them from their far away ambassadors, and in face of this, all communication refused!

The uprising of the Boxers, the connivance of the Empress Dowager, the Massacre of Missionaries and Native Christians, the murder of the German Ambassador, the siege and bombardment of the foreign legations, make a combination of events so startling and unexpected that the "Siege in Pekin" will go down in history as one of the most remarkable series of events recorded on its pages.

As the facts and incidents of the siege are brought out by the survivors, the public will become more and more interested.

A WORD ABOUT THE SLIDES.

The set of slides are all taken from photographs which were made during the siege. These have been secured from returned missionaries and others who had been in the Siege; some from the celebrated traveler Mr. James Martin Miller, who was on the ground and made photographs of places which never before had faced a camera.

The exhibitor who secures a set of these slides can rest assured that there is none better.

A careful perusal of the list of slides will convince you of their great variety and interest.

The lecture has been prepared by one who is personally acquainted with the leaders in the defense of the Legations.

Supplementary slides may be had by making selections from our sets on "The Imperial City", "Our Noble Army of Martyrs", "Around the World Trip" or "China Against the World".

The value of this set of slides will increase the longer you have them. They differ from the ordinary "War Set", in that all the great nations had representatives, who went through the siege. They can be used in any city in any country. All are interested because all have suffered.

I HOME, SWEET HOME

ILLUSTRATED WITH BEAUTIFUL SLIDES FROM LIFE POSING.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 2 Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
3 Be it ever so humble, there's no place
like home.
A charm from the skies seems to hallow us there.
4 Which seek thro' the world is ne'er met with elsewhere. | 10 An exile from home, splendor dazzles in vain;
11 Oh, give me my lowly thatched cottage again,
The birds singing gaily, that come at my call.
12 Give me them and that peace of mind
dearer than all. |

REFRAIN

- Home, home, sweet, sweet home,
5 There's no place like home, oh, there's no place like home.

REFRAIN

- Home, home, sweet, sweet home,
13 There's no place like home, oh, there's no place like home.

- I gaze on the moon as I tread the drear wild,
6 And feel that my mother now thinks of her child;
7 As she looks on that moon from our cottage door,
8 Thro' the woodbine whose fragrance shall cheer me no more.

REFRAIN

- Home, home, sweet, sweet home,
9 There's no place like home, oh, there's no place like home.

- 14 How sweet 'tis to sit 'neath a fond father's smile.
And the care of a mother to soothe and beguile
15 Let others delight 'mid new pleasures to roam
But give me, oh! give me the pleasures of home.

REFRAIN

- Home, home, sweet, sweet home,
16 But give me, oh! give me the pleasures
of Home.

- 17 To thee I'll return over-burdened with care.
The heart's dearest solace will smile
on me there;
18 No more from that cottage again will I roam,
Be it ever so humble, there's no place
like home.

REFRAIN

- Home, home, sweet, sweet home,
19 There's no place like home, there's no place like home.

PLEASE READ

For terms, shipping instructions, etc., see inside page of front cover. For prices and terms of rental on slides, see pages 251 and 252.

To bring additional matter in the right place, the same page number with a letter of the alphabet is sometimes used. For instance, following page 20 is 20A. Similar cases will be found elsewhere, both in omitting a page number and in repeating the page number with consecutive letters. Please remember this when consulting the index.

We exercise all due precaution in packing goods, and our responsibility ceases when goods are delivered to transportation company.

All claims should be made within ten days after goods have been received.

When sending orders in while traveling, kindly give more than one address, as it is not always possible to make prompt shipment, and mail may be delayed so that order is not received by us on the date expected.

If not convenient to obtain money order, enclose a bill. The risk of loss is very small when paper money is sent by mail. For anything less than one dollar, send two-cent stamps.

It is not necessary to know exact price of goods as an excuse for not sending money, for if too much money is sent, we will promptly refund balance, or place the amount to your credit, as preferred.

To protect ourselves from loss, we must insist that when goods are ordered sent C. O. D., sufficient money must accompany the order to pay express charges both ways. When telegraphing, deposit money with agent of express company by which goods are to be shipped, and have him wire us the order, stating amount of money deposited.

Freight charges are based upon 100 lbs. weight, so that it will be found cheaper as well as safer to send most packages weighing less than 100 lbs. by express. Should customers desire small shipments sent by freight, 50c should be added to their remittance to defray drayage in Chicago.

TERMS.

HOW TO REMIT.

ALL ORDERS must be accompanied with cash in current funds which may be sent by Registered Letter, Draft, Express or Postal Money Order; or if preferred goods will be sent by express C. O. D., provided that 25 per cent of the full amount of the bill is sent with order; the balance to be collected by the Express Company.

Goods ordered to be sent by mail must be prepaid and are sent at purchasers risk; the same however, can be sent by registered mail at an additional cost of 8 cents; this insures the package from loss in the mails. For mailing rates on slides see page 54. Any errors in invoice must be reported within ten days from receipt of goods. For Slide Rental terms see page 54. For Machine Rental terms see page 5.

We do not buy or sell second-hand outfits or sell goods on the installment plan.

HOW TO ORDER.

When ordering always write plainly your name, express and post office address, giving name of town, county and state. Always give full name of article wanted, number of same and page in catalogue. When ordering slides give name of set, name of slide, catalogue number and page.

Always give shipping directions, whether by mail, express or freight, stating day you desire us to ship and we will try to comply with same. After the goods have left our shipping room we do not assume the responsibility of breakage (as our goods are carefully packed) or prompt delivery of same. Traveling lecturers and exhibitors should always give us their permanent address and also the list of the towns on their route, so that we can always reach them by direct mail. Always allow plenty of time for correspondence to come and go and also time to fill slide orders after they are received.

Our special facilities enable us to furnish other goods than listed herein at the lowest prices and at short notice. Our customers are invited to make our place of business their headquarters when visiting the city, by leaving or having all their parcels delivered to us for safe keeping until they are ready to leave.

GREETING.

WE take great pleasure in submitting the twelfth edition of our Stereopticon Catalogue, and we hope that our patrons will find pleasure and profit in making us headquarters for everything in our line.

In this edition we have attempted to list only the goods most generally in use; making this a hand book for rapid reference.

Because we do not list some of the less called for articles, does not signify that we do not carry them; before going elsewhere write for our prices.

We are in better shape than ever before to handle your orders, as we are back again in much larger quarters at our old location in the New Tribune Bldg., which we had to vacate during rebuilding of same.

With our perfectly equipped stock of lantern slides and complete outfits we are in a position to ship out all orders received the same day unless special work is required on the outfits or slides.

In closing we wish to call your attention to the new line of goods we are putting on the market.

And last, remember that back of all our goods is the Manasse guarantee of Quality and our aim to make this the most satisfactory house in the country to deal with.

Thanking our patrons for their liberal support in the past, we remain,

Respectfully yours,

A PROFITABLE BUSINESS.

A Good Magic Lantern, Stereopticon or Moving Picture Exhibition is always attractive to all classes of the community.

Only make an intelligent public aware of the fact that you are prepared to give such entertainments, and you will have little difficulty in procuring engagements.

The first cost of an outfit is small when compared with the business that can be done, hence offering great inducements to a person with moderate capital.

There is no difficulty in learning the working of the apparatus; any one of ordinary intelligence, by following the printed directions with each outfit, cannot fail to produce the desired results. No heavy labor is demanded, so that persons in delicate health have often succeeded in carrying on the business satisfactorily.

About fifty views are sufficient for an evening's exhibition. If a greater number is used, less effort will be required on the part of the lecturer.

It is not even necessary that a man prepare his own programme or lecture; if he is inexperienced in such work he can obtain illustrated lectures in print all ready to read in connection with the views presented.

It offers an excellent method of paying expenses of travel to such as are compelled to seek change of climate without the necessary means to do so, and at the same time affords light and pleasing employment, which is frequently of no less advantage to the health seeker than the change of location.

In every locality there is an opening for a man to do a large business in giving exhibitions to Sunday Schools, Academies, Lyceums, Public Audiences, Families, etc.

These are usually conducted on shares when given in churches, and almost everywhere halls can be rented for a percentage of the receipts. The running expenses are very light and the profit large when well advertised.

We are at all times ready to give suggestions or information to those about to engage in this business, and those who can find it convenient to call at our place of business will be shown, in detail, the method of running an exhibition.

L. MANASSE CO., Opticians,

88 Madison St. (Tribune Bldg.),

CHICAGO, ILL.

N. B.—Secret Societies, Asylums, Y. M. C. A.'s and Colleges all over the country are fast coming to realize that the stereopticon is an almost indispensable adjunct to their work.

WE RENT MACHINES.

WITH OR WITHOUT OPERATORS.

For the benefit of our patrons who desire to use a machine occasionally we rent out our machines with or without operators. Our success in this line has been wonderful, owing to the fact that our machines are the best and that we have the best staff of operators in the country.

Our Facilities for handling these Exhibitions for Lecturers, Church Entertainments, Etc., and for out door work, such as projecting Street Advertisements, Election Returns, Etc., are unsurpassed.

This was clearly demonstrated at the last presidential election in which

WE UNDERTOOK AND SUCCESSFULLY HANDLED THE GREATEST NUMBER OF EXHIBITIONS EVER UNDERTAKEN BY ANY ONE FOR ONE NIGHT

That night over 150,000 people viewed the Election Returns which were projected by Our Machines for the "Chicago Tribune," "Chicago American" and "Chicago Examiner," at all the principal Street Corners and in the largest places in Chicago, such as the "Coliseum," "Auditorium," "Tattersals," "1st Regiment Armory," "2nd Regiment Armory," "7th Regiment Armory," and many others.

PRICES.

Prices will be furnished on application, depending on the style of machine desired and whether in or out of town.

When out of town, renter must furnish lodging and pay railroad fares both ways for the operator (if one is desired,) renter also to pay transportation charges (if any) on the outfit to and from the city.

Renter must furnish bank references or deposit money with us for the full value of the outfit.

If outfit is damaged while out of our possession renter must pay all charges for repairing same.

Renter has the privilege of selecting and using 75 of our slides without any rental charge.

For Slide Rental Terms see page 54.

When inquiring state what kind of exhibition is desired.

MOVING PICTURE FILMS.

HOW MADE.

Moving picture films consist of a series of small pictures, (each picture being the same size as shown in illustration) made on a long transparent celluloid tape. The length of these films vary according to the number of these small pictures that is necessary to illustrate the subject complete.

HOW RUN THROUGH THE MACHINE.

Each of these small pictures are moved past the lenses in the machine so rapidly that the eye cannot detect it. This operation causes a little flickering on the screen, which defect is overcome in the Edison Moving Picture Machines by a patented revolving shutter, which revolves as each picture is being projected, and falling in place when each picture is being changed.

SUBJECTS.

A few years ago the public were easily satisfied with films that were not over 50 feet in length with both ends cemented together so that they could be run through the machine over and over again. The subjects were limited and so poor as to allow this to be done and the public did not mind as long as the pictures moved on the screen.

But this art has advanced so rapidly that the public now demand these pictures to be interesting, comical and as mystifying as possible.

Some of the Great Headliners are "Parsifal 1,975 feet," "Great Train Robbery, 740 feet," "How Jones Lost His Roll, 875 feet," "The Lost Child, 538 feet," "The Strike, 440 feet," "Personal, 371 feet," "The Whole Damm Family, 800 feet," "The Burglar's Slide for Life, 335 feet," and many others.

Each one of these great films represents quite an expenditure of money, but from the way the people rush, packing large halls and churches to see these films, the exhibitor is quickly reimbursed in a few exhibitions. As soon as a new film is issued we put out special circulars on same, which we will mail at once free of charge to all our customers who will send us their name and permanent address for our mailing list. This will enable you to be among the first to use the latest films before the public.

EDISON'S PROJECTING KINETOSCOPES.

Combined With The Stereopticon.

Edison's Projecting Kinetoscopes namely the Edison Universal and Exhibition Models represent the highest development in the art of projecting exact reproductions of life with correct expressions, light and shade upon the screen.

Each machine is combined with a Stereopticon Attachment for projecting the standard size lantern slides.

Only One Illuminant is used, as each machine is equipped with a Quick Change Sliding Device by which the moving picture mechanism and stereopticon attachment is shifted to one side or vice versa before the illuminant so as to project either moving pictures or lantern slides. Each machine consist of a moving picture mechanism, a moving picture lens, a large roomy sheet iron lamp house, a stereopticon objective with holder and rod, a pair of 4½-inch condensing lenses, a high power calcium jet or electric arc lamp, rheostat and switch, a rapid slide carrier, a quick change sliding device and a fine oak finish wooden base board with clamp casting.

Each Mechanism is equipped with a triple sprocket gearing, a patented revolving shutter which does away with the flickering on the screen, a simple and quick framing device operated by a lever attachment, a take up device which automatically winds up the films on a reel as quick as it runs through the machine which does away with the old method of running the films into a bag or box, and a pair of reels on which the films are carried. Each mechanism is perfect in itself and have the advantages of being accurate, compact, portable, simple in construction with the least amount of wear and tear on the films, and the ability to project a brilliant and steady picture. Both machines are fully covered by patents and use the standard size Edison Films which have been adopted as the standard size the world over. A special feature of these machines is that they can be operated by one man and an amateur can be taught to operate same in a half hours time. Full directions accompany each machine. For prices see pages 8 to 11.

The Edison Universal Projecting Kinetoscope.

The Edison Universal Model corresponds exactly to the description given on Edison Kinetoscopes on page 7. The Mechanism part is made entirely of metal mounted on a base casting which is fastened by means of a screw to the quick change sliding device, by which the mechanism is shifted to one side to allow the projection of lantern slides or vice versa. The two reels are eight inches in diameter and each reel will hold about 650 feet of films. The machine is fitted with first class lenses and the complete machine is sold at a price within the reach of all.

The Edison Exhibition Projecting Kinetoscope.

The Edison Exhibition Model corresponds exactly to the description given on Edison Kinetoscopes on page 7. The Mechanism part of this model is mounted in a fine oak finish wooden cabinet which makes it heavier and more rigid than the Universal Model. The quick change sliding device also differs from the Universal Model in this respect, that the lamp house is shifted to one side or vice versa so as to bring the light in the lamp house in line with the stereopticon lense or moving picture mechanism.

The two reels are ten inches in diameter and each reel will hold from 1000 to 1200 feet of films. This machine is specially adapted for heavy traveling work and the lenses fitted on it are of the very best quality.

Manasse's Edison Invincible Projecting Kinetoscope

A Combined Stereopticon and Moving Picture Machine.

Our Edison Invincible Projecting Kinetoscope is the best machine on the market for projecting moving pictures and lantern slides. It is made by combining our Invincible Magic Lantern (as described on page 18 and 19) with the Edison Universal Kinetoscope Mechanism, as described on pages 7 to 9.

It has the following points of superiority over the regular Edison Universal Kinetoscope in having a cone or hood attached to the moving picture mechanism which prevents the light from escaping and affecting the vision of those near the machine, a pair of extra long hangers or supports with large size reels which will hold 1000 feet of films, a special full $\frac{1}{2}$ size stereopticon objective lens, a special large size moving picture lens which makes a fine, clear flat field, a special base board which can be separated in two parts making it convenient for shipping, and a carrying case to hold the complete machine.

Manasse's Invincible Double Dissolving Stereopticon.

Our Invincible Double Dissolving Stereopticon consists of two of our Invincible Single Magic Lanterns (described above) mounted one over the other with extra fine adjustments for registering each picture upon the screen accurately when being dissolved. These adjustments are of the latest improved patterns made exclusively for this lantern. If an exhibitor desires the best effects upon the screen, he should always use a double dissolving stereopticon, as this will enable him to produce many wonderful dissolving effects which are mystifying and which cannot be produced with a single lantern. The Invincible Double Dissolving Stereopticon is the best, and each machine comes packed in a neat carrying case.

Electric Rheostats or Resistance Coils. With All the Latest Improvements.

A Rheostat sometimes called a resistance coil must always be used when electricity is used as an illuminant for projecting moving pictures or slides. All electric arc lamps will take more current than they can carry, therefore a rheostat is used to hold back this surplus current. The two grades of rheostats we make, namely the Triumph and Featherweight can be used on alternating or direct current.

Our Triumph Grade Rheostat is well made, light and strong with an adjustable sliding contact, by which the strength of light can be increased or decreased. The wire is tightly wound and all parts are thoroughly insulated. This rheostat burns about 15 amperes of current.

No. 72—Triumph Rheostat for 110 volts or less, price.....$4.00

Our Feather weight Rheostat is constructed on an entirely new principle and made of a new light weight material, weighing only from 2 to 4 pounds. It is small, compact and is the only rheostat that has a fuse wire enclosed in a metal fuse block attached to it.

This does away with carrying porcelain fuse blocks which break very easily. It is also equipped with an adjustable sliding contact by which the strength of light can be increased or decreased. The above rheostat is made without and with a wire netting guard which prevents anything inflammable from coming in contact with the wire which is hot when in use.

ELECTRICITY

Electric Light Plants are fast being installed in all the small towns and cities of the world.

We therefore recommend all exhibitors who have not already added Electric Light Attachments to their outfits to do so at once, as this will enable them to visit towns that have never seen a first class exhibition. An Electric Light Attachment consists of an electric arc lamp, rheostat, carbons, electric switch, and from 15 to 30 feet of wire.

On the following four pages we quote prices on each part separate, and complete attachments.

ELECTRIC ARC LAMPS.

We make three styles of electric arc lamps, each lamp being highly tempered so as to withstand the intense heat given off by the carbons and equipped with all the latest improved adjustments.

When the disc resembles Fig. A, the light must be moved to the left; Fig. B, it must be moved to the right; Fig. C, the light must be lowered; Fig. D, it must be raised. If the disc is surrounded by a dark blue border, as in E, the light is too near the Condenser, and must be moved back; if, on the contrary, this ring is of an orange hue, the light is too far from the Condenser, and must be moved forward.

Low and High Pressure Dissolving Keys.

For Use With Gas-Making Outfits, Gas Tanks, Etc.

When using the oxygen and hydrogen gases (known as the limelight) in a double dissolving lantern, a dissolving key must be used to dissolve the gases from one calcium jet into the other. There are two kinds, namely, low and high pressure dissolving keys. A low pressure key can be used with a gas-making outfit, gas bags or a pair of gas tanks. A high pressure key can be used only with a pair of gas tanks and is used by exhibitors who desire to get the best dissolving effect and highest power of light. All our keys are of the best grade and will not cause hissing or snapping noises which often happen in a cheap made key when the gases are dissolved. When these noises occur the persons sitting near the machine become greatly alarmed. Below we quote prices:

THE TRIUMPH LOW PRESSURE DISSOLVING KEY.

Our Triumph Low Pressure Key is made of a special hard composition with a dissolving plug in which the dissolving grooves are cut accurate so as to dissolve the gases perfectly. It is fitted with adjustable screws and is finely nickel-plated throughout.

No. 124. Triumph Low Pressure Dissolving Key. Price.....$9.00

THE PEERLESS HIGH PRESSURE DISSOLVING KEY.

The Peerless High Pressure Dissolving Key is the only key that has two independent dissolving plugs for each gas tank and for each calcium burner. The flow of the gases is always under perfect control as the key is equipped with separate adjusting valves to regulate the flow of each gas to each calcium burner. The dissolving grooves in the dissolving plugs are cut accurate so that when the gases are dissolved each picture is softly blended or dissolved from one into the other without any darkening of the light upon the screen. Each key is equipped with one length of high pressure hose and couplings for attaching it to gas tanks or cylinders. Each key is finely nickel plated throughout.

No. 125. Peerless High Pressure Dissolving Key with connecting parts. Price.....$30.00

THE INVINCIBLE HIGH PRESSURE DISSOLVING KEY.

The Invincible High Pressure Dissolving Key corresponds exactly to the description given above on our Peerless High Pressure Dissolving Key, with the exception that it is made with a single dissolving plug instead of two dissolving plugs as in the Peerless Key. The dissolving plug is made of the finest tool steel and the key is finely nickel plated throughout. It is the only key that is equipped with an extra set of nipples in which the flow of the gases are controlled by regulating valves entirely independent of the dissolving plug of the key. The extra set of nipples will be found convenient for the exhibitor using three separate lanterns such as a double dissolving lantern and a separate moving picture machine. Each nipple of the entire three sets on the key have a separate regulating valve so that the flow of the gases to the calcium burner are always under perfect control.

If only a double dissolving lantern is to be used the extra set of nipples can be left closed or our gas light attachment can be used. The gas light attachment, which is furnished with each key, when connected to the hydrogen gas nipple mark H 3 as per illustration on the opposite page will give an ordinary gas flame which will be found convenient to use when setting up or testing the machine.

Each key is equipped with one length of high pressure hose, couplings and gas light attachment all ready to be connected to a pair of gas tanks. This key with all its special features is without a doubt the best key on the market.

THE WONDER AND ELECTRIC DISSOLVING SHUTTERS.The Wonder Dissolver Will Make Your Single Lantern a Dissolving Lantern.*The Invincible Electric Dissolving Shutter.*The Wonder Single Lantern Dissolver.*Will Dissolve Slides in a Single Lantern Like a Dissolving Lantern.

The Wonder Single Lantern Dissolver when attached to a single lantern will dissolve the slides upon the screen with a dissolving effect similar to that produced by a dissolving lantern. This effect is produced by moving a hand lever (marked B) up and down, which will move the dissolving shutters so that one picture will gradually fade away and another picture appear in place of it. This operation can be done slowly or quickly as desired, and the effect produced is very pleasing to the eye, as there is always light on the curtain. Each dissolver is equipped with two colored tinters by which a scene can be dissolved from daylight to sunset and from sunset to night. This dissolver is made in two different sizes to fit the different size objectives.

Electric Dissolving Shutters.

When using electricity as an illuminant for a double dissolving stereopticon, both electric arc lamps are kept burning at their full illumination and the dissolving effect is produced by an electric dissolving shutter, which is generally fastened to the front rim of the upper objective lense. The electric dissolving shutters consist of a shutter blade or blades which are moved up and down in front of the objective lenses by a hand lever, producing a dissolving effect which many exhibitors prefer in place of that produced by a dissolving key.

THE INVINCIBLE GAS MAKING OUTFIT.

MAKES OXYGEN AND HYDROGEN GASES FOR LIME LIGHT.

The Invincible Gas Making outfit consists of two small cylinder shape seamless steel tanks lined with porcelain both in and outside, a nickel plated steel stand pipe, an improved patented saturator nickel plated, a steel wire basket, 8 feet of rubber tubing, wrench, tongs, funnel and a wooden carrying case.

All of the above parts are detachable and the complete outfit packed in carrying case does not weigh over 85 pounds.

HOW THE OUTFIT IS SET UP AND THE GASES ARE PRODUCED.

A number of Oxylithe cakes are placed into the steel wire basket. The exact number to put in is figured according to the length of time the outfit is to be used, as each cake is rated to make gas for five minutes. Oxylithe is a new special prepared patented chemical compound made up in cake form packed 24 in a sealed tin box. For price see bottom of page. The steel basket is now placed into the lower tank and cover of the tank clamped on tight. The steel stand pipe is now screwed tight in the opening of the cover. The upper tank is now screwed tight on the upper thread of the steel stand pipe.

Water is now poured into the upper tank until it is within three inches from the top of the tank. This water passes through the stand pipe into the lower tank and comes in contact with the Oxylithe cakes, which instantly generates oxygen gas. The gas thus formed forces the water away from the oxylithe back through the stand pipe into the upper tank and the water now acts as a pressure for the gases. The oxylithe now only absorbs moisture from the water, because after the gas has once been formed it does not touch the water. Hydrogen gas is produced from ether or 88 gasoline which is vaporized in the saturator fastened on the stand pipe.

This outfit is very easy to operate, perfectly harmless, portable and will give a light about 750 candle power which is very near the strength of light derived from a pair of gas tanks. It is used with an ordinary calcium jet or burner. It generates gas when in use and stops generating instantly when not in use.

It is without a doubt the best gas making outfit that has ever been put on the market and can be always seen in our show rooms.

THE INVINCIBLE ALCOHOL VAPOR LIGHT GAS OUTFIT.

Will produce a powerful steady white light about 400 candle power which is stronger than given by any other vapor or carbon light outfit. One great improvement is the special lense mounted in the burner hood which concentrates all rays of light so that not one ray of light is lost. The light is produced by vaporizing and burning ordinary wood alcohol which can be purchased at most any drug store. The fact that this outfit can be charged, started in five minutes and operated at a cost of about 3 cents per hour demonstrates that it meets a much felt want among Travelling Exhibitors, Churches, Colleges, Lodges, Asylums and others who do not find it necessary to use calcium or electric light. This outfit is perfectly safe, cheap, simple, portable, weighs only 29 ounces, and is so small that it can be packed in the lamp house of most any lantern or in a box 5 x 6½ x 8-ins.

No. 317

No. 317

The Reginaphone is a Regina Music Box with a Talking Machine Attachment. The same power which turns the tune discs for the Regina is arranged to turn the flat record of the talking machine. A feature of this machine is that you get both a music box and a talking machine at the price of a regular talking machine. Another feature is that no talking machine is made with such a good motor as we put in the Reginaphone. "ABIDE WITH ME."

In Set of 12 Slides.

- 1 Abide with me; fast falls the eventide,
The darkness deepens, Lord! with me abide, etc.
- 2 Swift to its close ebb out life's little day.
Earth's joys grow dim, its glories pass away, etc.
- 3 Not a brief glance, I beg a passing word,
But as Thou dwalest with Thy disciples, Lord, etc.
- 4 Come not in terrors as the King of Kings,
But kind and good with healing in Thy wings, etc.
- 5 Thou on my head in early youth did smile,
And though rebellious and perverse meanwhile,
6 Thou hast not left me, off as I left Thee,
On to the close, O Lord, abide with me.
- 7 I need Thy presence every passing hour,
What but Thy grace can foil the tempter's power?

"FROM GREENLAND'S ICY MOUNTAINS."

In Set of 12 Slides.

- 1 From Greenland's icy mountains,
2 From India's coral strand;
3 From many an ancient river,
4 From many a palmy plain,

7 Blow down to wood and stone,
8 Shall we, whose souls are lighted,
9 With wisdom from on high,

"NINETY AND NINE."

- 1 "There were ninety and nine,"
2 "Away on the mountains wild and bare,"
3 "But the Shepherd made answer,"
4 "And aither the road be rough and steep,"

WILL IT PAY?

This is the question that naturally arises when one anticipates embarking in a new enterprise. No other form of entertainment has so large a field in which to work, and no other can be operated at so small an expense.

There are public schools, churches, fairs, lodges and an endless number of different societies where exhibitions can be given.

It is not necessary to prepare your own lecture or to be a public speaker. Printed Lectures on almost all subjects can be obtained, which are read as the slides are projected on the curtain.

For one with a limited capital the small towns offer a good field. These people have few opportunities to see an entertainment. They are easily pleased and patronize liberally anything in this line.

A Phonograph or Gramophone adds to the value of your show, and renders you independent of all outside sources of Music. A special catalogue of Phonographs and Gramophones will be sent on request,

There is no question but that stereopticon and moving picture exhibitions, when well managed and the proper means are employed to bring them before the public, are highly remunerative. The amount of money required to secure a first class outfit is far less than any other business which pays equally as well.

Terms.

There is a discount of 2 per cent when full amount of cash is sent with your orders. Otherwise, send 20 per cent. of the amount of order in cash, and we will ship C. O. D. for balance. We do not sell goods on the installment plan.

Illustrating the use of this lens: Assuming that a moving picture machine has been placed at a distance of 50 feet from the curtain which is 12 feet in size. On making his first trial the operator focuses his objective and finds that his picture is too large for the curtain. He then reduces it to the exact size of his curtain merely by revolving the front ring of the objective, which controls the inner combination of lenses.

Changes in size of picture can be accomplished while the machine is in operation. Adjustable Lens, price $20.00.

A DISCORDANT NOTE.

The pleasures of a company assembled in a private house are interrupted by a young man who persists in singing. One of the men, aggravated beyond all restraint, seizes the amateur vocalist and throws him bodily out of the window. The scene then changes to the front of the house, where the young man is seen crashing through the window and landing in a heap on the lawn below. 60 Feet.

A VICTIM OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Two youngsters who are shooting at birds with sling-shots, break the front window of a house and run away. An old gentleman happening along picks up the sling-shot and stops to examine it. As he does so the owner of the house appears, and after accusing the old gentleman of inflicting the damage calls the police and has him carried away, protesting against the indignity. Very well done. 50 Feet.

HAPPY HOOLIGAN IN A TRAP.

Hooligan happens in at a country cottage, and after disturbing the ladies proceeds to investigate the interior of the cottage by thrusting his head through the window. Unfortunately, he brags the window down on his head and hangs there kicking until Gloomy Gus rescues him. An extra good subject. 52 Feet.

WILLIE'S CAMERA.

This is a very humorous and a very natural scene. Two mischievous small boys rig up a fake camera with a piece of stove pipe and a box, and persuade a gushing old maid to sit for her picture. When she is carefully posed, the camera emits a flood of soot and she is thoroughly covered. The small boys dance with glee. 50 Feet.

WHY FOXY GRANDPA ESCAPED A DUCKING.

Foxy Grandpa's boys attempt to play a practical joke on him by putting a bucket of water over his door and connecting it with a string to the door knob. While they are away Foxy Grandpa changes the string from the door knob to the door bell. The boys return, pull the bell, and give themselves a ducking, while Foxy Grandpa looks on with twinkling eyes from a corner of the window. Excellent comedy well worked out. 52 Feet.

"LEVI & COHEN" THE IRISH COMEDIANS.

Showing two typical concert hall knock-about teams in a very poor performance. It ends up in their being egged by the audience. Very realistic and very funny. 61 Feet.

THE BOY IN THE BARREL.

A small boy is smoking his first cigarette in the door-yard of a cottage. Fearing detection, he jumps into a barrel. His parents see the smoke rising from the barrel, rush out of the house and drench the youngster with water. The finish is very laughable. 33 Feet.

BUTTONS GOT EVEN WITH THE BUTLER.

Buttons and the butler have a feud. Buttons has been abused and plots to get even. He ties the butler's contails to a china cabinet, while the butler is serving the master. Buttons then makes faces at the butler, who starts after him, overturning the cabinet and smashing all the dishes. 51 Feet.

GLOOMY GUS GETS THE BEST OF IT.

Gus and Hooligan spy a woman putting out some pies to cool. They climb the wall and take the pies. Hooligan stops to tease the chained dog. Gus in the meantime climbs to a place of safety, but the dog breaks his chain and Hooligan suffers the consequences. 40 Feet.

THE REHEARSAL.

Showing a trio of amateurs rehearsing a song. The action is extremely ludicrous throughout.

60 Feet.

A WINDY DAY AT THE FLATIRON.

This remarkable picture was taken at the foot of New York's famous skyscraper, The Flatiron, and shows men and women being blown about like chips. One woman is flattened against a shop window and is utterly unable to walk. An extraordinary subject.

125 Feet.

FIRING THE COOK.

A good-natured Irish cook has the misfortune to break a dish and is severely taken to task by her mistress. The cook resents the treatment she is receiving and proceeds to break other dishes. The mistress then calls a policeman, who endeavors to put the cook out. A very comical fight ensues, in which the cook gets all the best of it, the policeman being thrown bodily out of the window. As he lands and ruefully rubs his limbs, the triumphant face of the cook appears at the window. An excellent comedy scene.

82 Feet.

NEXT!

Alphonse and Gaston are in an American barber shop. They interrupt business with their exaggerated politeness, and the waiting customers throw them out of the window.

93 Feet.

OFF HIS BEAT.

A policeman goes out of his way to make love to the cook in the absence of her steady. The latter returns in time to catch the policeman trespassing, and a fight ensues in which the policeman gets decidedly the worst of it.

62 Feet.

A GUARDIAN OF THE PEACE.

A man and his wife are quarreling in the garden when a policeman jumps over the wall and interferes. The couple immediately set upon the policeman and give him a severe beating. When he is well laid out they throw him over the wall. The opposite side of the wall is then shown. The policeman lands heavily, and after picking himself up with difficulty goes away, followed by the jeers of the couple, whose heads appear on the top of the wall.

70 Feet.

HOOLIGAN'S DREAM.

At the opening of the picture Hooligan is seen wandering about in a heavy snow storm. He falls asleep in the snow and dreams. In his dreams he becomes a personage of great wealth and position, with valets and servants to wait upon him. He is reclining luxuriously in a feather bed, and Santa Claus comes down the chimney with pack laden with bottles of champagne, boxes of cigars, etc. Hooligan is soon dressed in the height of fashion and sits to a magnificent dinner. After he has enjoyed this to the utmost he dreams that he is going to the opera and allows his valet to dress him in his evening clothes. When he attempts to move, however, he finds that his valet has nailed his shoes to the floor. Highly indignant, he starts to chase the valet, but suddenly awakes only to find a big policeman standing over him and rapping his feet with his night stick. A splendid scene throughout. The Santa Claus scene is omitted when desired, as that portion is appropriate only to the holiday season.

THE BURGLAR.

This is a very humorous picture in two continuous scenes. The first shows a bedroom, where an elderly couple have retired for the night. The burglar enters cautiously through a window and is heard by the wife, who awakens the husband. He (the husband) is about paralyzed with fright, but his wife persuades him to get up, and the two proceed to hunt for the burglar. The latter in the meantime has made his way into an adjoining room, where the couple come armed with a revolver, and in great trepidation try to locate the thief. They finally discover him in the closet, and the husband makes the wife stand guard while he goes out for a policeman. When the officer enters and captures the burglar a funny climax is given by the husband suddenly assuming an attitude of great courage.

103 Feet.

LADY BOUNTIFUL VISITS THE MURPHYS ON WASH-DAY.

This is a splendid comedy scene. Lady Bountiful, stylishly dressed, is standing in front of the wash-tub talking to Mrs. Murphy. The small boy places the end of Lady Bountiful's train in the wringer and then grinds hard, forcing Lady Bountiful to sit down in the suds, from which predicament she is rescued with difficulty.

67 Feet.

LOVE IN A PERILOUS PLACE.

A young couple string their hammock over the water at the edge of the lake. They climb into the hammock and proceed to make the most of their unique position. Unfortunately, the hammock rope breaks and the couple fall into the water.

105 Feet.

THE CAMERA FIEND.

This is the first of a series of comedy pictures showing the adventures of a camera fiend. One of his ambitions is to secure a picture of a drowning person. He chances on a dock at the very moment when a small boy falls overboard from a boat. The boy goes down three times and the camera fiend snaps him each time. Just then the frantic mother rushes down and learns of the occurrence. The father runs to the dock, plunges in and brings up the boy. The usual measures for resuscitation are at once put into operation and the camera fiend insists upon trying to take a picture of this. The father, exasperated beyond all reason, knocks the camera fiend into the water, where he flounders until a farmer comes along and pulls him out with a rake, more dead than alive. The farmer then loads the limp camera fiend into a wheelbarrow and carries him off.

271 Feet.

THE INSURANCE COLLECTOR.

The collector is a fresh young man who tries to flirt with the pretty daughter while the mother is busy over the wash-tub. The daughter rejects the collector's advances and shoves him over into the tub, where he flounders while the two women belabor him.

69 Feet.

A CATCH OF HARD-SHELL CRABS.

The picture is in two parts. The first shows the market-man arriving in a kitchen with a basket of crabs. In removing the crabs the cook has her finger pinched, and in anger tells the small boy to take them away. The second scene shows a young man coming into his room in a sad state of inebriation. He goes into an adjoining room to disrobe, and while he is there engaged the small boy puts the crabs into his bed. The young man returns, crawls into bed, but soon jumps out in great fright with crabs clinging all over him, making a very ludicrous scene.

THE SMOKY STOVE.

An old-fashioned parlor stove has started to smoke, and the mistress of the house calls in the kitchen maid to remedy the trouble. While the girl is fussing with the stove it explodes and the girl is blown to the ceiling. She arises, however, not much the worse for her experience, making a very laughable finish to the scene.

132 Feet.

THE EASY CHAIR.

An impecunious painter paints a picture of an easy chair in such realistic fashion that a wealthy patron sits down on it and ruins the picture. He of course pays up, and the artist is in great luck.

89 Feet.

THE ARBITRATOR.

A little fat man attempts to stop a fight between two active young men. He is very much in the way, and is in a ludicrous position as he is punched and pummelled about.

51 Feet.

THE BOY UNDER THE TABLE.

A small boy is sent from the table because his mother expects a caller. He slyly comes back and creeps under the table, where he pins his mother's gown to the tablecloth. When the caller arrives she arises to meet him and pulls the cloth with its burden of dishes to the floor.

50 Feet.

SAVED.

The scene is in a powder house of a quarry. A sign on the wall reads "No Smoking." A laborer, after eating his lunch, takes out his pipe for a smoke. He throws the burnt match into a keg of powder, and a terrific explosion takes place. The scene then changes to a scene near by. The wife of the man who has been blown up is eagerly watching the sky. Debris of all sorts falls around her, and finally her husband lands in a heap. He is picked up and brushed off, apparently none the worse for his experience.

117 Feet.

A KISS IN THE DARK.

A young man is making love, Romeo fashion, to a girl in a window. She plays a joke on him by causing a colored maid to take her place. The young man does not notice the change and kisses the wench rapturously.

52 Feet. Class B.

"WHILE STROLLING IN THE PARK."

A nurse girl in the park leaves her infant unattended while she chats with a park policeman. A tramp, seizing the opportunity, takes the baby's bottle. The nurse discovers the loss and is very indignant. The cop sets out to find the tramp and locates him asleep under a tree. The policeman beats the tramp's feet, but the tramp refuses to stir. The policeman then takes the tramp by the foot and attempts to pull him from the bench, but the leg comes off. In spite of his loss, however, the tramp gets up and runs away.

217 Feet.

THE SEERESS.

An old colored mammy telling the fortune of a young woman by means of a deck of cards.

47 Feet.

A MISDIRECTED KISS.

A near-sighted beau brings some flowers to a pretty girl. She leaves the room for an instant and a colored maid enters and proceeds to arrange the flowers. The near-sighted chap at once seizes her hand and proceeds to cover it with kisses, much to the amazement of the maid and of the mistress, who in the meantime has returned.

73 Feet.

Will it Pay?

x x x

THIS is the question that naturally rises when one anticipates embarking in a new enterprise. Ten years ago it was prophesied that the stereopticon, as an entertainer, would be less used in the future than it was at that time. This, however, was a mistake, for the demand has been increasing ever since and today it is used more for entertainments than ever before. When you add a moving picture machine to the stereopticon, you double its value.

No other class of entertainment has so large a field in which to work, and no other can be operated at so small an expense. There are public halls, schools, churches, fairs, lodges, and an endless number of different societies where exhibitions can be given.

Another profitable channel is street advertising. Live business men are always ready to patronize any attractive method of advertising, for which they are willing to pay a good price. Advertising slides for this work can be made with a kodak by any amateur, or the local photographer will make them at small expense. They should be interspersed with comic slides or local scenes, portraits of prominent people, or still better with moving pictures.

Churches and societies are usually glad of an opportunity to raise money for their own financial assistance, and for a share of the receipts will sell the tickets and distribute the advertising posters.

It is not necessary to prepare your own lecture or to be a public speaker. Printed lectures on almost all subjects can be obtained, which are to be read as the slides are thrown on the screen. In all our lectures, each paragraph has a number to correspond with the slide, so no mistake or delay can be made. Many of the most successful exhibitors have never spoken in public before.

Some give the entire entertainment alone. This can be done by memorizing the lecture and describing each slide as it is thrown on the screen.

For one with limited capital, the small towns offer a good field. These people have few opportunities to see an entertainment; they are easily pleased and are liberal patrons of anything in this line.

About fifty views with printed lecture is usually sufficient for an entertainment. A few comic slides, however, will please the juvenile part of the audience and add "spice" to the exhibition.

Moving pictures are still in their infancy, and as improvements are made will grow in favor with the public. The fact of being able to bring to our very door all the important events of the world in actual life and motion, is sufficient proof that this class of entertainment will never grow old.

The Victor III Talking Machine, with flat hard rubber records, as shown in another part of this catalogue, will be found a valuable addition to an entertainment. With a combined stereopticon and moving picture machine and one of these Grand Concert talking machines, you can reproduce, at your command, all that is beautiful to the eye and all that is pleasing to the ear.

In every locality there is an opening for a man with small capital, and if you will only let it be known that you are prepared to give this kind of an entertainment, you will have little difficulty in procuring engagements.

The labor is light, the employment pleasant; expenses are small and the profits large when well advertised.

There are a few who have gone into this business and made a failure. This can usually be traced to an inferior machine and a class of views of no interest to the public, or to the exhibitor himself, who lacks sufficient tact and energy to manage the business and who no doubt has made a failure of everything he has undertaken. "A business neglected, is a business failure." For a steady, industrious man there is a good living and a good profit.

We have had twenty years' experience as exhibitors and manufacturers, and are always ready to give any suggestions or information to those who anticipate purchasing an outfit. Our dark room is provided with all kinds of lights used for projecting work, and is especially adapted for instruction and practice. Personal instructions are not necessary. By following the printed directions, anyone of ordinary intelligence can learn to operate the apparatus. Still, where convenient to do so, it would be time well spent to call on us, select your outfit, and receive personal instructions and practice under a competent operator.

Many who anticipate purchasing a lantern are at a loss to know what style of lantern to select or of whom to purchase it. We regret to state that there are many inferior lanterns and slides on the market—that from inferior goods, fine cuts can be made and cleverly worded descriptions given, that (with the low price usually quoted) "catch the unwary victim". From a cut you cannot tell the grade of material, class of workmanship or quality of lenses. We always have on hand a stock of second hand lanterns and point with pride to the fact that they are lanterns of other makes than our own. We usually get them in exchange from experienced exhibitors who have learned the difference between a poor instrument and a good one and who recognize and appreciate the superior quality of our lantern. Do not buy a lantern simply because it is cheap. Select what you think best adapted for your work even though it may cost a little more.

The first thing to decide in selecting a lantern, is whether you want a single one or a double dissolving lantern—the next question is the light—whether electric, oxy-hydrogen (calcium), acetylene, etc., and the last to consider is the slides or views. The latter can be rented if desired which will be found very convenient for those who are permanently located. We are the largest manufacturers of slides, stereopticons and supplies in this country—we occupy more space, employ more help than any other firm in our line and are therefore in position to furnish the best goods for the least money. Our goods must be seen to be appreciated.

Should you anticipate a visit to our city, we would be pleased to have your mail sent in our care and have you make our place your headquarters.

Setting Up and Operating a Lantern.

Care should be taken to have a good firm rest for the instrument, as the least shaking or movement of the lens is greatly magnified on the screen.

To obtain the best results, the lantern should be elevated as nearly on a level with the center of the screen as possible. When this is not convenient, tilt the lantern sufficiently so the light will be thrown on center of the curtain. If the instrument is tilted a good deal it would be well to tilt the screen to correspond. When using a short focus objective lens, the lantern is always placed near the screen and the nearer the screen, the less the lantern should be tilted. The same rule applies to placing the lantern on an angle with the screen it should be directly in front.

Place the lantern at proper distance from the screen to obtain the desired size picture, the greater the distance from the screen the larger the picture. Care should be taken to have the lenses clean, and if necessary to remove the glasses, be careful to replace them in the same order you found them.

Instructions for Single Lantern with Calcium Light.

Examine the tubes and blow pipe (light jet) to see that they are free from all obstructions. Place the lime pencil in the holder, so that in revolving it will keep at same distance from the tip of burner. When in proper position the lime should be from an eighth to a quarter of an inch from the tip, the distance varying according to the angle the tip is bent. If the lime is too close, the light will make great deal of noise, and if too far away, the light will not be so bright. After the lime is in position, place the burner in the lamp house, and by means of the rubber tubing, connect the burner with the tanks. Slowly open the hydrogen (black) tank and light at the tip. When the blaze is four or five inches above the lime, slowly turn on the oxygen (red) tank, until the blaze is nearly consumed. The hydrogen gas should always be slightly in excess, which will be indicated by little orange color around edge of the light. Adjust the amount of hydrogen and oxygen to obtain the best light with the least noise—place the burner so there is some light on the curtain—put slide carrier with a slide in the lantern—open or close bellows as the case may require, until an approximate focus is obtained—remove the slide and proceed to “clear up” the field. To do this see cuts and instructions “How to get a good light on curtain”

After a clear field or good light on the curtain is obtained then replace the slide before the condensing lens and “make the picture sharp” by the thumb screw on the objective lens. Do not look directly at the light in the lantern, as it will “blind” the eyes, so you cannot tell when the picture is in perfect focus. You can look at the back of the lime, or in nearly all lanterns there is a colored glass on side of the lamp house through which you can see the light.

Instructions for Double Dissolving Lantern with Calcium Light.

A dissolving apparatus consists of two lanterns of same design, so arranged that a view from each lantern can be alternately thrown on the screen. As one view disappears, the other appears in the same place and without darkening the screen.

To set up dissolving lantern, proceed with each lantern same as instructions for “Single Lantern with Calcium Light”. After clear field is obtained and both lanterns are in focus, put a slide in each lantern and move the slide carriers a little to one side or the other to match the pictures sideways. Then tilt the top lantern up or drawn as the case may require to match the pictures up and down. The idea is to have both pictures cover the same place on the screen. Our “Leader” lantern is provided with special side and up and down adjusting screws which make registering the pictures very convenient. Great improvement will be found in using a slide carrier with a metal mat (see index for Improved Double Slide Carrier).

The Dissolving Key for Calcium Light.

By a simple device called a “dissolving key,” the light from one lantern is “turned” into the other. By this means one view gradually blends, or dissolves into the other—as one fades away the other gradually takes its place. Of dissolving keys there are two kinds, namely the low pressure and high pressure. The low pressure key can be used with two tanks or with one tank and saturator, while the high pressure key can be used only with two tanks.

A dissolving key should occasionally be taken apart, cleaned and oiled. The oil and dirt should be removed with tissue paper or something free from grit. Care should be used not to scratch or injure the plug or seat when the dissolver is apart. Much time and skill is required to make a high pressure key and a scratch or little grit might cause the dissolver to leak, which would practically ruin it. Before the "plug" is put back in place, carefully wipe all the oil out of the grooves and see that the nipples are clear. Vaseline is better than oil for dissolving key.

Instructions for Using a Low Pressure Dissolving Key.

With low pressure key the amount of gas consumed is regulated by the valve at the tank and the gas therefore passes into the dissolver only as fast as it is consumed by the burners, i. e. the tank valve must occasionally be opened a little as the gas is consumed.

With the rubber tubes connect the blow pipe, or jet, of one lantern to one side of the dissolving key, and the other lantern to the other side of the dissolving key. The remaining two nipples of dissolving key should be connected with gas tanks—care should be taken to connect the hydrogen (black tank) with the nipple marked H and the oxygen with the nipple marked O. If not connected right the dissolver will not work. After limes have been placed in the burners and all connections with dissolver properly made, turn the lever or handle of dissolving key around half as far it will turn or until it stands directly over the two nipples connected with the tanks—then slowly open the hydrogen valve at the tank and light both burners—now turn lever of dissolving key from one side to the other and see that the set screws (in dissolving key) are so adjusted that only a small flame is left burning in the lantern that is turned off—when the lever is turned round far as it will go, it should strike against the end of one of these set screws, so the farther it is screwed in the larger will be the blaze. This small blaze of hydrogen is termed the "off flow" and its use is to light the mixed gas when the dissolving key is turned. With some dissolving keys the "off flow" is not controlled by lever striking against end of set screws but by thumb screws that are entirely independent of the lever.

After the flow of hydrogen on both burners is adjusted, turn the lever to one side and slowly turn on the oxygen. Before turning on the oxygen, there should be a blaze of hydrogen four or five inches above the lime. Regulate the amount of each gas until the best light with the least noise is obtained. See instruction under "Single Lantern with Calcium Light." Should the light "pop" or go out when turning the lever, it is usually from lack of sufficient hydrogen. Always keep the hydrogen a little in excess of the oxygen, which can be seen by the yellow fringe or flame around the light.

Instructions for a High Pressure Dissolving Key.

A high pressure key is usually attached direct to the tanks and full pressure of the tanks is turned into the key. The gas for each burner is regulated by small valve in the dissolving key. It is more convenient to operate and by many is preferred to the low pressure key. The Eureka high pressure key (see index) made by us is acknowledged by experts to be superior to any other key on the market.

The end marked O is attached directly to the Oxygen tank while the other end is attached to the hydrogen by means of short piece of high pressure hose. As full pressure of the tanks is turned in a high pressure dissolving key, care should be taken to see that there is no leak in the connections. Oxygen is the more expensive gas and is odorless, therefore special attention should be given to these connections. After the dissolver is connected with the tanks, see that the small valves of dissolver are tightly closed and then open freely both tank valves. By means of the rubber tubes connect the burners with the nipples on the dissolving key, so that one tube from the oxygen side of the dissolver, and one tube from the hydrogen side go to the same burner.

After limes have been placed in the burners and all connections properly made, turn lever or handle of dissolving key half way around or until it stands perpendicular, then slowly open both valves of the dissolving key on the hydrogen side and light both burners. Now turn lever of dissolving key from one side to the other and adjust the set screws so as to leave only a small amount of hydrogen burning in the lantern that is turned off. This is termed the "off flow" and for more information regarding it see "Instructions for using a Low Pressure Dissolving Key." When the "off flow" on each lantern is adjusted turn the lever clear over to one side—have blaze of hydrogen four or five inches above the lime and then slowly turn on the oxygen from one of the small valves in the dissolving key. For more information regarding light, see instructions for "Single Lantern with Calcium Light."

Oil Magic Lantern

Oil is the oldest and most convenient illuminant for projection, and this is one of the best oil lanterns on the market. It makes a picture in size about half the distance between lantern and curtain, or 6 feet at 12 feet from curtain. Body of lantern is made of Russia iron; condensing lenses are 4 inch; the objective lens has rack and pinion for fine adjustment; oil burner has three wicks and slide carrier in the double quick change, taking the full size standard slide. It is all packed in a good case, with handle for carrying.

Although we do not advocate the use of oil as an illuminant, however it will serve the purpose where it is not convenient to purchase a higher priced instrument. To anyone purchasing one of these lanterns from us, we will later on take it back as part pay towards purchase of a better lantern.

PRICE—Oil Magic Lantern$12.00

STANDARD LANTERN

This is a low-priced instrument and is specially intended for churches and lodges where it is not convenient to purchase a higher priced lantern. It is provided with extension bellows, $4\frac{1}{2}$ inch condensing lenses, and has lamp house of sufficient size to accommodate any light desired.

Although this is a remarkably good lantern for the price, however we would advise purchasing a higher grade instrument when it is possible to do so.

Price, Standard Single Lantern, with choice of $\frac{1}{4}$ or $\frac{1}{2}$ size special objective lens and double slide carrier as shown in cut.....\$13.75

The above price does not include the illuminant, and to it must be added price of light selected. For single lantern electric attachments, add \$9.00 for standard electric burner, standard rheostat No. 1, switch and 10 ft. No. 12 flexible wire. For calcium light add \$7.00 for calcium burner, 6 ft. rubber tubing and can $\frac{3}{4}$ limes. For cost of acetylene, gas mantle and other lights see price under proper heading.

The "Monarch" Lantern.

To meet the demands of the public for high grade but cheaper lantern, we are pleased to announce that we can now offer such an instrument.

Cheap in price, but not in quality.

The lamp house is large, well ventilated and is made of high grade sheet metal specially finished to prevent rusting. When packing the lantern the extension or sliding top "4" can be removed and placed inside the lamp house with the objective lens. By doing this and closing the folding bellows-front the lantern will occupy no more than many other lanterns that have a much smaller lamp house.

CONDENSING LENSES.

The condensing lenses are $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter, mounted in ventilated spun brass nickel plated case. The extension front or folding bellows are of sufficient length so that either the short or long focus lens can be used.

OBJECTIVE LENS.

The objective lens is of good quality and has rack and pinion for accurate focusing. With each lantern is furnished at the same price either a short distance, medium or long distance lens. The short distance lens will make a disc or field about half the distance from the curtain to the machine or a 9 foot field at 18 feet. The medium lens 3-10 the distance from the machine to the curtain or a 9 foot field at 30 feet. The long distance lens $\frac{1}{4}$ the distance from the curtain to the machine or a 9 foot field at 36 feet. When a full size slide is used the picture is usually about 1-10 smaller than the field. This is due to the mat around the picture being smaller than the slide. With any of these lenses the machine can be set any distance from the curtain according to the size of the picture desired. For a more detailed description of the lenses see index, special objective lenses.

THE CASTINGS.

The castings are made of the best malleable brass and therefore there is no danger of breaking while shipping. On other low-priced lanterns the castings are made of cast iron, which is easily broken. The lantern is strong, rigid and durable.

THE LIGHT.

The lamp house is large enough so any form of light can be used. With each lantern is furnished at the same price, any kind of light desired. A choice is given of electric arc, calcium or lime light, acetylene, mantle or a special made incandescent globe. For description of each light see index first part of catalogue.

THE CARRYING CASE.

This is a telescope canvas covered case provided with leather corners, strap and handle, described elsewhere as No. 2 carrying case. No. 1 carrying case in place of No. 2, $4.50 additional.

Price. Monarch single lantern with either short distance, medium or long focus "special" objective lens, double slide carrier, a choice of standard electric, No. 2 calcium, calcium king, acetylene burners or special incandescent globe and canvas covered carrying case. $ 28.00

This is known as "Monarch A" outfit.

If electricity is used on current of 110 volts or less, add $5.00 to price for rheostat, 10 ft. wire and switch.

Price. Monarch double dissolving stereopticon with two "special" objective lenses, either short distance, medium or long focus, two double dissolving slide carriers, two burners and one dissolver, either electric, calcium or acetylene and a canvas covered carrying case. $ 50.00

This is known as "Monarch B" outfit.

If electricity is used on current of 110 volts or less, add $10.00 for two standard rheostats, 2 switches and 20 ft. of wire to connect rheostats, burners and switches.

REMARKS.

When ordering one of these lanterns or outfits do not forget to state the kind of burners and size of objective lens wanted.

For size of picture made with the short distance, medium and long focus "special" objective lenses, see description under cut of "Monarch Dissolving Stereopticon."

When using a weak light, use a short distance lens; for calcium or electric light, use medium or long focus lens. If a higher grade of objective lens is wanted, in place of a special lens, deduct $4.50 for the single lantern or $9.00 for the double lantern, then add price of the other lenses as quoted in catalog.

When ordering electric lamp or burner a rheostat or resistance coil is not included. To complete the outfit would require rheostat, switch and 10 feet of flexible cable. Furnished with the Monarch lantern at price quoted for electricity is the Standard Burner and Standard Rheostat No. 1. Any other burner or rheostat can be used by paying the difference in price. Description of these articles will be found elsewhere in the catalogue. When ordering lantern with electric attachments it would be well to include in the order some carbons. The ordinary electric carbons will not give good results with a lantern or moving picture machine. With standard rheostat use the half inch. For description, size and price of the best imported carbons, see index front part of catalog. We would also suggest that you see index for "Lead Wire," which you may need.

When ordering lantern for Calcium Light, add to your order can of $\frac{3}{8}$ limes and 6 ft. of rubber tubing. For Calcium Light two tanks of gas (oxygen and hydrogen) must be used, or a portable gas making outfit.

If the lantern is ordered with acetylene burner, an acetylene generator is not included.

The Monarch Lantern is so constructed that it can be conveniently combined with a moving picture machine. Considering the material, careful construction, size of lamp house and excellent finish, the Monarch lantern is the best medium priced lantern on the market.

THE LEADER LANTERN.

If you intend purchasing a lantern, do not buy until you read description of the Leader. Could you see and compare the Leader with all other lanterns, you would say "it certainly is the leader," for it has no equal.

THE LAMP HOUSE.

The lamp house is made of aluminum and thin rolled steel. Aluminum and gold are the only metals that will not tarnish or oxidize by exposure to the air. Being light, strong, rigid and free from tarnish, it is an ideal metal for a lantern. The thin rolled steel used as a part of the lamp house is enameled, both inside and out, so it cannot rust. This is not an enamel paint, but an enamel finish that is baked or burnt in the metal, same as the steel frame of a bicycle is finished. The front part of the lamp house, where the principal heat is, has a double wall with an air chamber between. This keeps the lamp house sufficiently cool, so it will not burn the hands, should the operator happen to touch it. The lamp house is large and roomy, thoroughly ventilated, and adapted for any kind of light. Beware of a small lamp house, especially for electric light. A small lamp house gets very hot and only short carbons can be used. If you wish to use the light over an hour, it will be necessary to stop the entertainment while the carbons are being changed. Lamp house of the Leader lantern is large enough to use carbons of sufficient length to last two and a half hours.

Some people object to a large lamp house, because of the space it occupies. None of this space, however, is lost, as the lens, burners, etc., can all be packed inside the lamp house.

All parts of the lamp house are screwed and riveted together, which makes it rigid and strong. The post that supports the light can be used either center or right or left of center, and is, therefore, adapted for use of any burner or jet. The saddle that supports the post and light is provided with a long sleeve, so it will not bind on the sliding rod, and will also prevent the operator from accidentally pushing the light up against the condensing lens. The catch on outside of door has an indicator that always shows position of the hook. The oval top of lantern is in sliding groove and can be quickly taken off. When the lantern is in shipping order, this top is removed and reversed with the oval part inside the lamp house.

THE OBJECTIVE LENS.

The front of the lantern is so constructed that an objective lens of any size can be used—large barrel or small barrel, long focus or short focus. All objective lenses quoted with the Leader lantern are provided with thumb screw, rack and pinion for accurate focusing. The most popular lens used with the Leader lantern is the $\frac{1}{2}$ size large barrel best grade Bausch & Lomb.

CONDENSING LENSES.

Condensing lenses are two in number, plano-convex, $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter and are made of the best quality of French crystal glass. The lens cell for mounting is made of spun brass, nickel plated, highly polished and thoroughly ventilated. The mounting with lenses can be instantly removed for shipping or taken apart for cleaning.

VENTILATING AIR CHAMBER.

The lens holder is so constructed that there is free circulation of air between the condensing lenses. The lens cell or mounting is placed outside of the lamp house, so there is circulation of air between the light and condensing lens. There is, therefore, circulation of air on all four sides of the condensing lenses. This accomplishes three things: First, greatly increases the life of the condensing lens; second, prevents the condensing lens from steaming up or "sweating" in cold weather, and, third, permits the slide to stand longer before the light without danger of breaking. The slide when in position for projecting is very near the condensing lens and will be influenced by the heat from the lens. We do not claim that a lens or a slide will never break in the Leader lantern, but we do claim that breakage has been greatly reduced.

SLIDE CARRIER HOLDER.

When using unmounted slides it is necessary to use a slide carrier, which remains stationary in the lantern, while the slides are being changed. As the least movement of the slide holder is magnified on the screen, it is essential that the slide holder be firm and rigid. The usual means provided to accomplish this is by a spring. This serves the purpose while the spring is new, but the constant heating and cooling takes the tension out and it is then of little value. With the Leader lantern, in addition to the springs, there are two thumb screws, which hold the slide carrier as firmly in position as though it was part of the casting.

The slide carrier holder is so constructed that from the lantern, by means of a pencil or hatpin, anything in the picture can be pointed out on the curtain. This will be found a great convenience for those who stand by the lantern while describing the pictures.

THE BELLOWS.

The folding bellows are made of a material that is a great improvement on leather. The objection to leather is that it gets dry and cracks in the folds; when left folded for some time it will stick and peel off, and when very warm it gives off an unpleasant odor. To preserve it from cracking and sticking it must be frequently oiled, which makes it difficult to keep clean. The material used in manufacturing the bellows for the Leader lantern will not crack or stick and is odorless. Should you want to clean the bellows, wipe them off with a damp cloth and they will be bright and fresh as new.

QUICK ADJUSTMENT.

There are two adjusting posts in the front and two in the rear of the "Leader." By means of these the lantern can be quickly and accurately tilted at either end, throwing the light up or down, as the case may require. Frequently when the lantern is set up the table or floor is not level and the picture is not square on the curtain. With the Leader lantern all that is necessary is to tilt the lantern to one side, until the picture is straight and square with the curtain, and then make the side posts firm with the set screws. With other lanterns, even though they are attached to a tilting board, it is necessary to use blocks and wedges to "square up" the picture on the curtain. A tilting board consists of two boards hinged at one end and provided at the other end with large thumb screws or some other device for raising the front end of the lantern. There are, however, no means of tilting the entire board to "square up" the picture on the curtain. For a lantern a tilting board is not necessary, as you must have a table or stand to set the machine on, even though a tilting board is used. It adds expense and weight to an outfit, and is inconvenient to carry. With a Leader lantern it is not necessary to prop it up with blocks or books or wedges, or to use a tilting board. The four posts give quick and accurate adjustment and the lantern always stands square, level and rigid.

WEIGHT AND SIZE.

Weight of the Leader lantern without lenses is about eight pounds. Size, when packed, ready for shipment, is 10½ inches high, 7 inches wide and 17 inches long. The top or extension part of the lamp house can be quickly removed and with the objective lens packed inside the main part of the lamp house. There is no lantern of the same size, when in use, that is so compact for shipment and so light in weight.

POINTS OF SUPERIORITY.

The "Leader" has many improvements or points of advantage over any other lantern.

Many claim their lantern is "the best lantern made," but do not tell you why. We claim the "Leader" leads them all, and we will tell you why.

First—Lighter and stronger, being made of aluminum and sheet steel, and all parts screwed or riveted together, making it light and rigid.

Second—The "adapter" for objective lens, by which either a large or small barrel lens can be attached.

Third—Ventilating air chamber, between the light and condensing lens.

Fourth—Less danger of breaking the slides by heat.

Fifth—Raising or tilting either the front or rear end of the lantern for adjusting the light on the screen.

Sixth—A set screw, in place of a spring, for holding the slide carrier firmly in position.

Seventh—The lamp house, both inside and out, is enameled and baked to a hard finish. This not only gives fine finish, but prevents rusting.

Eighth—The bellows are made of new material which does not stick, crack nor wear rough like leather. When wiped off with a damp cloth, it always looks bright and new.

Ninth—The slide carrier holder is so constructed that from the machine anything in the picture can be pointed out on the curtain.

Tenth—Style and appearance. The attractive outline of the "Leader"—the satin finished aluminum frame, the highly polished nickel plated trimmings, the dark finish of part of the lamp house, and the rich maroon color of the bellows—gives this lantern a style and appearance superior to any other on the market.

REMARKS.

Any size or any focus lens can be used with the Leader lantern. The half size is the one most in general use, and it is for this reason we selected it in price quoted, simply as an illustration. If any other size or focus lens is desired, add or deduct the difference in price of the lenses. The same might be said of the light. We would not, however, advise using a cheaper lens or poorer light on so good a lantern as the Leader.

The $\frac{1}{2}$ size objective lens quoted with Leader B is the best Bausch & Lomb large barrel objective, bearing their name and serial number. By removing the back combination two different size pictures can be made without changing position of the machine. Some of these points of superiority, to the amateur, may seem like little things, but it is the "little things that make perfection"—and it is perfection that has made the Leader lantern "the leader."

THE "LEADER" STEREOPTICON.

(See description of single "Leader" Lantern. The Dotted lines and set Screws "D" show how either end of the Lantern may be elevated or "tilted.")

This consists of two "Leader" Lanterns mounted and arranged for dissolving views. All the castings being made of aluminum and all the parts being screwed together make the lantern very light, strong and rigid.

The sliding rods, the spun brass lens mounting, and all the brass trimmings are nickel plated and highly polished. The aluminum is given what is termed the "satin" finish, a new, beautiful, rich finish that will never tarnish and never grow old. The thin rolled sheet steel used in partial construction of the lamp house, has a Russian black finish. The bellows are of a rich maroon color and the projecting lenses are finished in the natural brass, highly polished and lacquered. This combination of color and finish, the decorating on the aluminum castings and the general appearance of the stereopticon, is not only artistic and pleasing, but gives the impression of lightness, strength and durability. See description of single "Leader" lantern.

The "Leader" Stereopticon (double dissolving lantern) consists of two complete lanterns that, when desired, can be made into two separate lanterns. This cannot be said of all double lanterns, for the top lantern of many makes is not supplied with the necessary supports and adjustments, so it can be used independent of the lower lantern.

An important point in a double lantern is that the top lantern should be firm and rigid. With the Leader dissolving stereopticon the top lantern is supported at either end and in the center. There are two thumb set screws at each end of the lantern which, when tightened, bind the two lanterns rigidly together. In other dissolving stereopticons, the top lantern is supported only in two places—usually the front and center but they are not provided with set screws at both ends.

REGISTERING THE FIELDS OR SLIDES.

In a double dissolving lantern the fields or pictures from each projecting lens should be the same size and cover the same space on the curtain. A new device of our own is provided by which this is quickly and accurately accomplished.

In order to accurately register the fields there must be a side adjustment as well as a tilting or "up and down" adjustment.

The side adjustment is usually accomplished by moving the slide carriers from side to side and the "up and down" adjustment by tilting the top lantern. The Leader double lantern is not only provided with these adjustments, but with a special side adjusting screw B and "up and down" adjusting screw C. By means of these screws a quick and more accurate register of the field can be obtained, than is possible by the old way. In shipping a double lantern they frequently get sprung or twisted a little so they are not in perfect lineament. By means of side adjustment screw B this defect can be quickly remedied.

When a lantern is set up the bellows is drawn out far enough to obtain an approximate focus, but to obtain an accurate focus, the thumb screw on the objective lens is used. An accurate focus could probably be obtained without using the thumb screw on the objective lens, but it would require much more time and would be very inconvenient. Now, the adjusting screws, B and C, on the double leader lantern, serve the same purpose and accomplish the same result that the thumb screw does on the objective lens; that is, they give an accurate (and quick) registration of the two fields.
